15 Servicemen Killed In Ship Incident

Washington (UPI) — The Pentagon Tuesday announced final casualty figures for the Battle of Koh Tang, listing 15 servicemen killed, 3 missing and 50 wounded in action, two of them in serious condition.

Altogether, about 210 Marines were engaged in combat on the island in the operation to recover the merchant ship Mayaguez and its crew from the Cambodians, and a few dozen airmen came under fire while flying the helicopters that carried the Marines.

Asked if anyone had seen the bodies of the three missing Marines, Pentagon spokesman Joseph Laitin said, "Details are still a little sketchy on that."

But a little later he said, "According to eyewitness accounts there is little likelihood that they are alive." He declined under questioning to describe the eyewitness accounts.

Asked if the missing men might have been taken captive, Laitin said, "I think there is very little likelihood of that — certainly with two and probably with the third."

The White House, meantime, said President Ford planned to express personal condolences in letters to families of the men killed in the operation.

Of the dead, 13 were killed in an Air Force helicopter that crashed 100 feet off Koh Tang. One was an Air Force crewman on a helicopter trying to get away from the island when it was hit and went down more than two miles out at sea. The 15th was a Marine killed on the island. (The names of the dead are on Page 3.)

Although the battle ended Thursday morning Washington time, it took 4½ days for the Pentagon to be able to determine just how many men had been lost.

On Monday the Pentagon put the killed and missing at 21. Laitin said that had been cut to 18 because there was some double counting.

Pentagon sources said that, for example, both the Navy and Marine Corps separately reported two Navy medics accompanying the Marines as dead.

The White House earlier indicated dissatisfaction with the long count, and a Marine source said, "Some heads are about to roll over this."

Pentagon officials said they had been confused because the Marines were scattered immediately after the battle to at least three different ships and three different countries.

Laitn said none of the bodies of the dead had been recovered.

The breakdown showed 11 Marines, two airmen and two Navy hospitalmen killed; three Marines missing, and 41 Marines, seven airmen and two sailors wounded.

One Marine and one airman were listed in serious condition "but both are stable and expected to recover," Laitin said.

Many of the reports on the fighting have been garbled and confused, and Laitin further changed the peiture Tuesday.

Since the close of battle, the Pentagon had reported that all men aboard the helicopter that crashed just off the island had been rescued, whereas the Tuesday report showed half these men had been killed.

As recently as Monday, the Pentagon thought the helicopter that went down more than two miles from the island had been filled with Marines and that half the men were missing. Only Tuesday was it learned that the helicopter had only its four-man Air Force crew aboard.

Ratings Salvation Of 'Free Screen'

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

Governments have a way of strangling and suffocating a creative movie system, Jack Valenti said.

That was one of the reasons why Valenti, the president of the Motion Picture Association of America and the Association of Motion Picture and Television Producers, invented the voluntary movie rating system in 1968.

In Lincoln Tuesday at the invitation of the Nebraska Association of Theatre Owners, Valenti said the ratings make for a "truly free screen."

"I thought the screen should be free as long as the public had some warning."

So he devised the rating system to categorize the content of films. The objective of the rating system is to give advance information to parents.

'Little Criticism'

"To my surprise and delight there has been very little overt public criticism." He said adverse rumblings come from within the industry, especially from producers and directors.

But he maintains that "if you've got a picture people want to see, no rating will hurt it; if you've got a picture no one wants to see, no rating will help it."

In the past the public irritant has not been the ratings, he said, but the "trailers" or movie previews. Movie companies must now make two previews — a red-banded one which may accompany "R" and "X" showings and a green-banded "sanitized" version for general viewership.

Avoids Rating

Valenti said he deliberately avoids having anything to do with the rating of films. Instead, he serves as a shield protecting the eight-person rating board from any political or economic pressures that might influence their decisions.

There has never been any "malfeasance, hanky-panky or dishonesty" in the way ratings are given, Valenti insisted.

Some 520 films were rated last year, 80% of which fell into the PG (parental guidance) or R (restricted) ratings.

Since the beginning of the rating system, 61 film ratings have been appealed and 18 won changes.

1974 'Banner Year'

Valenti described 1974 as a "banner year" for the movie industry. Last year some 28 pictures grossed more than $10 million each for the producers.

GOVERNMENT . . . said capable of strangling movies.

He attributed the success not so much to the recession, but to the large number of "audience-attractive" films available to movie-goers.

The formula for these successful films is sheer entertainment; they're not instructive nor politicizing, he said.

Valenti admitted that TV used to hurt the motion picture industry. But not any more. "People want more than what they get on their TV screen," he said. So they come to the movies for the epic quality — "the great fidelity of sound and sight and voice and movement."

'Shoot Off Cannon'

Monday night football, however, is a hard performance to beat. "You can shoot a cannon off in a movie theater (on Monday nights) and not hurt anybody," Valenti joked.

He defended movies as the cheapest form of spectator entertainment in the country.

That Hollywood is losing that "ineffable glamor of the glory days" of the 1930's and 1940's was confirmed by the movie executive.

No Going Back

He said there's no going back to those days when movies were the only form of entertainment and all screen stars were under contract to studios.

Sports stars, he said, are upstaging the Hollywood crew.

Although he's personally not bothered by any of the sex, violence or language in today's films, he says he's very strict about what's good viewing for his 11, 9, and 7-year-old children.

Legislators Flare Up At Line Veto By Exon

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Long on the receiving end, the Legislature Tuesday unloaded all its pent-up fury on Gov. J. James Exon.

Exon's $389,897 line item veto reduction in budget funds to operate the legislative branch of state government triggered the explosion.

When it was over, senators had overridden the veto on a 41-4 vote and subjected the governor to the toughest verbal rebukes he has ever encountered on the legislative floor.

Earlier in the day, lawmakers produced a more historic reversal, striking down Exon's veto of legislation directing the construction of two new state prisons to replace the Men's Reformatory. (See story on Page 14.)

Taken together, the two actions tended to move the Legislature from a defensive position to the offensive in what has become an escalating war with the governor.

Yet to come are the showdown battles over the size of the state budget and the amount of state aid to schools.

Exon's veto reduction of legislative funding was "the most petty, small-minded, jackass-ish thing I've seen," Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha declared.

'Personal Affront'

"A personal affront to the Legislature," Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue said.

"Repugnant, disgusting and offensive," Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh insisted.

"Irresponsible," Sen. Harold Simpson of Lincoln said.

DeCamp said the veto message represented "Big Jim's official announcement (of candidacy) for the United States Senate."

The governor, Lewis suggested, is "gearing up for a campaign" and believes "the popular thing to do is to beat the Legislature."

Exon has "gone totally haywire in his attempt to seek higher office," Chambers declared

Tuesday's blast at the governor appeared to represent the legislative response to recent Exon statements in Lincoln and Omaha sharply criticizing the Unicameral's spending plans

"In a time of economic uncertainty in this state and when many Nebraskans are making economic sacrifices, the Legislature should set an example of fiscal restraint," the governor said in his veto message.

At issue was LB606, the first of a series of appropriations bills which will undergo reductions by Exon.

$2.7 Million Total

The bill would fund legislative operations for fiscal 1975-76 with $2.7 million in state tax funds.

That, Exon said, is $419,897 higher than his budget recommendation, and would provide the Legislature with an 18% budgetary increase.

A $2.3 million total would "more than satisfy your needs," he wrote.

Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha, chairman of the Legislative Council's executive board, said the $2.7 million figure represents "a very modest budget" for legislative operations.

Legislature stories on Pages 13-16

Lewis said the governor "rides in a big black car" and operates out of "a whole suite of offices," with a substantial travel budget. Perhaps executive budget figures should be reduced, he suggested.

Having scorned the Legislature, Chambers said, Exon is probably "over there (in his office) rolling on the floor with laughter."

Appropriations Chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings, whose committee accepted the $2.7 million figure, said he would refuse to vote to override any appropriations vetoes until he has had more time to study the figures.

On the roll call vote, Marvel voted no. He was joined by Sens. James Dickinson of Millard, Tom Kennedy of Newman Grove and Otho Kime of Valentine.

House OKs $32 Billion Arms Bill Intact

Washington (UPI) — Mindful of claims America's military resolve is doubted in some quarters, the House Tuesday rejected all efforts to cut the Pentagon's $32 billion weapons procurement bill and approved it intact.

In two days of voting, the House turned back successive efforts to trim back the B1 bomber program and the Trident submarine program, and to eliminate the A10 fighter plane project.

A final effort to slice $1.9 billion from the measure, a proposal that would have left it to the Defense Department to designate programs to be cut back, was easily beaten 216-183.

The giant authorization bill, covering a 15-month period beginning July 1, was sent to the Senate on a roll call vote of 333-63. The Senate's own $30.3 billion version is to be debated there later in the week, with a final vote probably coming after the Memorial Day recess which ends June 2.

Among other amendments rejected by the House was one to cut back U.S. troops stationed abroad by 70,000 persons. It was defeated 311-95.

The vote coincided with urgings from the Senate Armed Services Committee that no major deployment of American servicemen be made overseas until the nation can resolve the uncertainty that resulted from the loss of South Vietnam.

But Rep. Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif., said the reduction in forces from the estimated 416,000 troops abroad would have little if any effect on the nation's defenses and that Congress, not the Pentagon, should dictate U.S. military posture in foreign nations.

Dellums said the Pentagon could decide where to make the cuts, but he suggested they could come in Thailand, Japan, South Korea, Philippines, Taiwan, Bermuda, Cuba and Morocco. He said none should come in Europe.

Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, a senior member of the House International Relations Committee, said, "This is the wrong month of the wrong year of the wrong century to offer such an amendment. In the wake of Vietnam, Europe is jittery about what the purposes of the United States may be."

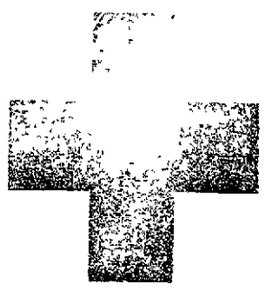

House Democratic leader Thomas P. O'Neill praised Dellums "for your sincerity," but he said, "Your amendment comes at the wrong time."

The defeat of the troop-cut proposal was one in a series of defeats for Pentagon critics in their effort to cut the big authorization measure.

Amendments aimed at specific weapons programs were beaten down in voting that started Monday and continued Tuesday, and the criticics rallied behind a broad cut of nearly $2 billion.

This approach called for an overall $1.9 billion reduction from the committee's $32 billion level, but left it to the Pentagon to decide where the reductions would be made.

The bill, already cut $3.7 billion by the House Armed Services Committee from the $35.7 billion the Pentagon requested, would authorize weapons procurement, research and development over a 15-month period.

Ambulance Firms Want County Hike

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

The two local ambulance companies want the Lancaster County Welfare Department to pay the same rate that everyone else does.

"We're losing $10 to $20 every time we make a call," Marty Miller, co-owner of Eastern Ambulance Service, told the county commissioners, sitting as the Welfare Board, Tuesday.

The companies are seeking increases ranging between $11 and $15 a call, depending on the time of day and type of service.

Rates Compared

The welfare department is currently paying a flat rate of $30 for daytime calls and $38 for night calls, while the normal rates for the two companies range from $41 for a daytime, non-emergency call to more than $50 for night emergency service.

Higher overhead costs, including a 20-cent a gallon gasoline increase, and lower speed limits have raised the ambulance service costs, while the welfare rates have remained the same.

Miller said his operation made $57 before taxes last year. The Shurtleff Ambulance Co. lost about $11,800 last year, according to manager Don O'Meara.

Cut In Service?

And Miller hinted that the ambulance companies might consider reducing service as a last resort to the price squeeze.

Though the ambulance firms are required by city ordinance to answer all calls in the city, Miller said the companies would be better off financially "to refuse long distance calls."

Contributing to the money losing problem is the long delay between the ambulance run and payment by the state or federal government for welfare clients.

Insurance carriers generally pay within two weeks, while Medicare payments take from 60 to 100 days and state welfare payments from one to three months, said Miller. Some payments have been delayed up to two years, he said.

Though not a county responsibility, the two ambulance representatives also mentioned the long delayed city subsidy.

The ambulance service rates have been set by a council ordinance, and the companies have been waiting for more than a year for a promised city subsidy, the two men said.

"The city has agreed to one (a subsidy), but that's as far as it went. We don't know when we will get it or how much it will be," said O'Meara.

The board referred the ambulance rate increase to the welfare department for further study.

Business Profits Take 22% Dive

Washington (UPI) — Business profits plummeted a record 22% in early 1975 and economic output was somewhat worse than originally estimated as the economy continue to wallow in the depths of recession, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday.

However, a government economist said the pessimistic figures were influenced by a one-time massive sell-off of business inventories that did not preclude hopes for an economic upswing later this year.

In separate reports, the department said after-tax profits of U.S. corporations fell $17.7 billion, or 22%, in the first three months of the year to $61.8 billion. Most types of businesses, with the exceptions of banks and other financial institutions, reported losses in the first quarter.

Revising estimates made last month, the department also said the growth rate of the economy fell at an 11.3% seasonally adjusted annual pace between January and March.

That's the sharpest fall-off of the 15-month recession and the steepest quarterly decline in output since the government began collecting the statistics in 1947.

Last month, in a preliminary report that lacked some key statistics, the department estimated the first quarter drop in "real" gross national product at 10.4%.

GNP is the most comprehensive gauge of the economy's health and James L. Pate, the department's chief economist, said he saw "very little significance" in the downward revision. "I don't believe it alters the outlook at all."

Pate has been among the more optimistic forecasters, suggesting that the recession is already bottoming out and that the current April-June quarter could possibly show a positive growth rate.

"I would stick to that forecast," Pate said.

Although the first quarter inflation rate was a little worse than originally estimated — 8.5% instead of 8% — the rate of price change was still the lowest since the third quarter of 1973. Progress on the inflation front has been one of the few bright lights in the current economic picture.

"Real" GNP is the term economists use to designate the dollar value of all goods and services produced by the economy with an adjustment to eliminate the effects of inflation. By this measure, output has fallen for the past five quarters.

But the rate of economic decline is now so steep that GNP is falling even on a non-price-adjusted basis. When figured in 1975 dollars, output in the first quarter fell 3.8%, the first such drop since the fourth quarter of 1960.

In dollar terms, overall GNP dropped $13.8 billion to an annual rate of $1,417.1 billion ($1.4 trillion).

Insurance carriers generally pay within two weeks, while Medicare payments take from 60 to 100 days and state welfare payments from one to three months, said Miller. Some payments have been delayed up to two years, he said.

Though not a county responsibility, the two ambulance representatives also mentioned the long delayed city subsidy.

The ambulance service rates have been set by a council ordinance, and the companies have been waiting for more than a year for a promised city subsidy, the two men said.

"The city has agreed to one (a subsidy), but that's as far as it went. We don't know when we will get it or how much it will be," said O'Meara.

The board referred the ambulance rate increase to the welfare department for further study.

Business Profits Take 22% Dive

Washington (UPI) — Business profits plummeted a record 22% in early 1975 and economic output was somewhat worse than originally estimated as the economy continue to wallow in the depths of recession, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday.

However, a government economist said the pessimistic figures were influenced by a one-time massive sell-off of business inventories that did not preclude hopes for an economic upswing later this year.

In separate reports, the department said after-tax profits of U.S. corporations fell $17.7 billion, or 22%, in the first three months of the year to $61.8 billion. Most types of businesses, with the exceptions of banks and other financial institutions, reported losses in the first quarter.

Revising estimates made last month, the department also said the growth rate of the economy fell at an 11.3% seasonally adjusted annual pace between January and March.

That's the sharpest fall-off of the 15-month recession and the steepest quarterly decline in output since the government began collecting the statistics in 1947.

Last month, in a preliminary report that lacked some key statistics, the department estimated the first quarter drop in "real" gross national product at 10.4%.

GNP is the most comprehensive gauge of the economy's health and James L. Pate, the department's chief economist, said he saw "very little significance" in the downward revision. "I don't believe it alters the outlook at all."

Pate has been among the more optimistic forecasters, suggesting that the recession is already bottoming out and that the current April-June quarter could possibly show a positive growth rate.

"I would stick to that forecast," Pate said.

Although the first quarter inflation rate was a little worse than originally estimated — 8.5% instead of 8% — the rate of price change was still the lowest since the third quarter of 1973. Progress on the inflation front has been one of the few bright lights in the current economic picture.

"Real" GNP is the term economists use to designate the dollar value of all goods and services produced by the economy with an adjustment to eliminate the effects of inflation. By this measure, output has fallen for the past five quarters.

But the rate of economic decline is now so steep that GNP is falling even on a non-price-adjusted basis. When figured in 1975 dollars, output in the first quarter fell 3.8%, the first such drop since the fourth quarter of 1960.

In dollar terms, overall GNP dropped $13.8 billion to an annual rate of $1,417.1 billion ($1.4 trillion).

Some Worry, Most Don't

Nebraska City is getting a new coal-burning power plant — a fact which most residents greet with favor despite worries of some rural residents about a new highway, possible pollution and lost farmland.

Pathet Lao's Arrival Celebrated

By The Associated Press

The Communist-led Pathet Lao rolled into the former rightist stronghold of Savannakhet on Tuesday, setting off a joyful celebration that was joined in by opposing troops. A dozen Americans and six other foreigners held by Laotian students in the Mekong River city were reported safe and well but their future was uncertain.

Associated Press Correspondent George Esper reported from neighboring South Vietnam that there is still no sign of a civilian government for Saigon three weeks after Communist forces took over. He said North Vietnamese troops hold the strategic positions.

In another Asian development, the Chinese news agency Hsinhua reported that two top Burmese Communist party leaders have died fighting government troops near Burma's frontier with China but said the Rangoon military regime's success was only "temporary and partial."

The takeover of Savannakhet, a provincial capital of 200,000 on Laos' border with Thailand, came after two weeks of political upheaval in which the right-wing faction of the Laos coalition government surrendered political power to the Pathet Lao.

Neutralist Premier Souvanna Phouma has long tried to balance the opposing forces, but observers believe the entire country will fall to the Pathet Lao, which was reported moving into Pakse, another town in southeast Laos.

Sanford Stone, 58, U.S. aid coordinator for the area, told a newsman all the Westerners in Savannakhet were safe despite radio reports received earlier by the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane that said two Americans had been led from their homes by a crowd.

"We are just fine," said Stone. "We are confined to our houses, but we have food which came on a courier flight Monday. We have never been asked to leave and we have never been threatened."

However, it was unclear what the future held for the Americans and six other foreigners whose movements were confined after left-wing students sacked the compound of the Agency for International Development last Wednesday.

The U.S. Embassy in Vientiane protested for the third time to the Laotian Foreign Ministry, but U.S. officials said there were no plans to try to rescue the Americans.

Chen Samaoune, the flower-bedecked Pathet Lao commander, rode up to the provincial governor's office in Savannakhet atop a tank. Gov. Boun Sayavong met him and declared: "We have been fighting for more than 30 years. Now peace has come. The people of Savannakhet province have spoken."

"We now have unity among our people," replied the smiling Chen.

Thousands of students and other residents, cheering and waving flags, greeted the Pathet Lao. Students rode trucks and motorcyles to Seno, 19 miles away, to greet the approaching Pathet Lao vehicles.

Rightist troops, who had waited hours for the column at a military police outpost, also joined the parade. As the combined column moved nearer to town, crowds estimated at more than 10,000 lined the main road to cheer.

A State Department official said in Washington the United States plan to reduce its presence in Laos but said he did not know when or how many would leave. About 1,000 Americans remain in Laos, of which 350 work for the U.S. government.

In other Southeast Asian developments:

— North Vietnam criticized Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew for saying the future looked gloomier following the Communist takeover in Vietnam.

— Radio Hanoi said North Vietnam has launched "foodstuffs savings program 1975" because of growing needs in North and South Vietnam.

— President Ferdinand E. Marcos of the Philippines ordered "substantial" spending to speed the local manufacture of small arms, ammunition and combat rations under a self-reliance defense program, a presidential spokesman said.

New York Times News Summary

Dirigible Assembled

The bones of what might be a new era of transportation are being put together in an open field in arid farmland about 40 miles southeast of Phoenix, Ariz., as a father-son team prepare to build and fly the first new dirigible the world has seen in over 40 years.

Ford Asked To Stay Away

Madrid (London Times) — The Democratic junta, a loose illegal association of the Spanish left wing, appealed to U.S. ambassador Wells Stabler in Madrid Tuesday to advise President Ford to call off his planned visit to Spain. A note said Ford's visit at the end of this month "would help to prolong the existence of a dictatorial regime, which can no longer stand alone by itself," and "would imply approval of the repressive acts in the Basque Country."

Drastic Changes Urged

United Nations — An international panel has unanimously recommended drastic changes in the United Nations structure for dealing with economic issues. The first major attempt at revision in U.N. history would seek increased collaboration between rich and poor countries. Instead of confrontations and voting showdowns in which developing third world countries easily outnumber the industrial powers, there would be an intricate process of negotiating disputes to reach consensus.

Hall Of Fame Picks Reston

New York — James Reston, columnist and former vice president of The New York Times, is one of five journalists newly elected to the Hall of Fame of the Washington professional chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi.

Gas Tax Hike Vote Put Off

Washington — The House Democratic leadership, facing solid Republican opposition and deep divisions among Democratic members, postponed indefinitely the vote on legislation to raise the federal gasoline tax and take other steps to conserve energy. It appeared that a vote this week would have killed the measure. The delay raised the possibility that President Ford would no longer delay his plan to add $1 a barrel to the import fee on petroleum. He could act before the House returns June 2 from the Memorial Day recess.

Oil Prices To Be Upped

Riyadh, Saudi Arabia — Substantial agreement has been reached between oil producers for a small but significant price increase in oil prices next month to offset the decline in value of the United States dollar, Saudi Arabian sources reported.

Enterprise Survives In Hanoi

By ALMA DE LUCE
Associated Press Writer

Free enterprise survives in Hanoi in family-run small service shops and tiny retail stores. They line streets of two-story buildings built by the French in colonial times.

Doors are opened for business before 7 a.m., and the proprietors keep them open until late evening, often until 9 p. m. A single room with sidewalk frontage serves both as a shop and a home. Everybody in the family helps out as needed.

During 20 years of war such businesses barely survived. Now they are beginning to prosper again.

Young entrepreneurs set up businesses on street corners and curbstones. Bowls of hot noodles and chicken and tiny cups of tea are served to hungry customers under a sidewalk shelter. Street markets offer a wide variety of goods, from canaries in a cage to pungent spices to a morning's catch of fish from the Red River.

Wheat Outlook Updated

Washington (AP) — Although the 1975 winter wheat crop is maturing later than normal in most states, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday that a record 1.62 billion bushels still are expected to be harvested.

The Outlook and Situation Board said over-all wheat production is expected to be 2.1 billion bushels both of winter and spring wheat.

The board also continued to project demand from foreign customers at more than 1 billion bushels.

The department's weather and crop bulletin for the week ending last Friday said unseasonably cool temperatures and rain on the southern Great Plains have slowed the wheat harvest in Texas and limited crop development in Oklahoma and Kansas.

In other key states, the crop also was markedly behind normal schedules.

But, the bulletin said, favorable weather for corn farmers has meant that by last Friday 67 per cent of the nation's intended corn acreage was planted, ahead of the 64 per cent mark of last year and the usual 60 per cent.

Corn planting was progressing at above-average rates in Illinois, Iowa, Ohio, Indiana and Kansas, with only Minnesota and South Dakota lagging behind, the bulletin said. Progress in the south Atlantic states was below the normal pace.

The wheat situation summary predicted a harvest-time price of $3 a bushel for new wheat — 15 cents a bushel below the USDA estimate earlier this month.

It also estimated carryover stocks of 235 million bushels, the lowest in more than 25 years.

Kissinger, Gromyko Make 'Progress'

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko have agreed to work out a cooperative approach to holding a Middle East peace conference in Geneva, a high U.S. official said Tuesday.

He said the two ministers made "real progress" during two days of meetings in Vienna, Austria, toward agreement on the timing and manner of convening a new Geneva conference.

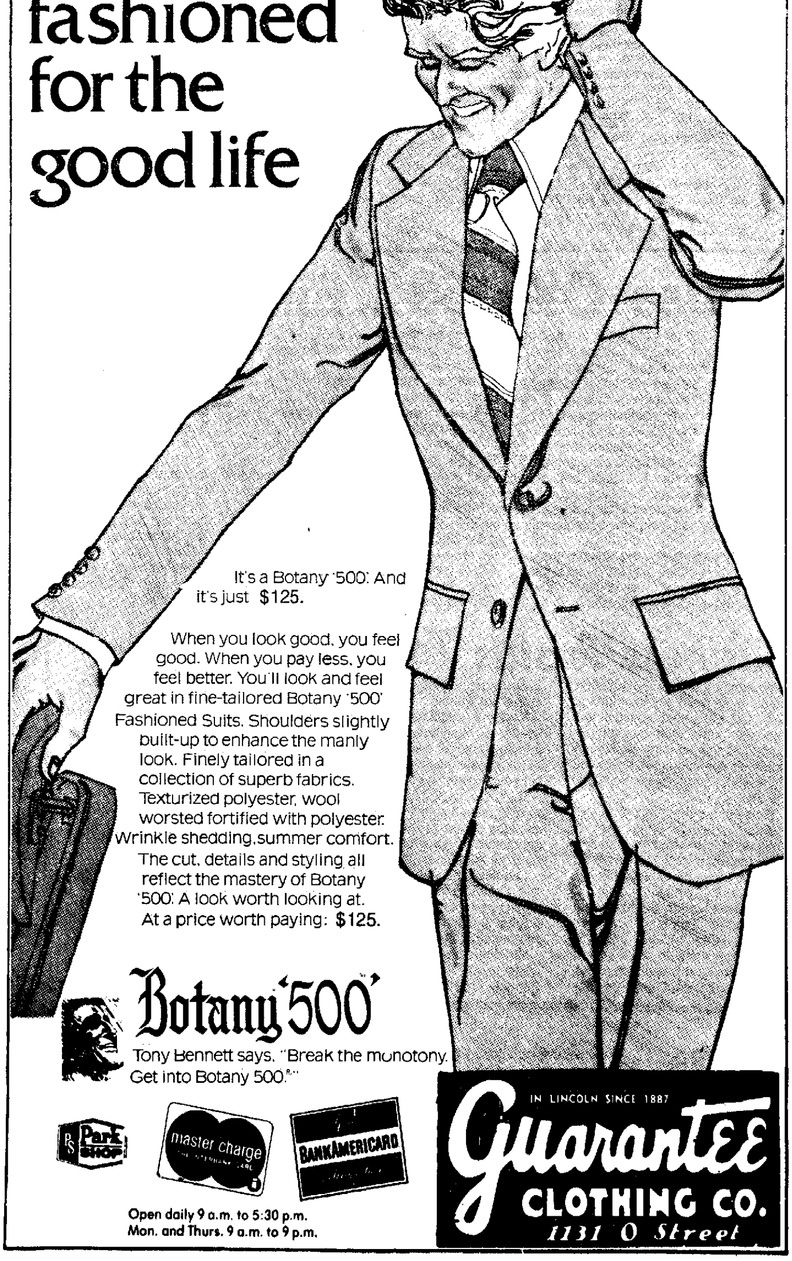

The American official, speaking to newsmen on Kissinger's plane during the flight from Vienna to Bonn, West Germany, said no decision was reached on a specific date for the conference but it would likely be held in August or early September.

He noted that Kissinger had previously said it would be very dangerous to reconvene a Geneva meeting without the United States and the Soviet Union sharing views on what would happen.

It was learned the new meeting will probably take place in Europe sometime during the second half of July and will deal primarily with the Middle East. Kissinger reportedly asked for the additional talks.

The communique said only that the Vienna meetings "proceeded in a constructive spirit."

Captors Said Ragged Bunch

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A crewman said Tuesday the merchant ship Mayaguez was captured by a ragged bunch of young Cambodians in a "small American-made gunboat, American-armed with .50-caliber machine guns and 80mm mortars."

"I saw a lot of American guns," added 52-year-old messman William F. Bellinger, one of 10 Mayaguez crew members flown here Tuesday.

The Mayaguez and its 39-man crew were seized in the Gulf of Thailand May 12. The crew was released three days later when U.S. Marines launched an assault.

Bellinger, of Washington, D.C., said the crew observed American aircraft trying to keep Cambodians from removing crewmen from the seized ship.

"We were watching them (American aircraft) firing rockets and bombs and heavy caliber guns. We knew our flyboys wouldn't hit us," he said. "But that (tear) gassing attack surprised us."

"I lost my teeth over the side, gagging and coughing," the burly, gray-haired seaman laughed. "People used to call me the toothless tiger because I didn't wear my false teeth all the time. I'm really toothless now."

Bellinger said the crew was kept in captivity on a captured Thai fishing vessel until the last night when they slept on bamboo mats in a fishing village.

"About 150 or 200 men were armed with a combination of foreign and American weapons — M14s, M16s and our rocket launchers," he said noting that some Cambodians also toted American .45-caliber pistols and Russian and Chinese automatic weapons and mortars.

When told about reports that one of the Cambodian vessels had sailed to Thailand seeking asylum, Bellinger said, "That doesn't surprise me.

"These people were insurgents, not trained military personnel. They looked more like pirates than soldiers. They were quite young.

"The treatment was better than I expected," he said. "What food they prepared we ate first and they ate what was left."

The ship's 52-year-old cook, Angel Rios, said the Cambodians' treatment "was in between. Not good. Not bad."

"The soldiers were all children, most all young, and girls," he said. "They tried to scare us with bombs (hand grenades) on their clothes. These kids over there fighting have no shoes and no clothes."

While pushing through a throng of reporters at San Francisco International Airport, the diminutive cook declared, "I was proud to show the world that the United States for 39 or 40 men was ready for war."

Brother, Sister Convinced Father Is Mayageuz Captain

Terra Linda, Calif. (UPI) — A brother and sister are convinced from newspaper and television coverage that Capt. Charles T. Miller of the Mayaguez is the seagoing father they have not seen in 23 years.

"The last time I saw him," Mrs. Cheryl Miller Pedersen, 28, said Tuesday, "I was 5 years old. He took my brother and me to a store and let us pick out anything we wanted.

"I picked a doll buggy, and my brother chose a clock radio."

The brother, James T. Miller, 34, an electrician, now lives with his two young children next door to Mrs. Pedersen and her four children.

"The children are very excited about 'Grandpa Charlie,' " Mrs. Pedersen said. "They are telling everyone about him. We would like him to know his grandchildren."

Mrs. Pedersen's father and mother were divorced when the daughter was a baby. After a few years, she said the father stopped visiting, and his two children always wondered what happened to him. Much later, the son wrote unsuccessfully to steamship lines trying to track the father down.

From news accounts of the Mayaguez, the son concluded the captain's name and age were right, he recognized the voice on television, and said, "He looks older but it's him. That's his nose."

The son's mother, Millicent Miller, said she was "very surprised," but that actually she saw Capt. Miller when the son entered service to give him the news.

She said there had been a dispute over child support, and he drifted away and "never got in touch. I didn't bother, either."

Young Miller, and Mrs. Pedersen, fired off a letter to Miller aboard the Mayaguez, now headed for Hong Kong, inviting him to visit them and the grandchildren he has never seen.

Mrs. Pedersen understands that the captain has six months to complete on his present cruise, and "that means he might come just before Christmas."

Cambodian Defectors Deny Seizing Mayaguez

Bangkok (UPI) — A Cambodian gunboat whose crew first claimed and then denied involvement in the seizure of the U.S. cargo ship Mayaguez has sought refuge in Thailand, government sources said Tuesday.

The gunboat appeared suddenly last Friday at the port of Sattahip, about 100 miles south of here, waving a white flag, the sources said.

A Thai naval boarding party interrogated the 10 crew members, who claimed they had taken part in the capture of the Mayaguez off the Cambodian coast, the sources said.

Later, however, the Cambodians changed their story and said they had not. The gunboat docked for several hours before pulling away again and anchoring offshore.

The appearance of the gunboat apparently embarrassed the Thai government, which is seeking closer ties with the Communist regimes in Cambodia and South Vietnam. Diplomatic observers said the changes for improved relations would suffer if Thailand should decide to grant asylum to the Cambodian defectors.

Captors Said Ragged Bunch

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A crewman said Tuesday the merchant ship Mayaguez was captured by a ragged bunch of young Cambodians in a "small American-made gunboat, American-armed with .50-caliber machine guns and 80mm mortars."

"I saw a lot of American guns," added 52-year-old messman William F. Bellinger, one of 10 Mayaguez crew members flown here Tuesday.

The Mayaguez and its 39-man crew were seized in the Gulf of Thailand May 12. The crew was released three days later when U.S. Marines launched an assault.

Bellinger, of Washington, D.C., said the crew observed American aircraft trying to keep Cambodians from removing crewmen from the seized ship.

"We were watching them (American aircraft) firing rockets and bombs and heavy caliber guns. We knew our flyboys wouldn't hit us," he said. "But that (tear) gassing attack surprised us."

"I lost my teeth over the side, gagging and coughing," the burly, gray-haired seaman laughed. "People used to call me the toothless tiger because I didn't wear my false teeth all the time. I'm really toothless now."

Bellinger said the crew was kept in captivity on a captured Thai fishing vessel until the last night when they slept on bamboo mats in a fishing village.

"About 150 or 200 men were armed with a combination of foreign and American weapons — M14s, M16s and our rocket launchers," he said noting that some Cambodians also toted American .45-caliber pistols and Russian and Chinese automatic weapons and mortars.

When told about reports that one of the Cambodian vessels had sailed to Thailand seeking asylum, Bellinger said, "That doesn't surprise me.

"These people were insurgents, not trained military personnel. They looked more like pirates than soldiers. They were quite young.

"The treatment was better than I expected," he said. "What food they prepared we ate first and they ate what was left."

The ship's 52-year-old cook, Angel Rios, said the Cambodians' treatment "was in between. Not good. Not bad."

"The soldiers were all children, most all young, and girls," he said. "They tried to scare us with bombs (hand grenades) on their clothes. These kids over there fighting have no shoes and no clothes."

While pushing through a throng of reporters at San Francisco International Airport, the diminutive cook declared, "I was proud to show the world that the United States for 39 or 40 men was ready for war."

Brother, Sister Convinced Father Is Mayageuz Captain

Terra Linda, Calif. (UPI) — A brother and sister are convinced from newspaper and television coverage that Capt. Charles T. Miller of the Mayaguez is the seagoing father they have not seen in 23 years.

"The last time I saw him," Mrs. Cheryl Miller Pedersen, 28, said Tuesday, "I was 5 years old. He took my brother and me to a store and let us pick out anything we wanted.

"I picked a doll buggy, and my brother chose a clock radio."

The brother, James T. Miller, 34, an electrician, now lives with his two young children next door to Mrs. Pedersen and her four children.

"The children are very excited about 'Grandpa Charlie,' " Mrs. Pedersen said. "They are telling everyone about him. We would like him to know his grandchildren."

Mrs. Pedersen's father and mother were divorced when the daughter was a baby. After a few years, she said the father stopped visiting, and his two children always wondered what happened to him. Much later, the son wrote unsuccessfully to steamship lines trying to track the father down.

From news accounts of the Mayaguez, the son concluded the captain's name and age were right, he recognized the voice on television, and said, "He looks older but it's him. That's his nose."

The son's mother, Millicent Miller, said she was "very surprised," but that actually she saw Capt. Miller when the son entered service to give him the news.

She said there had been a dispute over child support, and he drifted away and "never got in touch. I didn't bother, either."

Young Miller, and Mrs. Pedersen, fired off a letter to Miller aboard the Mayaguez, now headed for Hong Kong, inviting him to visit them and the grandchildren he has never seen.

Mrs. Pedersen understands that the captain has six months to complete on his present cruise, and "that means he might come just before Christmas."

Her Honor Takes Command

Officially, a new era in Lincoln municipal government began Monday afternoon when Helen Boosalis was sworn in as the city's first woman mayor.

That in itself constitutes a new era. Of course, whenever an old administration gives way to a new one, another era begins.

But it isn't as though Lincolnites are dealing with an unknown quantity as the next four years get underway. The new mayor is an old Lincoln hand, having legislated on behalf of the citizens of this city for the past 16 years. We doubt that anyone now in office or on the city payroll is as knowledgeable, overall, of the machinery of city government and the problems facing the city as she.

We imagine that seasoned city employes who are doing a good job can look forward to a comfortable, pleasant working relationship with the new mayor. But we also imagine that reputations for competence in any number of areas will not just be taken at face value by Mrs. Boosalis; rather, such reputations will have to be proved again through performance.

We foresee a highly visible mayor in City Hall, keeping in personal contact with the departments and exerting executive leadership when required. Most important, we see the mayor's office now as a conduit through which citizen wishes can be translated into action.

Upon taking up residence in the corner office on City Hall's third floor and handing over the gavel to new City Council Chairman Max Denney, Mayor Boosalis pledged again that an open administration is "not idle campaign rhetoric."

That does not mean that each citizen is going to have his way in every scrape with or demand on City Hall. But it does mean that the same receptive ear which has listened to citizen grievances and proposals during several council terms will now be available in the mayor's office.

Hopefully the new mayor will be able to establish a compatible working relationship with her former colleagues on the council. Mayor-council solidarity is not absolutely essential all the time, but a good measure of it does assist progress.

Denney also called for unity as the council reorganized.

With a divisive city election now history, Lincoln looks ahead. It is a promising new era.

Three-Year Battle Over

The override of Gov. Exon's veto of a prison construction bill and its funding companion signals the beginning at long last of needed brick-and-mortar correctional reform.

The Legislature Tuesday acted as if it had taken hormone injections in cramming its construction design down the governor's throat. The passage of LB417 and LB417A and the subsequent veto overrides of both ended three years of haggling over construction of new medium-minimum security facilities. Senators possibly are as surprised as everybody else that a package was finally put together.

We firmly believe that as far as design goes, the governor was right and the majority of the Legislature wrong.

Exon stood by the original agreement which provided for a single unit replacement for the Men's Reformatory in Lincoln. The governor argued that the two facilities outlined in the legislation now enacted would be too costly — both in construction and operation terms. We think that this year's original agreement fit Nebraska's corrections needs (in that one area) to a T. But a floor revolt which resulted in the double facilities (one each in Lincoln and Omaha) design overpowered the governor's position.

We would have to agree with correctional reform champion Roland Luedtke, however, that "the issue is not dollars, the issue is human beings." That's true, even though Exon offered the Unicameral the opportunity to recall another passed appropriations bill in order to substitute the less costly original agreement. Politics, as it happened, were not to be denied.

The governor's legitimate objections notwithstanding, however, we are glad to see the prison construction program move forward.

History, The Poorest Teacher

NEW YORK — Americans treat history like a cookbook. Whenever they are uncertain what to do next, they turn to history and look up the proper recipe, invariably designated "The Lesson of History."

Wiser men than George Wallace have been skewered on the cookbook theory of history. The country is filled with them even now, so it is not altogether astounding that Wallace, aspiring to the semblance of wisdom required to satisfy his yearning for the White House, should have turned his mind recently to the lessons of history.

There is even a certain poignancy in the absurdity of the lesson he has discovered: to wit, that the country is in a bad way today because it didn't cultivate gemutlichkeit with Hitler's Germany.

Poring over his cookbook, the governor concedes that Hitler's "despicability" might have made it difficult to effect an American brotherhood with the Axis. He seems to be saying, however, that this problem was no more difficult than starting an omelet and finding a rotten egg in the refrigerator. A trip to the grocery, and the omelet proceeds.

One vacillates between outrage about the betrayal of American principles here and compassion for the confused mind that can find no better lesson in its journey through the historical cookbook. And yet, better minds than Wallace's have foundered on the lessons of World War II, and one of the consequences was Vietnam.

In many ways the internal American debate about Vietnam which has split the country for years has been an argument between people who had learned the lesson of World War II. Unfortunately, they couldn't agree what the lesson was.

The most passionate warmakers were men who had lived through the disastrous isolationism of the 1930's, the appeasement of Hitler and the world devastation that resulted — Kennedy, Rusk, Johnson, Nixon, Kissinger, the old labor chieftains, the press people old enough to remember goose-steppers in Paris.

For them the lesson of history dictated interventionist politics and quick resistance to tyrants with sharp elbows as the recipe for avoiding a new world devastation. If Hitler had not been appeased with Czechoslovakia, went the lesson, World War II would have been averted. Therefore: resist the tyrant's first grab, and prevent World War III. And, therefore, NATO, Truman Doctrine, SEATO, CENTO, Korea and, finally, Vietnam.

THE LESSON OF HITLER and the futility of appeasement . . . Der Fuehrer's goose-steppers . . .

The Vietnam resistance had also learned the lesson of World War II and it was not the lesson learned by most of the people who had lived through it.

For these people, World War II taught that bombing's chief result was to strengthen bombed peoples' determination to defeat the bomber. This was the lesson of London.

They had learned that alien armies cannot gain the respect of distant lands by creating governments more responsive to the guest army than to their countrymen. This was the lesson of Vichy and the European resistance underground.

They had learned that war can seduce the most powerful state into great crimes which earn it the revulsion of the world. This was the lesson of Nuremberg.

☆ ☆ ☆

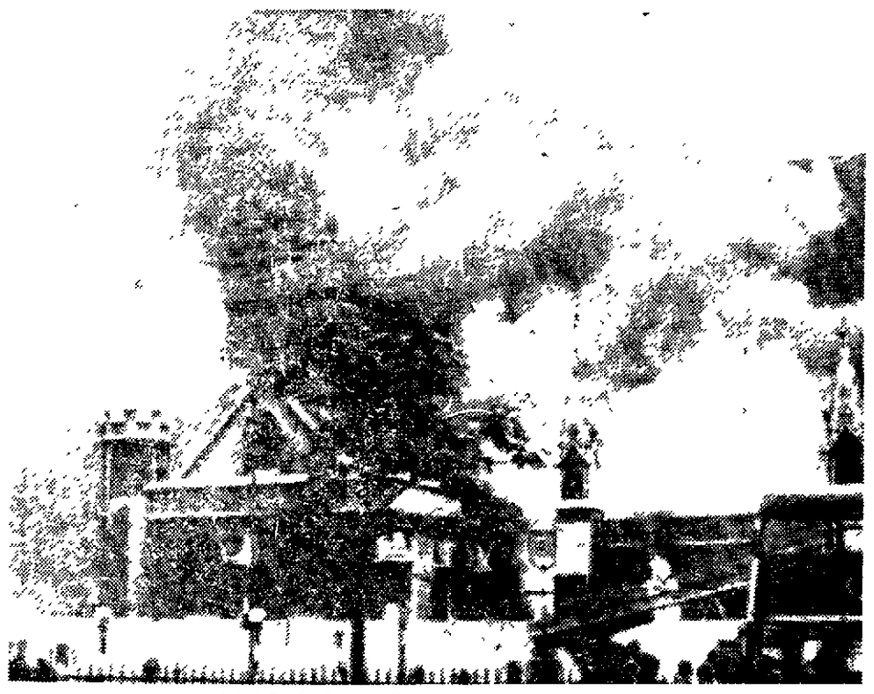

Everybody had learned the lesson of World War II, and there was no agreement what it was. And now, we have President Ford declaring we have learned the lesson of Vietnam. It is a statement to chill the blood.

If there is any lesson of history in Vietnam, which is doubtful, it is that history is a rotten lesson book, and should never, never be used like a cookbook.

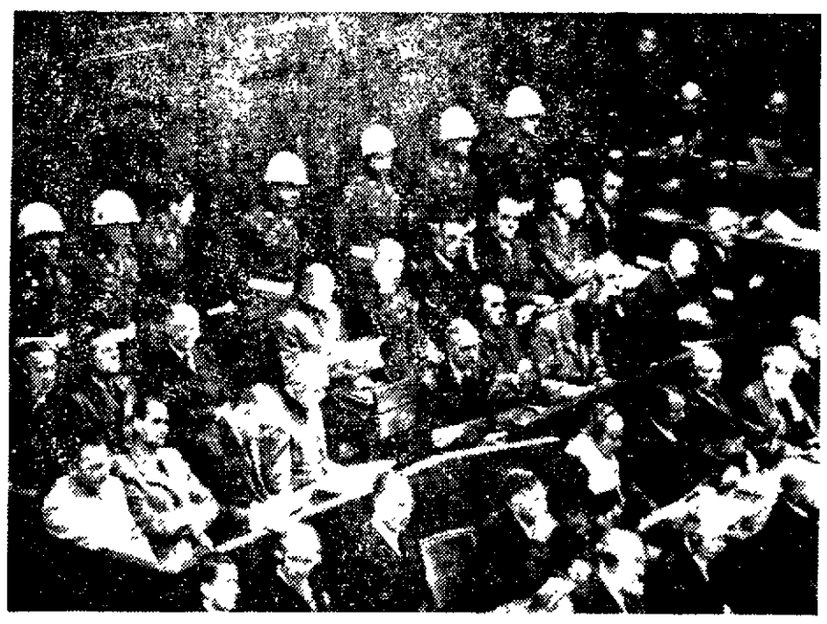

Those ignorant of history are doomed to repeat it, says the homily engraved on the back of every politician's mind. It is a clever aphorism, like almost everything else said about history, highly arguable.

We may be doomed to repeat history whether we are ignorant of it or not. As Vietnam suggests, we may even be doomed because we are not ignorant enough of history. Whatever the case, it has no recipes for policy cooks and, as for its lessons, the lessons of history are only what the lesson-seekers say they are, including George Wallace.

Executive War Powers

WASHINGTON — President Nixon reacted sharply when Congress in November, 1973, overrode his veto of legislation limiting the chief executive's power to commit U.S. forces abroad without congressional approval. Speaking through his press secretary, Ronald L. Ziegler, Nixon said the war-powers law "seriously undermines this nation's ability to act decisively and convincingly in times of international crisis."

The successful handling of the Mayaguez incident would seem to have proved Nixon wrong. President Ford notified congressional leaders of his decision to dispatch Marines and planes to recover the merchant vessel and its crew. There is some question whether simple notification satisfies the 1973 law's provision that the president, "in every possible instance, shall consult" with Congress before committing U.S. forces to hostilities.

The law also required the president to report in writing within 48 hours to the speaker of the House and president pro tempore of the Senate on any commitment or substantial enlargement of U.S. combat forces abroad. Ford delivered his report well before deadline.

What the Mayaguez incident demonstrated above all else is that the president's war powers still reign supreme in a crisis, notwithstanding any law designed to curb them. The president, not Congress, remains the initial recipient of military intelligence on which decisions are based. In this instance the President decided, and most members of Congress agreed, that swift military action was necessary.

To a certain extent, the Mayaguez incident resembled the Tonkin Gulf crisis of 1964. The Defense Department reported in early August of that year that North Vietnamese PT boats had attacked two U.S. destroyers, the Maddox and the C. Turner Joy, while they were on patrol in international waters about 30 miles off the coast of North Vietnam. Within days Congress adopted a resolution expressing its approval and support of "the determination of the President, as Commander-in-Chief, to take all necessary measures to repel any armed attack against the forces of the United States and to prevent further aggression."

When the resolution came before the Senate, Sen. Gaylord A. Nelson (D Wis.) suggested an amendment supporting President Johnson's earlier declaration that "the United States, seeking no extension of the military conflict, will respond to provocation in a manner that is 'limited and fitting.'" Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.), floor manager of the resolution, refused to accept the amendment.

As American involvement in the Vietnam war deepened, Johnson repeatedly invoked the Tonkin Gulf resolution to justify his actions. Congress finally repealed the measure in 1970. But it was not until October, 1973 — months after the last U.S. combat troops had left Vietnam — that it approved legislation defining and limiting the President's power to commit American forces abroad.

'Had Johnson's response to the Tonkin Gulf incident been "limited and fitting," the history of the Indochina war might have been far different.

Even now, some critics question whether Ford reacted in a fitting way to the Mayaguez crisis. But the crucial difference is that Ford succeeded where Johnson ultimately failed. Ford's credibility, any president's most precious asset, remains very much intact.

The Enemy Is Us

By C. L. SULZBERGER

PARIS — In vanished days when we were given to proclaiming basic policy intentions, 1973 was dubbed by Washington as its "Year of Europe," meaning that American diplomacy intended to focus on that vital area. This idea was never more than a propaganda blast. The year wound up in the silence of an energy famine and intra-allied throat cutting.

There is no point in resurrecting the 1973 label now even though both President Ford and Secretary Kissinger are coming to this continent. Slogans are not useful diplomatic devices and Kissinger, the man who lost his claque, is wise enough to recognize this.

In order to reassess its global role, the United States must recognize certain basic truths. It is no longer a superduper power preaching an American century but suddenly perforce what Kissinger recommended in a little noticed speech (New Delhi, Nov. 19, 1974): "America sees a world of free, independent sovereign states as being decidedly in its own national interest."

Within this framework, however, independent sovereign America must protect itself and its friends. That, too, is a "national interest." Psychologically as much was reaffirmed by Ford in the Mayaguez incident.

A pro-American ambassador recently told me: "Everyone is now learning that if you are an ally of Russia, you are supported to the end; if you are an ally of the United States, you are supported so long as the vagaries of mass opinion and the convenience of politicians go along.

"Everyone with any sense of decency hated what the Russians did to Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968 when they suspected each might leave the Soviet bloc. They moved right in and supported their political allies. Their brutality has been forgotten in the era of detente.

"Obviously America shouldn't and couldn't do that. But your policy of diving deeply in and totally out has made you hated on both sides in Indochina just as you are hated by both Greeks and Turks for your inability to make up your minds to do something."

☆ ☆ ☆

Michel Gauvin, the Canadian who headed Vietnam's International Commission of Control and Supervision, says: "It is a tragedy that such a great, generous and powerful nation as the United States could be humilated and have peace with honor stolen from it because of internal division and lack of leadership."

Europeans never worried so much because of the Indochina disaster to Washington's policy as they did about American resolution and clarity of vision.

The almighty dollar's depressing dip is more symbolic over here than the lowering of the Stars and Stripes in Phnom Penh and Saigon.

Continental observers have for long seen the Southeast Asian war being lost in the Mississippi and Hudson Valleys, not along the Mekong, as a result of U.S. indecision and confusion back home. Increasingly, since General de Gaulle first posed the problem after the Cuba confrontation, they wondered if America was ready to risk destruction of New York and Washington if Soviet land forces occupied Luebeck.

They have seen the United States shift increasingly to a flexible strategy reliant on conventional weapons; yet Russia had 10 times America's tank production and is speedily narrowing America's seapower lead. And the result? Europe falters down a road toward "Finlandization" with its left becoming more anti-capitalistic and its right more anti-American.

"Prestige" is an unfortunate, often misused word but the United States had to do something about refurbishing its prestige as a reliable ally backed by a reliable national resolve. Hopefully the unexpected Mayaguez affair helped in this respect. At the same time Washington must come out with clearcut support for the European community and stop saying one thing while doing another.

The latter remains fundamental. Of course, lesser reforms are also needed. For example, we are going to have to cease handing out important diplomatic posts as political spoils; this is no time for second-rate envoys. And it might be a very good idea if some of our chief leaders wore gags when out in private: Kissinger confiding to Israeli colleagues; Secretary Simon on Iran's Shah ("a nut"), Rockefeller on how grateful Greece should be that Turkey invaded Cyprus.

With leaders who permit themselves such indiscretions in the electronic age, an isolation ward might indeed be the best place for the United States to shelter in this giddy world. As the comic strip says: "We have met the enemy and he is us."

Everybody had learned the lesson of World War II, and there was no agreement what it was. And now, we have President Ford declaring we have learned the lesson of Vietnam. It is a statement to chill the blood.

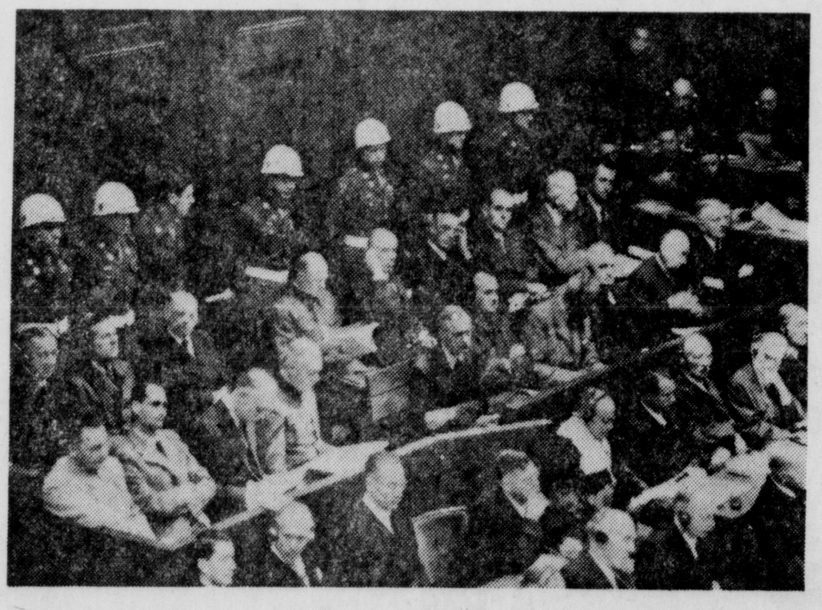

If there is any lesson of history in Vietnam, which is doubtful, it is that history is a rotten lesson book, and should never, never be used like a cookbook.

Those ignorant of history are doomed to repeat it, says the homily engraved on the back of every politician's mind. It is a clever aphorism, like almost everything else said about history, highly arguable.

We may be doomed to repeat history whether we are ignorant of it or not. As Vietnam suggests, we may even be doomed because we are not ignorant enough of history. Whatever the case, it has no recipes for policy cooks and, as for its lessons, the lessons of history are only what the lesson-seekers say they are, including George Wallace.

Executive War Powers

WASHINGTON — President Nixon reacted sharply when Congress in November, 1973, overrode his veto of legislation limiting the chief executive's power to commit U.S. forces abroad without congressional approval. Speaking through his press secretary, Ronald L. Ziegler, Nixon said the war-powers law "seriously undermines this nation's ability to act decisively and convincingly in times of international crisis."

The successful handling of the Mayaguez incident would seem to have proved Nixon wrong. President Ford notified congressional leaders of his decision to dispatch Marines and planes to recover the merchant vessel and its crew. There is some question whether simple notification satisfies the 1973 law's provision that the president, "in every possible instance, shall consult" with Congress before committing U.S. forces to hostilities.

The law also required the president to report in writing within 48 hours to the speaker of the House and president pro tempore of the Senate on any commitment or substantial enlargement of U.S. combat forces abroad. Ford delivered his report well before deadline.

What the Mayaguez incident demonstrated above all else is that the president's war powers still reign supreme in a crisis, notwithstanding any law designed to curb them. The president, not Congress, remains the initial recipient of military intelligence on which decisions are based. In this instance the President decided, and most members of Congress agreed, that swift military action was necessary.

To a certain extent, the Mayaguez incident resembled the Tonkin Gulf crisis of 1964. The Defense Department reported in early August of that year that North Vietnamese PT boats had attacked two U.S. destroyers, the Maddox and the C. Turner Joy, while they were on patrol in international waters about 30 miles off the coast of North Vietnam. Within days Congress adopted a resolution expressing its approval and support of "the determination of the President, as Commander-in-Chief, to take all necessary measures to repel any armed attack against the forces of the United States and to prevent further aggression."

When the resolution came before the Senate, Sen. Gaylord A. Nelson (D Wis.) suggested an amendment supporting President Johnson's earlier declaration that "the United States, seeking no extension of the military conflict, will respond to provocation in a manner that is 'limited and fitting.'" Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.), floor manager of the resolution, refused to accept the amendment.

As American involvement in the Vietnam war deepened, Johnson repeatedly invoked the Tonkin Gulf resolution to justify his actions. Congress finally repealed the measure in 1970. But it was not until October, 1973 — months after the last U.S. combat troops had left Vietnam — that it approved legislation defining and limiting the President's power to commit American forces abroad.

Had Johnson's response to the Tonkin Gulf incident been "limited and fitting," the history of the Indochina war might have been far different.

Even now, some critics question whether Ford reacted in a fitting way to the Mayaguez crisis. But the crucial difference is that Ford succeeded where Johnson ultimately failed. Ford's credibility, any president's most precious asset, remains very much intact.

The Enemy Is Us

By C. L. SULZBERGER

PARIS — In vanished days when we were given to proclaiming basic policy intentions, 1973 was dubbed by Washington as its "Year of Europe," meaning that American diplomacy intended to focus on that vital area. This idea was never more than a propaganda blast. The year wound up in the silence of an energy famine and intra-allied throat cutting.

There is no point in resurrecting the 1973 label now even though both President Ford and Secretary Kissinger are coming to this continent. Slogans are not useful diplomatic devices and Kissinger, the man who lost his claque, is wise enough to recognize this.

In order to reassess its global role, the United States must recognize certain basic truths. It is no longer a superduper power preaching an American century but suddenly perforce what Kissinger recommended in a little noticed speech (New Delhi, Nov. 19, 1974): "America sees a world of free, independent sovereign states as being decidedly in its own national interest."

Within this framework, however, independent sovereign America must protect itself and its friends. That, too, is a "national interest." Psychologically as much was reaffirmed by Ford in the Mayaguez incident.

A pro-American ambassador recently told me: "Everyone is now learning that if you are an ally of Russia, you are supported to the end; if you are an ally of the United States, you are supported so long as the vagaries of mass opinion and the convenience of politicians go along.

"Everyone with any sense of decency hated what the Russians did to Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968 when they suspected each might leave the Soviet bloc. They moved right in and supported their political allies. Their brutality has been forgotten in the era of detente.

"Obviously America shouldn't and couldn't do that. But your policy of diving deeply in and totally out has made you hated on both sides in Indochina just as you are hated by both Greeks and Turks for your inability to make up your minds to do something."

☆ ☆ ☆

Michel Gauvin, the Canadian who headed Vietnam's International Commission of Control and Supervision, says: "It is a tragedy that such a great, generous and powerful nation as the United States could be humilated and have peace with honor stolen from it because of internal division and lack of leadership."

Europeans never worried so much because of the Indochina disaster to Washington's policy as they did about American resolution and clarity of vision.

The almighty dollar's depressing dip is more symbolic over here than the lowering of the Stars and Stripes in Phnom Penh and Saigon.

Continental observers have for long seen the Southeast Asian war being lost in the Mississippi and Hudson Valleys, not along the Mekong, as a result of U.S. indecision and confusion back home. Increasingly, since General de Gaulle first posed the problem after the Cuba confrontation, they wondered if America was ready to risk destruction of New York and Washington if Soviet land forces occupied Luebeck.

They have seen the United States shift increasingly to a flexible strategy reliant on conventional weapons; yet Russia had 10 times America's tank production and is speedily narrowing America's seapower lead. And the result? Europe falters down a road toward "Finlandization" with its left becoming more anti-capitalistic and its right more anti-American.

"Prestige" is an unfortunate, often misused word but the United States had to do something about refurbishing its prestige as a reliable ally backed by a reliable national resolve. Hopefully the unexpected Mayaguez affair helped in this respect. At the same time Washington must come out with clearcut support for the European community and stop saying one thing while doing another.

The latter remains fundamental. Of course, lesser reforms are also needed. For example, we are going to have to cease handing out important diplomatic posts as political spoils; this is no time for second-rate envoys. And it might be a very good idea if some of our chief leaders wore gags when out in private: Kissinger confiding to Israeli colleagues; Secretary Simon on Iran's Shah ("a nut"), Rockefeller on how grateful Greece should be that Turkey invaded Cyprus.

With leaders who permit themselves such indiscretions in the electronic age, an isolation ward might indeed be the best place for the United States to shelter in this giddy world. As the comic strip says: "We have met the enemy and he is us."

Non-Red Paper Suspended

Lisbon (UPI) — The government suspended the publication of Lisbon's last major non-Communist newspaper Tuesday. Earlier government armored cars rescued employes of the paper who were being beseiged in their office by Communist-led workers.

Suspension of the publication of the paper, La Republica, immediately promised to become the focal point of the Socialist Party's battle for survival.

"If we lose here, it is just a matter of time before the Communists gain full control," a Socialist leader said. "We cannot take it lying down."

The controversy at Republica blew up over an attempt Monday by Communist-led typographical workers and janitors to oust the newspaper's editor and his Socialist-oriented editorial staff.

Editor Raul Rego refused to leave the building and was locked in his office by the workers. Crowds quickly massed, shouting slogans against the Communists.

The government broke the impasse Tuesday morning by evacuating the employees in armored cars and ordering the suspension of the newsppaer.

Heavily armed troops formed a cordon around the building and police sealed off the street. Traffic was diverted.

Jeeploads of soldiers kept watch on a demonstration mounted by an outlawed Maoist group in another part of the city to protest against the military and the Soviet-oriented Communist Party, which they have accused of trying to create a new dictatorship.

The newspaper's editorial staff issued an underground edition and appealed for public demonstrations in support of the newsmen.

The closing of La Republica coincided with a decision by the military to bypass political parties in the creation of a closer alliance between the military and the so-called popular masses.

A meeting of the ruling armed forces movement's 240-man assembly also moved to create a "revolutionaly tribunal" of military officers to hear cases against soldiers and civilians accused of political crimes.

Reports submitted to the assembly by the military's 20-man Revolutionary Council openly attacked the Socialist Party and accused both the Socialists and the left-of-center Popular Democrats of being anti-Communists trying to divide the military.

The two parties received 64% of the votes cast for a constituent assembly April 25, but the Revolutionary Council said the election was unimportant.

The council said it based the assessment on the assumption that the ballots cast by the Portuguese also represented a vote of confidence in the military's drive to revolutionize Portugal.

'Wild Man' Hangs Self

Bushnell, Fla. (AP) — After surviving eight months in a dense Florida swamp, a bewildered Chinese seaman who feared his captors hanged himself in his jail cell, deputies say.

"He didn't understand," an interpreter said after "The Wild Man of Green Swamp" was found hanging by his belt Monday. "He didn't believe police would let him go free."

The man, believed to be Tu-Mei Hu, 39, of Taiwan, had been chased down by a posse which followed a trail of half-eaten wild animal carcasses and captured him Saturday in the sawgrass jungle.

France Rejoins 'Money Snake' Within Weeks

BRUSSELS (AP) —The French franc will rejoin the joint float of Western Europe's healthiest currencies "within a few weeks," French Finance Minister Jean-Pierre Fourcade said Tuesday.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing announced earlier this month that the rapidly strengthening franc would return to the float, or "snake," but did not commit his government to any deadline.

The french decision means that the franc will be reattached to a joint float, limited to a variation of 2.25 per cent on foreign exchange markets, of snake countries which include Germany, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Sweden, Denmark and Norway.

Nebraska Citians Mostly Favor Coal-Burning Power Plant

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story was written as an assignment in the University of Nebraska — Lincoln School of Journalism depth reporting class.)

By PAT WATERS

Nebraska City — Little changes but the seasons on this stretch of land edging the Missouri River, five miles south of here.

Spring is heralded by the serenade of fleeing Canadian geese followed by grinding tractors sowing endless rows of corn and soybeans.

But preparations have begun that will end the yearly cultivation of this segment of Nebraska's farming tradition. The Omaha Public Power District (OPPD) will build a $288,501,000 coal-burning, 600 megawatt (600,000 kilowatts) electric power plant on about 25 acres. OPPD bought an additional 1,574 acres for a railroad and ash and coal storage.

Gone also will be the road snaking along the brink of a 200-foot bluff overlooking those fields. Replacing it will be a paved highway slicing through patches of corn and wheat.

Town Welcomes Plant

The plant is welcomed enthusiastically by most of Nebraska City's 7,800 residents. They mention jobs, a national electicity shortage and greater area income as reasons for their support.

While agriculture represents a large part of the area's income, the town has not totally escaped the nation's economic woes.

One hundred American Beef Packer employes lost their jobs when that company went bankrupt. And the American Meter Division, normally employing about 300, laid off 130 last fall. American Meter makes gas meters for houses and industries and was affected by a sluggish housing industry.

Land Loss Resented

But the city residents' enthusiasm is not shared by some of their country neighbors, who resent the loss of farming land and the intrusion on privacy that 600 construction workers will mean. And they are unconvinced that emissions will not cause air pollution.

Nebraska City and Plattsmouth, about 30 miles north, were the locations OPPD considered for the plant.

"But Plattsmouth didn't want it and we did," Mayor Ervin Rogers said. The mayor and City Council campaigned for the plant by writing letters and talking with OPPD representatives, he said.

Project Engineer William Whemhoff said Nebraska City was chosen becasue of access to a railroad, good roads and the proximity of river cooling water (the plant will use about 298,000 gallons per minute).

Buying Two Trains

OPPD is buying two 100-car Burlington Northern trains. Each car will carry about 100 tons of coal and the trains will make continuous trips to mines in Wyoming, he explained. Maximum plant use is 360 tons per hour.

Those job losses at American Beef and American Meter hurt a town of Nebraska City's size, Rogers said. He described the town's economy as, "not good as it could be."

People are buying less and the city's small stores cannot compete with shopping centers 60 miles away, Rogers added.

Merchants are eager for new customers and hope plant employes move to Nebraska City, said Chamber of Commerce Manager Mrs. Dorothy Merchert.

65 Operating Employes

Rogers said he expects some of the 65 employed during the plant's operation (about 1979) will buy or build houses. And he expressed confidence that housing shortages and school space problems during construction are solvable.

Some city real estate agents, however, think differently. Victor Bremer of Victor D. Bremer Agency Inc., said several people already have contacted him wanting to rent houses and apartments.

"We'll try to find something but it's going to be a problem," he said. Rentable houses always were scarce, and Bremer said he does not foresee increased apartment construction.

Bremer also said rents probably will rise because of increased demand, and salesman Paul Knoll of the Granneman Agency agreed.

New apartments now rent for $200 to $250 monthly while older ones start at $75, Bremer said. And the starting monthly rate of a 12-unit complex under construction will be $250.

To Other Towns?

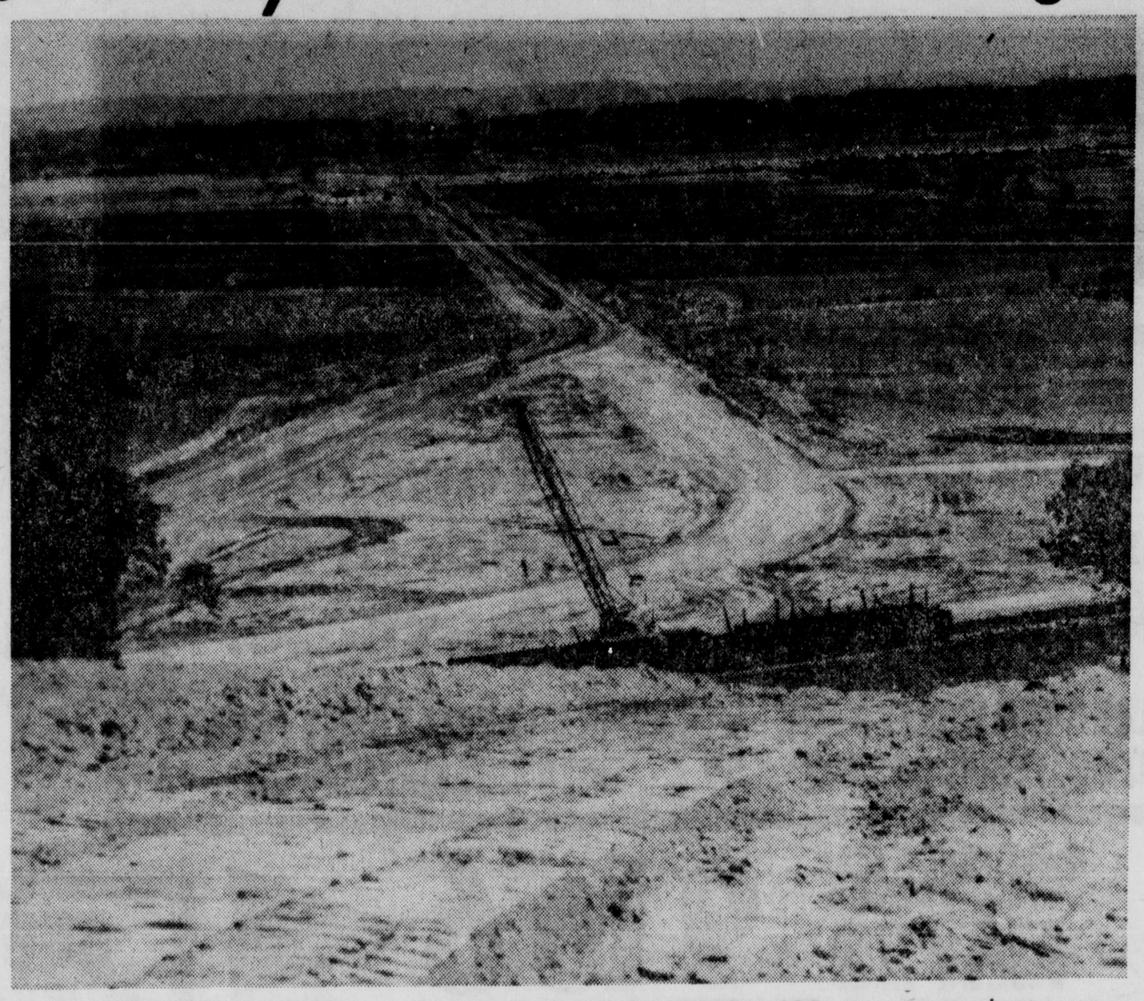

Knoll predicted that families will live in Auburn or Syracuse (both about 20 miles away) if sufficient housing is unavailable.

Allison Gibbs, owner of Gibbs Construction Co., does not expect the forthcoming plant to quicken his slow housing business.

Gibbs said he was not excited about the possibility of new home buyers, adding, "We could use a boom but this isn't it."

Before last year Gibbs said his company built about 100 houses within two or three years. Perhaps those permanently employed during operation will want homes, he added hopefully.

"But we expect construction workers to live in trailers or commute."

SITE PREPARATION . . . began in April for OPPD's 600 megawatt plant.

School Problems Seen

Those trailer-owning families could cause a problem. If many families move trailers near the plant site their children may create an unmanageable burden for country school District 36 and perhaps for District 54, David McPherson said.

McPherson, Otoe County superintendent from 1965 through 1974, retired last January. He said more than 30 new students could wreck District 36.

That district averages 12 students and has a one-room school with a basement.

"It could accommodate 30 additional students and another teacher but any more and I don't know what would happen," he said, adding that building another school is not economically feasible.

There may be a few resentful taxpayers in that district anyway. The schools are supported by property taxes and the evaluation on a trailer would fall far short of the amount necessary to educate each child, he explained.

"But the district is responsible as long as they are here."

Not Problem In City

Nebraska City Public School Supt. James Withee is not plagued by such problems. Unless the new students all attend junior or senior high, there will be no problem, he said.

The schools are not filled to capacity. Enrollment is 1,591 now; in 1971 it was 1,736.

But the junior and senior high schools are most crowded. Possible solutions for those schools could include extension of the school day or moving some classes to the Memorial Building (less than two blocks from the junior high), Withee explained.

"We could handle 200 or 300 new students and I'll be surprised if we get that many."

Elementary schools whose districts include trailer parks will have the biggest increase, he theorized.

Deputy Sheriff Added

Otoe County Sheriff Russell Seals Jr. added one deputy to his three-man staff to prepare for the influx of workers and the problem potential they indicate.

He said he expects more petty burglaries, breaking and entering, barroom brawls and domestic squabbles.

He said any population increase creates problems but it's difficult to predict what kind. But no one in the community seems afraid of crime increase, he added.

Seal's new deputy was hired with the help of a Nebraska Crime Commission grant. The commission pays 90 per cent of his first year's salary and the county and state each five per cent.

Seals said he hopes to maintain his four-man staff after the four- or five-year construction period.

"We cover a 617-square-mile area and have always been understaffed."

The plant provided good reason to hire another deputy, he said.

May Not Help Jobless

Nebraska Citians may be disappointed if they deem construction jobs the solution to recent unemployment.

OPPD does no construction hiring. It contracts builders and equipment owners and they hire workers. Employes must have specific skills and perhaps be union members.

Eby Construction Co. of Omaha, which is preparing the site with excavation and dirt moving, began operations in mid-April.

Project Manager John Wright said about 100 skilled laborers, carpenters, iron workers and masons will be employed. Some Nebraska City men will be hired, he said, but he did not specify a number. It depends on their qualifications; they must be able to operate the equipment, Wright said.

Union Men Needed

Lyle L. Lampkin, project manager of Foster-Wheeler of Livingston, N.J., said that firm will employ about 250 to build the steam generator. But only union craftsmen will be employed, he added.

Foster-Wheeler contacts the union hall which serves the Nebraska City area, the unions send boilermakers, electricians, carpenters and pipefitters.

Lampkin said Foster-Wheeler will hire directly several secretaries and bookkeepers when work begins in June 1976.

Road Causes Controversy

A dusty, gravelled road gliding past newly built homes and venerable farmhouses is perhaps the deepest source of conflict

Knoll predicted that families will live in Auburn or Syracuse (both about 20 miles away) if sufficient housing is unavailable.

Allison Gibbs, owner of Gibbs Construction Co., does not expect the forthcoming plant to quicken his slow housing business.

Gibbs said he was not excited about the possibility of new home buyers, adding, "We could use a boom but this isn't it."

Before last year Gibbs said his company built about 100 houses within two or three years. Perhaps those permanently employed during operation will want homes, he added hopefully.

"But we expect construction workers to live in trailers or commute."

School Problems Seen

Those trailer-owning families could cause a problem. If many families move trailers near the plant site their children may create an unmanageable burden for country school District 36 and perhaps for District 54, David McPherson said.

McPherson, Otoe County superintendent from 1965 through 1974, retired last January. He said more than 30 new students could wreck District 36.

That district averages 12 students and has a one-room school with a basement.

"It could accommodate 30 additional students and another teacher but any more and I don't know what would happen," he said, adding that building another school is not economically feasible.

There may be a few resentful taxpayers in that district anyway. The schools are supported by property taxes and the evaluation on a trailer would fall far short of the amount necessary to educate each child, he explained.

"But the district is responsible as long as they are here."

Not Problem In City

Nebraska City Public School Supt. James Withee is not plagued by such problems. Unless the new students all attend junior or senior high, there will be no problem, he said.

The schools are not filled to capacity. Enrollment is 1,591 now; in 1971 it was 1,736.

But the junior and senior high schools are most crowded. Possible solutions for those schools could include extension of the school day or moving some classes to the Memorial Building (less than two blocks from the junior high), Withee explained.

"We could handle 200 or 300 new students and I'll be surprised if we get that many."

Elementary schools whose districts include trailer parks will have the biggest increase, he theorized.

Deputy Sheriff Added

Otoe County Sheriff Russell Seals Jr. added one deputy to his three-man staff to prepare for the influx of workers and the problem potential they indicate.

He said he expects more petty burglaries, breaking and entering, barroom brawls and domestic squabbles.

He said any population increase creates problems but it's difficult to predict what kind. But no one in the community seems afraid of crime increase, he added.

Seal's new deputy was hired with the help of a Nebraska Crime Commission grant. The commission pays 90 per cent of his first year's salary and the county and state each five per cent.

Seals said he hopes to maintain his four-man staff after the four- or five-year construction period.

"We cover a 617-square-mile area and have always been understaffed."

The plant provided good reason to hire another deputy, he said.

May Not Help Jobless

Nebraska Citians may be disappointed if they deem construction jobs the solution to recent unemployment.

OPPD does no construction hiring. It contracts builders and equipment owners and they hire workers. Employes must have specific skills and perhaps be union members.

Eby Construction Co. of Omaha, which is preparing the site with excavation and dirt moving, began operations in mid-April.

Project Manager John Wright said about 100 skilled laborers, carpenters, iron workers and masons will be employed. Some Nebraska City men will be hired, he said, but he did not specify a number. It depends on their qualifications, they must be able to operate the equipment, Wright said.

Union Men Needed

Lyle L. Lampkin, project manager of Foster-Wheeler of Livingston, N.J., said that firm will employ about 250 to build the steam generator. But only union craftsmen will be employed, he added.

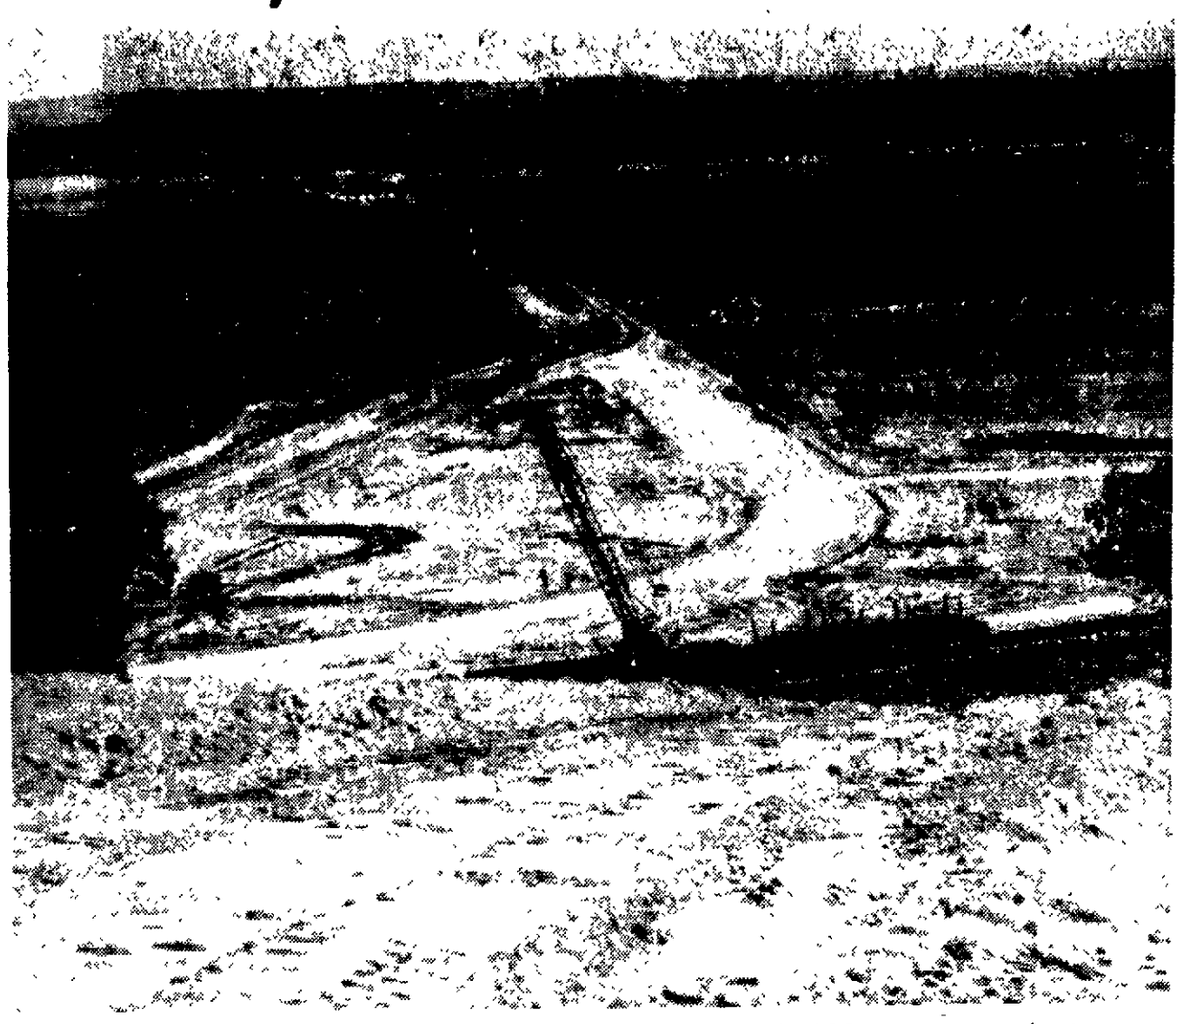

Foster-Wheeler contacts the union hall which serves the Nebraska City area, the unions send boilermakers, electricians, carpenters and pipefitters.

Lampkin said Foster-Wheeler will hire directly several secretaries and bookkeepers when work begins in June 1976.

Road Causes Controversy

A dusty, gravelled road gliding past newly built homes and venerable farmhouses is perhaps the deepest source of conflict

Highway, Farmland Loss, Pollution Possibility Upset Rural Residents

between country homeowners and OPPD.

OPPD will finance construction costs of a highway (about $1 million) and then give it to the county. County Commissioner Donald Larson calls it a wonderful gain for the county and said maintenance costs will be small.

The highway itself will be 24 feet wide with four-foot shoulders and a downgrade and upgrade on each side, Larson explained.

Pavement is acceptable, property owners say, but not a 100-foot wide speedway that cuts into their yards and demolishes trees.

Information Lacked

But then, they're not even sure of the road's width or route and that lack of information amplifies their resentment.

"Everyone is in the dark," complained Alvin Schnitzer, who owns a two-story white frame house on the highway's prospective route.

Schnitzer said no one has come to tell him about the track of the road although he looked out the window one day to find surveyors measuring his yard.

"If it's 100 feet wide it will come within 15 to 20 feet of the front door," he said.

Mr. and Mrs. James Welter said they have been told nothing about the fate of their property eighter.

Only Gossip Heard

Anything they have heard is gossip or rumor, Welter said. "That's not the right way of doing things," Mrs. Welter added.

A grove of cedar trees secludes their home and acts as a windbreak. But some of those trees might fall before the highway.

"The plant is upsetting our whole way of life. How could we want it?" Mrs. Welter asked. About 15 years ago they moved with their two daughters to escape the town's hubbub and now they say they're in the middle of it.

"It's hard to take," Welter said.

Welter also said he is worried about the plant's pollution potential. OPPD's assurances have not allayed his doubts.

The Welters said they wanted to leave their children an inheritance that was clean, not ugly and polluted.

210 Acres Sold

Sitting in the glassed family room staring at a drizzly, March morning, Carl Roll talked about his sale of 210 acres, about one-third of his farm land to OPPD.

At $1,400 per acre that's a fair price, Roll concedes, but now he and the brother with whom he farms cannot find other land to buy.

"I wish we had it back," he said, smiling slowly.

Roll explained that several farms he considered were too distant or too expensive. A farm near Rockport, Mo., cost $1,500 per acre and maybe wasn't good land, he said.

Last summer, despite the drought, some of his lost farm yielded 130 bushels of corn per acre, he said.

Unhappy With Rent Plan

Roll also is unhappy with OPPD's land-leasing plan. OPPD is allowing previous owners to rent and farm, for $50, land the district will not use this summer.

It costs about $70 to plant an acre and farmers are not guaranteed that planted land won't be destroyed or trampled by trucks and machinery, he explained.

Additionally, Donald Kreifels, who sold about 90 acres, complained that, as of March, he had not yet been told how many acres he could plant.

"It's time to buy seed and fertilizer and I'm still in the dark. I don't know how much to buy."

One Of Last

Kreifels was one of the last to sell, resisting OPPD's attempt to buy one half of his farming property for $1,500 per acre.

Finally, Kreifels said the district exerted pressure, threatening to settle the dispute in court if he didn't sell within five days.

"I wish it weren't there. I'm pretty disturbed about it but there's nothing you can do," he said helplessly.

Hopeless and helpless. That's how the few rural opponents describe themselves. They did not form a coalition and ask the assistance of the Sierra Club as did Sutherland residents responding to Nebraska Public Power District's (NPPD) plan for the Gerald Gentleman Power Plant.

SCHNITZER HOME . . . new road could cut into front yard.

Welter interpreted their reaction, or lack of it: "There are only four or five of us who are against it. That would be a joke."

City Favors Plant

City residents and many older citizens whose children and grandchildren have moved favor it, he said.

Indifference may better describe the response of some Nebraska Citians. Ted Hoffman, chairman of the Nebraska chapter of the Sierra Club, said a larger urban population usually signals uninvolvement.

People don't want to "rock the boat," he said. "It takes a spark to set things in motion as in Sutherland."

Hoffman explained that the club does not involve itself outside the home base, Omaha, unless objecting local citizens request help.

Sutherland residents wanted to do something so Sierra members organized them. Within a week their infant organization numbered 100, Hoffman said.

Group Missing

But a similar group was missing in Nebraska City, and Hoffman said he was surprised and disappointed.

"I was hoping someone would look into it and make OPPD answer some tough questions. What would OPPD do if they received coal with a high air pollution potential?" Hoffman asked.

Last June Hoffman said he was contacted by a Nebraska City man. Hoffman advised him to attend the public hearings, organize the opposition and seek the club's help.

"I expected to hear from someone but I didn't. They must either have decided they could live with it or they gave up."

Permit Granted

According to OPPD Project Engineer Whemhoff, there will be no pollution to live with, and in March OPPD received a permit to construct from Nebraska's Department of Environmental Control.

Environmental Engineer Steve Schwartz reviewed OPPD's report and said it complied with federal air standards.

After construction, a representative will examine the plant and issue a permit to operate if it complies with requirements.

The decision is based on the district's plans to control three emissions: particulates (ash and dust), sulfur oxide and nitrogen oxides. They're gases which, at high concentrations, cause plant damage and lung diseases.

Ash Said 'Normal'

The coal is eight to 14 per cent ash and that's normal, Schwartz said.

OPPD is installing electrostatic precipitators to remove about 99.3 per cent of the ash. As dust passes over charged wire, it becomes charged and sticks to a collector plate.

The precipitators will collect some 30 to 35 tons per hour, Whemhoff said. If OPPD is unsuccessful marketing the stuff as brick material, it will be piled in mounds on the site, he said.

Neighbors shouldn't worry about the wind, Whemhoff said. When hot, this ash is like water, but when cold, with a sprinkling of water, it hardens, he said.

With a coal sulfur oxide content of .33 to .4 per cent, OPPD escapes the scrubber requirement enforced when coal contains .5 per cent, Schwartz said.

The scrubber is an expensive, complicated and often inefficient system that uses limestone and water to trap the contaminated gas molecules, Schwartz said.

Still, about 7,020 pounds of sulfur oxide will be produced every hour. But, Whemhoff reasons, the plant's 700-foot smokestacks will carry most of the emissions away from the area or desposit it in the upper atmosphere.

Whemhoff added that he thinks sulfur oxide damage is often exaggerated and fear of the gas many times unreasonable.

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency studies say 7,020 pounds of sulfur oxide is insufficient to adversely affect plants or health, Schwartz said.

OPPD's contract specifies it will not accept coal above the standard, he continued. And employes are required to make daily checks of coal and send

Snow Falls In Utah, Wyoming

By United Press International

Winter staged an unwelcome comeback in the West Tuesday, dumping up to a foot of snow on Utah and Wyoming. Midsummer-like heat sparked tornadoes, destructive winds and electrical storms in the Midwest.

A tornado plowed through a commercial area at Alma, Ark., injuring several persons — one seriously — and causing extensive property damage.

High winds overturned three trailer homes and slightly injured six persons in the Chicago suburb of Calumet Park. Lightning killed one man and injured two others at a utility company construction site near Marseilles, Ill.

Heavy, wet snow downed power lines, blocked rural roads and closed schools in central Utah. Deep snows briefly closed Sylvan Pass at the eastern gateway to Yellowstone National Park.

Utah got up to a foot of snow, 11 inches fell at Casper, Wyo., and Red Lodge, Mont., had 8 inches. The wintry weather threatened to destroy much of Utah's fruit crop.

Powerful winds from the arctic storm swept across California. One man was drowned and another was missing after a fishing boat apparently sank outside San Francisco's Golden Gate.

Gale-force winds and blinding dust storms triggered hundreds of automobile accidents. Twelve vehicles were involved and nine persons injured in one pileup on U.S. 99 near Merced, Calif.

Some mountain highways were closed temporarily by icing on the pavement. There were widespread power failures.

Temperatures soared into the mid 90s as far north as Wisconsin.

Tornadoes and high winds slashed across the Midwest, injuring more than 30 persons in Minnesota, 12 at Madison, Wis., and several in the St. Louis, Mo., area.

them to the department, he added.

Temperature Kept Lower

Nitrogen oxide is handled in OPPD's contract too, Schwartz said. It is not related to anything in the coal. Rather, it's formed by the combination of nitrogen and oxygen during combustion. The contract promises to lower the boiler temperature to inhibit this formation, he said.

Robert Todd, environmental specialist at the Department of Environmental Control, will review OPPD's report requesting the National Pollution Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permit. He expects the study in about a year.

In March 1974, a federal provision prohibited any plant producing more than 500 megawatts, and that includes the Nebraska City plant, from discharging cooling water into life-supporting streams, Todd explained. Instead, it said, utilities must use cooling towers or sterile ponds and lakes.

Might Get Waiver

But if OPPD can prove its discharge system won't harm marine life, the utility can obtain a waiver and avoid the expensive (about $50 million) off-stream method, Todd said.

Heated water cannot exceed about 104 degrees in summer and 60 in winter, he continued.

Todd said he thinks all power plants must eventually use off-stream cooling.

"More and more demand is being made on the river and any more thermal discharge will raise the normal temperature of the river."

Todd explained that some fish inevitably die because of entrapment in the cooling water intake system. Fish, especially those in the larval stage, are drawn through the condensors with the water.

But the Nebraska City plant well have passageways that let adult fish swim out, Todd added.

Fish Study Advised

Todd said he advised OPPD to study the possible effects on fish important to commercial and sport fishing, such as Buffalo, Carp, Channel and Flathead Catfish.

"I'll study the conclusions and see if I agree. It'll be a hard decision and I'll consult experts at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and the Game and Parks Commission."

Because the river fish population is small, if 10 to 20 per cent are endangered the waiver could be refused, Todd said.

Coal plants also discharge ash, oil and grease. They're light barriers and repress algae growth, he continued. And oil and grease remove oxygen needed by fish, he said.

Discharges Limited

The NPDES permit contains strict limitations for those discharges too.

Todd may know more about the effects of heated water when a post-operational study on the Brownville and Fort Calhoun nuclear plants is completed in July 1976. The 11-agency project is partly financed by OPPD and NPPD.

Dr. Charles Wallace of the Game and Parks Commission said fishery findings can be applied to the Nebraska City plant because water discharged from coal or nuclear plants is alike.

UNL Life Sciences Prof. Gary Hergenrader said his part of the study, influences on larval fish, will be finished in July 1976.

It's almost impossible for anything going through the cooling circuit to survive, Dr. Hergenrader said.

Drifting larval fish are pulled into the circuit and subjected to pressure changes, rapid water speed, pounding pumps and a rapid temperature change, he said.

Can't Tolerate Increase

According to Dr. Hergenrader, no fish, adult or larval, can tolerate a summer temperature increase from 85 to 105 degrees.

It will be difficult to look beneath the murky surface of the Missouri River and discern the effect Nebraska City's power plant has exerted on Buffalo or larval fish.

It is also difficult to detect, a rift between Nebraska City residents. For there is only one pervasive mood and it is one of expectancy.

The mayor, City Council and other advocates will have the power plant for which they campaigned and can sit back and await the economic boost they hope accompanies it. But some farmers and country homeowners still shake their heads and suggest those urban supporters may be in for a surprise.

$5 Billion Authorized For Works

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Tuesday to authorize $5 billion for state and local public works projects to spur employment in construction and related industries.

Although the bill enjoyed extensive support from Republicans, President Ford has informed Congress he strongly opposes it.

The administration believes the bulk of the spending for such a program would be likely to occur during a time of economic upturn and help crowd out private investment and stimulate inflation.

The bill authorizes the secretary of commerce to make 100 per cent grants to local and state governments, including Indian tribes, for construction and renovation of local public works project.

It stipulates that 70 per cent of the funds must be used in areas where the unemployment rate exceeds the national average for two of three most recent months.

Not more than 10 per cent of the funds can be granted within a single state, and local governments must receive priority.

Environmentalists amended the bill before it reached the floor to prohibit funds for land acquisition or for any project that permanently affects any natural water course.

Rep. Robert E. Jones, D-Ala., floor manager of the bill, said that while unemployment has risen to 8.9 per cent nationwide, more than 18 per cent of construction employes are out of work nationally. "In many cities" more than 30 per cent of those workers are jobless, he said.

Sponsors of the bill agreed that $2.1 billion would be available for the fiscal year beginning July 1 and the remainder would be spent in subsequent years. The Appropriations Committee must approve the actual spending.

The President's budget does not earmark any funds for the public works project grants and he has said the federal deficit should be held to $60 billion. But the congressional deficit for the nation of $68.8 billion assumes this legislation would be passed.

Last week, the House and Senate passed a different $5.3-billion emergency appropriations bill to produce 900,000 jobs.

Meanwhile, Acting Commerce Secretary John K. Tabor told a Senate public works subcommittee that the administration opposes a separate $1.9-billion public works employment bill. He argued that the economy is picking up and that the measure would increase inflationary pressures.

Builders' President Has Gripe

Washington (AP) — The president of the National Association of Home Builders complained Tuesday that administration policies are stifling the housing industry and threaten to abort the anticipated economic recovery.

"I don't think they know what they're doing as far as housing is concerned," said J.S. Norman Jr.

Norman named a list of top administration officials he said "don't know anything about housing": Carla Hills, secretary of housing and urban development; James T. Lynn, former HUD secretary and currently director of the Office of Management and Budget; L. William Seidman, economic coordinator for President Ford; and Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

"We understand the business," Norman said. "It's high time for the administration to listen to the people who build housing — that is if they want the nation to be adequately housed."

Norman spoke at a news conference called at the conclusion of his trade association's annual board meeting.

The board approved resolutions advocating the equivalent of federal subsidies for interest rates on home loans, more federally subsidized public housing construction and quicker action on current low-income housing programs.

Norman, whose industry is currently operating on a level about 35 per cent below last year's depressed state, said he sees no chance for housing to lead the way to economic recovery under current circumstances.

To Your Good Health

Infection May Be Cause Of Her Low-Grade Fever

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am writing in regard to our 17-year-old daughter, who for a year now has had a slight temperature. It runs about 99.4, and she just gets it a while in the afternoon or evening, and not every day.

We were wondering what could cause this. We have had her to a doctor, but the tests never show anything. She has no pep and has a heart murmur. What do you think about this? — Mrs. F. H.

I think you may have cause for some concern.

The average body temperature, as almost everyone knows, is 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit, although elevations of up to 99, even 99.2, degrees are considered to be within normal range after an active day.

In your daughter's case, I would regard the 99.4 as indicative of some trouble, especially since the reading has been obtained over a considerable length of time — a year, according to your letter. At 17, her body temperature should have become stabilized from the periods of fluctuation expected during her early years.

Low-grade fever is only a symptom, not a disease, however, so it would be wise for you to begin looking for its cause. There can be several.

The usual cause for a fever of undetermined origin (FUO is the medical shorthand for it) is an infection, and physicians frequently begin with this assumption either to find the source of the infection or to rule it out. Other disorders not of an infectious nature can produce a chronic low-grade fever. Collagen (or connective tissue) disease comes to mind as an example.

In the female, especially, we often suspect a urinary tract infection. At her age, the possibility of tuberculosis must be considered. If your daughter has not had a tuberculin skin test and a chest X-ray, she should have.

Another thought in passing. Since you live in a rural area, the possibility of undulant fever from an improperly processed milk supply might be investigated. In this, however, fever is intermittent, low in the morning and rising toward evening. Other symptoms include fatigue and headache.

Considering her "lack of pep" and her heart murmur (normally of rather little significance in itself), the possibility of infection in a heart valve lining should also be investigated. This condition is called "subacute bacterial endocarditis." Rheumatic fever is another possibility.

I've given you a lot to think about, with the hope that it will not raise ghosts for you, but impress upon you the complexity of dealing with a low-grade fever and fevers of undetermined origin in general. It has been and continues to be a puzzler for physicians.

The possibilities listed above can be investigated rather simply with modern medical equipment for blood agglutination tests, blood cultures, urine cultures, and others. Some, however, may require a brief hospital stay.

☆ ☆ ☆

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My wife and I are recent newlyweds, and I notice that she is always "cracking" her neck by tilting it from side to side.

She says it feels better after popping, but I'm getting worried it might be harmful. Is it? — D.R.

No. It is probably nothing more than a nervous habit, but a harmless one. I have known many persons to do the same thing. One cracked his neck only while seated, quietly reading a book. He lived to a ripe age and never quite got over this habit.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you please tell me what causes dark circles just below the eyes? Mine are dark and unsightly, especially during menstruation. How can I get rid of them? — Mrs. R. R.

The skin around the eyes is particularly thin and loose, a fact, you can prove for yourself by gently pinching a fold of this skin between your thumb and forefinger. Its transparency allows more of the blood pigment to show through, more so in the fair-skinned than in the dark or thicker-skinned persons.

The problem becomes more noticeable during menstruation because at these times the body retains liquid more readily, often causing the puffiness around the eyes and exaggerating the transparent effect.

No solution beyond the cosmetics counter, I'm afraid.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

What do the numbers on a blood pressure reading mean?

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that there are two readings: systolic and diastolic.

The systolic pressure is a measure of force used by the heart to pump blood from the heart to the first big blood vessel, the aorta.

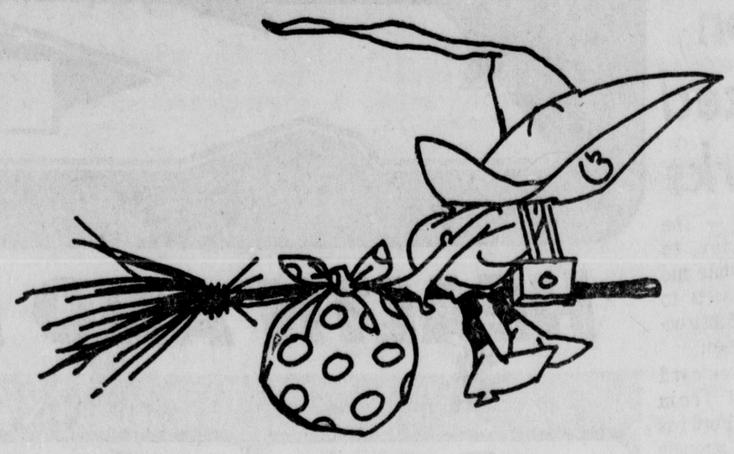

The diastolic pressure is the measure of resistance the blood must overcome to pass through the smaller blood vessels.

The Nebraska Medical Association reports that the rule of thumb calling for addition of a hundred to your age to determine the normal systolic reading, is an old wives tale. A normal blood pressure reading for an adult over 30 should be a systolic pressure under 140 and a diastolic pressure under 90. That would be a reading of 140 over 90. These pressures have been determined through a study conducted during the past 20 years.

The Nebraska Medical Association says blood pressure can be controlled through medication if too high.

Infection May Be Cause Of Her Low-Grade Fever

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am writing in regard to our 17-year-old daughter, who for a year now has had a slight temperature. It runs about 99.4, and she just gets it a while in the afternoon or evening, and not every day.

We were wondering what could cause this. We have had her to a doctor, but the tests never show anything. She has no pep and has a heart murmur. What do you think about this? — Mrs. F. H.

I think you may have cause for some concern.

The average body temperature, as almost everyone knows, is 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit, although elevations of up to 99, even 99.2, degrees are considered to be within normal range after an active day.

In your daughter's case, I would regard the 99.4 as indicative of some trouble, especially since the reading has been obtained over a considerable length of time — a year, according to your letter. At 17, her body temperature should have become stabilized from the periods of fluctuation expected during her early years.

Low-grade fever is only a symptom, not a disease, however, so it would be wise for you to begin looking for its cause. There can be several.

The usual cause for a fever of undetermined origin (FUO is the medical shorthand for it) is an infection, and physicians frequently begin with this assumption either to find the source of the infection or to rule it out. Other disorders not of an infectious nature can produce a chronic low-grade fever. Collagen (or connective tissue) disease comes to mind as an example.

In the female, especially, we often suspect a urinary tract infection. At her age, the possibility of tuberculosis must be considered. If your daughter has not had a tuberculin skin test and a chest X-ray, she should have.

Another thought in passing. Since you live in a rural area, the possibility of undulant fever from an improperly processed milk supply might be investigated. In this, however, fever is intermittent, low in the morning and rising toward evening. Other symptoms include fatigue and headache.

Considering her "lack of pep" and her heart murmur (normally of rather little significance in itself), the possibility of infection in a heart valve lining should also be investigated. This condition is called "subacute bacterial endocarditis." Rheumatic fever is another possibility.

I've given you a lot to think about, with the hope that it will not raise ghosts for you, but impress upon you the complexity of dealing with a low-grade fever and fevers of undetermined origin in general. It has been and continues to be a puzzler for physicians.

The possibilities listed above can be investigated rather simply with modern medical equipment for blood agglutination tests, blood cultures, urine cultures, and others. Some, however, may require a brief hospital stay.

☆ ☆ ☆

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My wife and I are recent newlyweds, and I notice that she is always "cracking" her neck by tilting it from side to side.

She says it feels better after popping, but I'm getting worried it might be harmful. Is it? — D.R.

No. It is probably nothing more than a nervous habit, but a harmless one. I have known many persons to do the same thing. One cracked his neck only while seated, quietly reading a book. He lived to a ripe age and never quite got over this habit.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you please tell me what causes dark circles just below the eyes? Mine are dark and unsightly, especially during menstruation. How can I get rid of them? — Mrs. R. R.

The skin around the eyes is particularly thin and loose, a fact, you can prove for yourself by gently pinching a fold of this skin between your thumb and forefinger. Its transparency allows more of the blood pigment to show through, more so in the fair-skinned than in the dark or thicker-skinned persons.

The problem becomes more noticeable during menstruation because at these times the body retains liquid more readily, often causing the puffiness around the eyes and exaggerating the transparent effect.

No solution beyond the cosmetics counter, I'm afraid.

65 Legislative Bills Won't Be Acted On

By The Associated Press

Time has run out for 65 bills awaiting preliminary approval by the Legislature.

With the Legislature scheduled to adjourn Friday, there will not be time to take them up this session. They will still be before the Legislature when it reconvenes in January.

Most of them are minor bills, but there are a few major bills such as legalized private gambling, LB464; bonding for livestock packers, LB544; a coordinating commission for higher education, LB579, and legal aid for the elderly, LB590.

Also awaiting first round approval in January will be the Agriculture Committee's land use study proposal, LB443; a plan for health insurance for the poor and near poor, LB590, and a procedure for hearings on children expelled from school. Another bill, LB167, would have the Legislature set tax rates rather than leaving the chore to the State Board of Equalization.

One bill which the Legislature will have to consider quickly in January is LB120, which moves the primary election from May to September. Ralston Sen. Jerry Koch said the 1976 primary could be held in September if the bill is enacted in January.

Speaker Jules Burbach said he intended to leave about 65 bills for the Legislature to work on next session, but he said in addition, there are approximately 35 bills tabled or held in committee. That would increase the total of unfinished bills to 100, about 35 more than Burbach planned.

Also there are approximately 20 bills awaiting second-round approval. Burbach expressed doubt that they would all be in final form to be passed by the time the Legislature adjourns Friday.

There were 613 bills introduced into the Legislature this year.

Barnett Deletes Section On Public Drunkenness

In a tactical move to help his alcohol treatment act gain passage, Lincoln Sen. Wally Barnett Tuesday dropped the decriminalization of public drunkenness from the bill.

Barnett asked the Legislature to delete a section of LB237 which would have prohibited local governments from enforcing public drunkenness ordinances after July 1, 1977.

He said sheriffs were opposing the bill because it would no longer be a crime to simply be drunk in public.

The bill would still raise the state tax on beer by one cent a gallon and raise the tax on hard liquor by 25 cents a gallon. The increased taxes would help pay for alcohol treatment programs that would be conducted by Nebraska's six community mental health regions.

Barnett said his decision to drop decriminalization of public drunkenness was not permanent. He said he would attempt to get the increased liquor tax approved this year and fight the sheriffs on the public drunkenness portion at a later date.

Under Barnett's amendment, approved on a vote of 27-0, cities could adopt public drunkenness laws, but they could not hold a suspect for more than six hours without a judicial hearing.

Dworak Loses In Attempt To Earmark Tax Refunds

Columbus Sen. Donald Dworak lost 22-23 Tuesday in attempt to earmark $3.6 million in state aid to technical community colleges for refunds of unconstitutionally collected property taxes.

Dworak's proposal would have taken the $3.6 million from the $11.6 million in state aid to tech schools appropriated in LB216.

The amendment was opposed by Bellevue Sen. Frank Lewis, chairman of the Education Committee.

Lewis said the money should not be taken from the state aid to the schools.

Asked about the money for the refunds, Lewis said, "It will have to be done next year."

The schools' one-mill statewide property tax was declared unconstitutional last year by the Nebraska Supreme Court, which said it amounted to an unconstitutional state property tax.

Deere And Company Reports Earnings Up

Moline, Ill. (AP) — Deere and Company reported a 34% increase in earnings for the first half of this fiscal year, compared with the same period last year.

Sales for the first half, ending April 30, totaled $1.36 billion, up 31% from $1.04 billion the same period last year. Net income was $88.2 million, or $2.97 per share, compared with $66 million, or $2.23 a share the first half of 1974.

2-Prison Plan Survives Veto

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Rejecting gubernatorial objections, the Legislature Tuesday ordered two new state prisons to replace the decaying Men's Reformatory in Lincoln.

The decision signaled the end of a five-year journey by Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln to seek funds to begin prison construction in the state.

"It's been a long haul, but it's been worth it," an elated Luedtke told newsmen following the vote.

The major factor in Luedtke's decision to seek a third four-year legislative term last November was his desire to complete work on the correctional reform program initiated by his Judicary Committee at the beginning of this decade.

Enacted Over Veto

With at least 30 votes required, senators voted 31-9 to enact the prison bill, LB417, over Gov. J. James Exon's veto.

Moments later, a roll call vote produced a 34-13 count overriding the governor's veto of LB417A, the $700,000 appropriations rider with launches funding for the construction program.

"I am extremely pleased that the Legislature has finally allowed us to finish the job" of correctional reform, Luedtke said.

"And I want to give all due credit to the 'young Turks' who forced us back on the track we should have been on all along."

Two-Prison Plan

A number of young senators, including John Cavanaugh III of Omaha, Gary Anderson of Axtell, Steve Fowler of Lincoln, Douglas Bereuter of Utica and Frank Lewis of Bellevue, were active in changing LB417 from a single replacement prison proposal to a two-facility plan.

Exon wanted the single replacement proposal.

Luedtke sided with the first plan, then accepted the two-prison proposal as a more accurate reflection of the correctional reforms originally adopted by the Judiciary Committee.

Two smaller medium-minimum security facilities could provide more community-based programs for offenders, it was suggested.

Fez Presented

In tribute to Luedtke, the so-called "young Turks" presented him with a Turkish fez after Tuesday's votes.

Through Sen. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island, Exon offered one final proposal for a 300-inmate facility in Lincoln, costing $8.2 million, funded over a three-year period, with initial financing of $533,400.

If Exon's veto had been sustained, that amendment could have been added to LB609, a capital construction budget bill, Kelly said.

LB417 provides for construction of new prisons in Lancaster and Douglas Counties.

The Lincoln facility would hold 200 to 250 inmates, cost $5 million and be under construction by July 1, 1976.

The Douglas County facility would house 175 to 200 inmates, cost $4 million and be under construction by Jan. 1, 1977.

$700,000 To Plan

LB417A appropriates $650,000 to plan both facilities, and an additional $50,000 to plan for new maximum security facilities for 250 inmates, either modernizing or replacing the Penitentiary.

Luedtke said Exon's statements that the Legislature had grossly underestimated construction and operational costs for two prisons are "simply not true."

Costs can be accurately determined only after the plans are completed, he said.

Every hour the overcrowded and unsafe Reformatory stays open should "haunt us," Luedtke told senators.

'Just Plain Wrong'

As for the governor's preference for a single prison proposal, Anderson suggested: "He's just plain wrong."

Lewis said the Legislature is "going to do it as we see fit because that's a legislative responsibility."

What finally prevailed, Luedtke said, was "a concern for human needs, not just the almighty dollar."

Prison construction plans were approved by the Legislature in both 1973 and 1974, but fell both times to Exon vetoes.

Here is Tuesday's vote to provide the funding:

For: Anderson, Barnett, Bereuter, Burrows, Cavanaugh, Chambers, Cope, DeCamp, Duis, Fitzgerald, Fowler, Goodrich, Johnson, Koch, Kremer, F. Lewis, R. Lewis, Luedtke, Mahoney, Maresh, Marsh, Marvel, Mills, Moylan, Nichol, Rasmussen, Rumery, Savage, Schmit, Simpson, Skarda, Stoney, Syas, Warner.

Against: Burbach, Carsten, Clark, Dickinson, Dworak, George, Hasebroock, Kelly, Kennedy, Kime, Stull, Swigart, Wiltse.

Not voting: Keyes, Murphy.

Release Program Setting Important

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Serious security problems will arise if work release and educational release programs are based in the two new reformatory units, State Corrections Director Joseph Vitek said Tuesday.

The comment came Tuesday following the Legislature's decision to override Gov. J. James Exon's veto of a bill directing construction of two new medium-minimum security units in Lincoln and Omaha.

There apparently has been some confusion concerning whether work release and community corrections programs will be operated out of the two units. All work and educational release inmates now live outside the Penal Complex.

Proposal Mentioned

Gov. J. James Exon in his veto cited legislative reserachers' proposals to involve medium-minimum inmates in such programs.

Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln said no work release inmates will be based in the two reformatory units.

Luedtke said some had "a gross misunderstanding" of what had been proposed.

Like Reformatory

Legislative staffers said the two new medium-minimum security units will operate essentially as the aging Reformatory is now.

Vitek said he will rely on Luedtke's statement that work and educational release programs are not intended to operate out of the two units.

Vitek said he will make "a good faith effort" to see that the project is carried out.

Still, he said he has some philosophical problems with people who may want to operate the work and educational release programs out of the medium-minimum security units.

Such an arrangement is "unsatisfactory and causes men to fail," he said.

'Psychological Trauma'

Speaking from his experience as warden of the New Hampshire penitentiary, Vitek said having the work release inmate return to the medium-minimum security unit each night where he comes into contact with other inmates "creates a psychological trauma by itself."

In addition, Vitek said work release inmates might be pressured to smuggle contraband into the units and compromise security.

He said he has known some work release inmates to "deliberately goof off" so they are taken off work release and don't have to face the pressure.

Such a situation, he said, "causes a much higher failure rate."

Exon Signs Bill To Buy Hospital

Gov. J. James Exon has signed into law a bill that would allow purchase of the former St. Mary's Hospital in North Platte for use as a state office building.

The bill, LB215, calls for the state to pay not more than $500,000 for the building. About 10 state agencies now renting office space in North Platte could move into the former hospital.

The state will pay for the building in $50,000 installments over the next 10 years.

Senators To Eye Study Proposals

By The Associated Press

The Legislature's Executive Board is scheduled to consider 58 proposals for interim studies on a variety of subjects Wednesday.

Education is one of the main topics for consideration. The Appropriations and Education Committees have proposed studying the need for coordination of higher education. Waverly Sen. Jerome Warner has also proposed that two senators from each congressional district plus the appropriations and education chairman study higher education.

Omaha Sen. Glenn Goodrich has proposed an interim study of private schools in Nebraska, including curriculum, accreditation and tuition fees.

Another study affecting education would focus on state aid to public schools. The Revenue and Education Committees would be charged with that responsibility.

There is also a proposal by Axtell Sen. Gary Anderson to have the Education Committee study non-credit, non-degree post-secondary education opportunities.

The Judiciary Committee will be kept busy if all 11 proposed studies for it are approved.

Subjects they may study include sexual discrimination, a uniform criminal code, compensation for victims of crimes, consolidation of law enforcement agencies, operation of the Parole Board and handgun legislation.

The Public Works Committee has a proposal for it to study Nebraska laws on water and related land resources.

The Agriculture and Environment Committee has asked to continue its study of land use legislation.

The needs of handicapped persons would come under the scrutiny of the Education Committee.

Another study, which could have far-reaching implications, would be an investigation by the Health and Banking Committees of the problems surrounding medical malpractice insurance.

And if all that and more isn't enough to keep senators busy over the interim, there is a proposal to study the workload of the standing committees, especially the Appropriations Committee.

Well Drilling Bill Is Watered Down

By The Associated Press

The authority of Natural Resource Districts to stop irrigation well drilling under the proposed Nebraska Ground Water Management act was further restricted by the Legislature Tuesday.

Under an amendment offered by Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica, NRD's would be able to limit well drilling only if attempts at water allocation, pumping rotation and well spacing failed.

Bereuter said all three methods must be tried before well drilling could be stopped.

The Bereuter amendment, adopted on a vote of 26-10, also said the decision to prohibit drilling must be reviewed each year.

The Bereuter restrictions on the authority of Natural Resource Distgricts are in addition to restrictions already in the Ground Water Management act, LB577.

The bill is awaiting final approval by the Legislature.

The NRDs can use water controls only after an area has been declared water short by the director of the Department of water Resources. He can make the declaration only after a public hearing. The public hearing can be called only by the local NRD.

Sen. Dennis Rasmussen of Scotia added an amendment Tuesday to prevent the director of water resources from calling a public hearing without the approval of the local NRD. His amendment was adopted on a vote of 27-7.

Bellwood Sen. Loran Schmit lost 4-24 in an attempt to delay enactment of the bill for one year.

Schmit said some senators wanted to "do something even if it's wrong."

Aurora Sen. Maurice Kremer, said, "I feel we are already too late" because some areas of the state already have overdeveloped their water pumping potentials.

In arguing for his amendment, Bereuter said allowing NRDs to cut off drilling without first trying other conservation methods would be "the great Nebraska water robbery."

Bereuter said without his amendment, the bill allows the NRDs to prohibit a dryland farmer from sinking a well while his neighbors continue to pump.

Holbrook Sen. Richard Lewis, who originally added the section to the bill giving the NRDs the authority to stop drilling, said, "This problem is serious. This problem is real." Speaking of the Bereuter amendment, he said, "I don't think this does a thing to remedy the situation."

Bill Would Let Cities Appeal Land Use Rulings

The Legislature voted 26-0 Tuesday to allow cities and counties to appeal land use decisions of the State Office of Planning and Programming to the district and supreme courts.

The amendment was added to LB410 by Douglas Bereuter after other senators questioned the constitutionality of land use plans that did not provide for court appeal.

Open Meeting Law Bill Passes Second Hurdle

By United Press International

The Legislature Tuesday gave second-round approval to a bill which would strengthen Nebraska's open meeting law.

The voice vote to advance LB325 came after the senators approved amendments proposed by Sen. Gary Anderson, which would prevent public bodies from changing their agenda at meetings except for emergency matters and which would extend the period in which citizens may challenge action taken at closed meetings from 180 days to one year.

Anderson contended public bodies sometimes change their meeting agenda to confuse citizens wishing to speak on controversial issues.

The legislators then defeated an amendment which would have forced citizens who sued a public body and lost to pay the attorneys' fees for both themselves and the body they sued.

As the bill now stands, public bodies may go into executive session to discuss collective bargaining or litigation, discuss the contracting of security personnel or devices, discuss the physical or mental health or character of employes who do not request a public hearing for such discussions or for investigative proceedings.

Amendment Places Focus On Doctors For Families

By The Associated Press

The Legislature Tuesday approved an amendment placing emphasis on family physicians in a bill authorizing the University of Nebraska-Medical Center to expand its residency and internship program.

The amendment, offered by Holbrook Sen. Richard Lewis, requires the new residencies be in a family practice unless patient demand indicates a need for specialists in specific areas.

The amendment was added to LB571, which was awaiting final approval.

The bill would increase the number of residencies and internships from 238 to 320. It is designed to encourage more doctors to locate in Nebraska.

Senators To Eye Study Proposals

By The Associated Press

The Legislature's Executive Board is scheduled to consider 58 proposals for interim studies on a variety of subjects Wednesday.

Education is one of the main topics for consideration. The Appropriations and Education Committees have proposed studying the need for coordination of higher education. Waverly Sen. Jerome Warner has also proposed that two senators from each congressional district plus the appropriations and education chairman study higher education.

Omaha Sen. Glenn Goodrich has proposed an interim study of private schools in Nebraska, including curriculum, accreditation and tuition fees.

Another study affecting education would focus on state aid to public schools. The Revenue and Education Committees would be charged with that responsibility.

There is also a proposal by Axtell Sen. Gary Anderson to have the Education Committee study non-credit, non-degree post-secondary education opportunities.

The Judiciary Committee will be kept busy if all 11 proposed studies for it are approved.

Subjects they may study include sexual discrimination, a uniform criminal code, compensation for victims of crimes, consolidation of law enforcement agencies, operation of the Parole Board and handgun legislation.

The Public Works Committee has a proposal for it to study Nebraska laws on water and related land resources.

The Agriculture and Environment Committee has asked to continue its study of land use legislation.

The needs of handicapped persons would come under the scrutiny of the Education Committee.

Another study, which could have far-reaching implications, would be an investigation by the Health and Banking Committees of the problems surrounding medical malpractice insurance.

And if all that and more isn't enough to keep senators busy over the interim, there is a proposal to study the workload of the standing committees, especially the Appropriations Committee.

Well Drilling Bill Is Watered Down

By The Associated Press

The authority of Natural Resource Districts to stop irrigation well drilling under the proposed Nebraska Ground Water Management act was further restricted by the Legislature Tuesday.

Under an amendment offered by Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica, NRD's would be able to limit well drilling only if attempts at water allocation, pumping rotation and well spacing failed.

Bereuter said all three methods must be tried before well drilling could be stopped.

The Bereuter amendment, adopted on a vote of 26-10, also said the decision to prohibit drilling must be reviewed each year

The Bereuter restrictions on the authority of Natural Resource Distgricts are in addition to restrictions already in the Ground Water Management act, LB577.

The bill is awaiting final approval by the Legislature.

The NRDs can use water controls only after an area has been declared water short by the director of the Department of water Resources. He can make the declaration only after a public hearing. The public hearing can be called only by the local NRD.

Sen. Dennis Rasmussen of Scotia added an amendment Tuesday to prevent the director of water resources from calling a public hearing without the approval of the local NRD. His amendment was adopted on a vote of 27-7.

Bellwood Sen. Loran Schmit lost 4-24 in an attempt to delay enactment of the bill for one year.

Schmit said some senators wanted to "do something even if it's wrong."

Aurora Sen. Maurice Kremer, said, "I feel we are already too late" because some areas of the state already have overdeveloped their water pumping potentials.

In arguing for his amendment, Bereuter said allowing NRDs to cut off drilling without first trying other conservation methods would be "the great Nebraska water robbery."

Bereuter said without his amendment, the bill allows the NRDs to prohibit a dryland farmer from sinking a well while his neighbors continue to pump.

Holbrook Sen. Richard Lewis, who originally added the section to the bill giving the NRDs the authority to stop drilling, said, "This problem is serious. This problem is real." Speaking of the Bereuter amendment, he said, "I don't think this does a thing to remedy the situation."

Bill Would Let Cities Appeal Land Use Rulings

The Legislature voted 26-0 Tuesday to allow cities and counties to appeal land use decisions of the State Office of Planning and Programming to the district and supreme courts.

The amendment was added to LB410 by Douglas Bereuter after other senators questioned the constitutionality of land use plans that did not provide for court appeal

Open Meeting Law Bill Passes Second Hurdle

By United Press International

The Legislature Tuesday gave second-round approval to a bill which would strengthen Nebraska's open meeting law.

The voice vote to advance LB325 came after the senators approved amendments proposed by Sen. Gary Anderson, which would prevent public bodies from changing their agenda at meetings except for emergency matters and which would extend the period in which citizens may challenge action taken at closed meetings from 180 days to one year.

Anderson contended public bodies sometimes change their meeting agenda to confuse citizens wishing to speak on controversial issues.

The legislators then defeated an amendment which would have forced citizens who sued a public body and lost to pay the attorneys' fees for both themselves and the body they sued.

As the bill now stands, public bodies may go into executive session to discuss collective bargaining or litigation, discuss the contracting of security personnel or devices, discuss the physical or mental health or character of employes who do not request a public hearing for such discussions or for investigative proceedings.

Amendment Places Focus On Doctors For Families

By The Associated Press

The Legislature Tuesday approved an amendment placing emphasis on family physicians in a bill authorizing the University of Nebraska-Medical Center to expand its residency and internship program.

The amendment, offered by Holbrook Sen. Richard Lewis, requires the new residencies be in a family practice unless patient demand indicates a need for specialists in specific areas.

The amendment was added to LB571, which was awaiting final approval.

The bill would increase the number of residencies and internships from 238 to 320. It is designed to encourage more doctors to locate in Nebraska.

Omaha Ed Board Eyes Court Test

Omaha (AP) — The vice president of the Omaha School Board said Tuesday he hopes the board considers a court test of the legislative bill passed Monday setting up district election of board members.

John C. Barnhart said the test "might come to one of the board committees. I think somebody definitely will bring it up."

By a 30-16 vote, the Legislature overrode Gov. J. James Exon's veto of the bill introduced by Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha, setting the stage for election by district in 1976. Six Omaha School Board members would face election at that time.

Barnhart said he does not question the Legislature's authority to pass such a bill. But he said the point of a court challenge could be "do they or do they not have the authority to legislate for one class of school district?"

Omaha Supt. Owen A. Knutzen said, "I certainly don't like the notion of outstate senators imposing this on Omaha when they won't vote to impose it on themselves."

Knutzen said previous city elections have indicated Omahans don't want councilmen elected by district, and he assumes they feel the same about school board members.

Paul C. Kennedy, board president, said he thinks the bill may have passed because outstate senators picture Omaha as being a city where an elected board can't be responsive to the people. Therefore, he said, an appeal to have district elections hits a responsive chord.

Chambers said he thinks passage of the bill over the veto may signal the end of Knutzen's tenure.

"I think there's a strong likelihood the man is on his way out," Chambers said.

The senator added that Knutzen "won't have a rubberstamp board to insure him a contract."

Chambers said he based his opinion on the belief that Knutzen has made persons in various parts of the city unahppy.

Knutzen is serving under a three-year contract. It would take at least seven votes from the 12 board members to rehire him when the contract expires.

Election Commissioner Mike Boyle said boundaries for new Omaha School Board districts will be drawn by mid-June.

Chambers said the district method insures that there will be one person from each part of the city who represents the interests of those people.

Deputy Registrar Voter Sign-Up Proposal Nixed

An amendment approved Monday to permit deputy registrars to sign citizens up to vote was striken 28-14 by the Legislature Tuesday.

The amendment to LB435 was removed on a motion by Blair Sen. Walter George, who said it would result in "utter confusion."

The registrations would have been approved by a notary public.

"The notary public doesn't know where school districts, townships, precincts and fire districts are located," George said. He argued the change would make the registration process more difficult and confusing and many people who thought they were preperly registered would find they were not when they went to vote.

Opinion Says Unicam Can't Sponsor Viets

By The Associated Press

An opinion by the attorney general's office Tuesday said the Nebraska Legislature could not constitutionally act as a sponsor for Vietnamese doctors who want to come to the state.

The opinion, requested by Waverly Sen. Jerome Warner, said, "Such sponsorship is not an exercise of the lawmaking power and is therefore not permitted when it intrudes upon the area reserved" for the governor's office.

Last week, the Legislature approved a resolution offering to sponsor Vietnamese doctors, refugees from the war in Southeast Asia, who might want to come here and practice medicine.

However, the opinion adds that although the Legislature cannot sponsor doctors, it would not be precluded from "enacting legislation to permit some other state agency to sponsor them."

Such legislation would be constrained by several constitutional limitations, the opinion said. Those include prohibitions against special legislation, providing credit of the state to aid any individual, and making appropriations for anything other than expenses of government.

The opinion points out that the constitution gives the Legislature the power to make laws, but the governor is to administer the affairs of state through the executive branch.

Neligh Sen. John DeCamp had prepared a rough draft of an amendment that would provide $50,000 in state funds for a program within the Health Department to aid in relocating the physician refugees.

But the constitutional prohibition which "limits appropriations to expenses of government" would appear to put a possible hurdle in front of such a plan.

The Legislature could possible drop funding from the plan and simply leave the Health Department to administer a program with authority to apply for and accept grants.

The opinion was written by Special Asst. Atty. Gen. Marilyn B. Hutchinson.

Keyes Unable To Hike Taxes On Corporations

Sen. Orval Keyes of Springfield Tuesday lost in a last minute attempt to reinstate the full corporate tax increase signed into law by Gov. J. James Exon last week.

The increase in LB123 was cut in a later legislative tax bill, LB589. The legislature eliminated the 20% increase in LB123 because it would have combined with LB589 increases to yield a 44% increase in corporate taxes. The legislature decided on a 32% increase.

Keyes attempted to amend LB589 to reinstate the full tax increase, but the legislature voted 13-28 not to consider Keyes' amendment.

Such legislation would be constrained by several constitutional limitations the opinion said Those include prohibitions against special legislation providing credit of the state to aid any individual and making appropriations for anything other than expenses of government

The opinion points out that the constitution gives the Legislature the power to make laws but the governor is to administer the affairs of state through the executive branch

Nehgh Sen John DeCamp had prepared a rough dratt of an amendment that would provide $50 000 in state funds for a program within the Health Department to aid in relocating the physician refugees

But the constitutional prohibition which limits appropriations to expenses of government would appear to put a possible hurdle in front of such a plan

The Legislature could possible drop funding from the plan and simply leave the Health Department to administer a program with authority to apply for and accept grants

The opinion was written by Special Asst Atty Gen Marilyn B Hutchinson

Keyes Unable To Hike Taxes On Corporations

Sen Orval Keyes of Springfield Tuesday lost in a last minute attempt to reinstate the full corporate tax increase signed into law by Gov J James Exon last week

The increase in LB123 was cut in a later legislative tax bill, LB589 The legislature eliminated the 20% increase in LB123 because it would have combined with LB589 increases to yield a 44% increase in corporate taxes The legislature decided on a 32% increase

Keyes attempted to amend LB589 to reinstate the full tax increase, but the legislature voted 13-28 not to consider Keyes' amendment.

Strip Mine Veto Override Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford formally vetoed a tough strip mine bill Tuesday and backers immediately began counting noses to see if an override is possible.

The House may attempt such a move Wednesday. A two-thirds vote is needed.

The bill would impose the first national environmental controls on coal strip mining, which accounts for about half of the 600 million tons of coal mined in the United States each year.

It would also prohibit strip mining where the land could not be restored to productive use afterward and would levy a tax of up to 35 cents a ton on coal to help reclaim more than one million acres of abandoned strip mine excavations, mostly in eastern coal states.

In his veto message, Ford said, "We can develop our energy sources while protecting our environment. But this bill does not do that."

Ford said the bill would create unemployment in the coal fields, especially in Appalachia. He also said it would drive up the price of coal and electricity to consumers.

Several times the House has passed strip mining legislation by well over the two-thirds. But backers are now concerned with what they claim is a massive lobbying campaign by the White House to switch the votes of Republicans who have supported the bill.

Both sponsors and opponents are predicting the House vote will be extremely close.

In the Senate, sponsors said they will have no difficulty in mustering enough votes to override a veto.

"I think the White House has given up over here and is concentrating its efforts on the House," said Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., a Senate sponsor of the bill.

Ford opposed the bill for essentially the same reasons that prompted him to veto an almost identical bill last December. That "pocket veto" was exercised after Congress had adjourned and no attempt could be mounted to challenge it.

Ford's veto message came to Congress a day after the White House and Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb announced that the President had decided to veto the bill.

The bill, a compromise between earlier versions passed in both chambers, was approved earlier this month by a voice vote in the Senate and a 293 to 115 vote in the House.

But among those voting for the bill in the house were 77 Republicans. The margin of passage was 21 votes above two-thirds of those voting, so that if Republicans voted in a bloc it would probably doom the bill.

"The White House has been busy making phone calls to Republicans," said a House Democratic source. "There is a lot of horse-trading going on."

Curtis Backs Ford Veto

Washington (UPI) — Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., said Tuesday he would back President Ford's veto of the strip mining bill.

"This bill would greatly lessen coal production and increase unemployment in this country by at least 36,000 persons," Curtis said. "At the same time this bill designed to control strip mining would create a new government bureaucracy of some 2,000 persons and increase our dependence on Mideast Oil."

Curtis noted there is no coal mining activity in Nebraska, but the bill to set standards for surface mining would "increase the utility bills of all Americans."

Curtis was among the Republican leaders briefed by the President before he vetoed the bill.

Striking Painters To Vote On Offer

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Striking painters will vote Wednesday on the latest offer by construction companies to end the nine-day-old work stoppage which has paralyzed major construction in Lincoln.

Union officials gave the latest offer's chances even odds for acceptance by the 65 painters. They said it differs little from a proposal defeated by the union membership last Wednesday by a 3-1 margin.

Leonard Lorenzen, spokesman for Lincoln Painters Local 1923, said the latest offer "didn't really excite" the four-man negotiating committee and added it is being offered to the membership without a recommendation.

According to Dean Kratz, Lincoln representative of the Building Construction Employers Association (BCEA), the latest proposal includes the original pay offer (an 85¢ per hour increase now, followed by a 7½¢ increase on Oct. 1 and a 50¢ per hour increase on April 1, 1976).

The painters want to leave next year's pay raise open to negotiation. Kratz said that demand exceeds what the BCEA gave nine other unions recently.

Kratz said the offer on the structural steel pay issue is essentially the same. The painters were seeking top scale for work on exterior columns from the ground floor up instead of just above the first 40 feet.

The latest offer, Kratz said, would give the structural steel pay to painters on ladders working above the 30-foot level.

Another offer concerning safety hooded masks has been modified. The latest offer requires painters to wear the masks only in enclosed areas where air circulation is poor.

Lorenzen said, "Well, I feel with the modifications threre is a 50-50 chance of adoption. If they accept it, it won't be by a wide margin.

"We're hoping we can get this strike over with."

Lorenzen said the negotiating team was split on whether the offer should be accepted.

Mel Kurpjuweit, a member of the negotiating team, said the offer will be explained to the membership at a meeting which will tentatively be held at 7 a.m., Wednesday at the Labor Temple.

"We'll explain the offer and let them vote," he said.

He said the BCEA offer was made during a 7½-hour negotiating session Tuesday.

The strike has sent pickets to all major construction sites in Lincoln, including the National Bank of Commerce project, the new federal office building, the new state office building, the UNL fieldhouse, the county juvenile attention center and the Ruth D. Hill School.

Construction companies affected by the strike include: Morrison Knudson Co., Henry L. Beck Co., Olson, Kingery, M.W. Anderson, Meyers, Dwight E. Nelson, Walter J. Broer and several subcontractors.

County Consolidation Plan Draws Criticism

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

A plan to consolidate 18 small county road maintenance sheds into four larger districts has drawn some criticism from county residents, particularly people living in the Malcolm and Raymond areas.

An attorney for several dozen county residents opposed to the consolidation Tuesday asked the County Board for a "moratorium on consolidation efforts."

The board listened to the arguments, presented their own support of County Engineer Marv Nuernberger's consolidation proposal, agreed to accept petitions bearing 583 names of residents opposed to the consolidation, but did not agree to any moratorium.

Under Nuernberger's plan, the 18 maintenance stations, located in many of the county's villages, would be combined into four units, two in the southern and two in the northern part of the county.

The first site — to test the quadrant plan — is Waverly, where purchase negotiations for a former grain storage land are currently underway.

The Waverly site would also temporarily house all the fuel storage tanks now at the West O St. facility. The O St. tanks are unsafe, Nuernberger said.

The petitions, presented by attorney Steve Burns, contended that the central maintenance depot would be moved from West O St. to Waverly — false information, according to Nuernberger.

The O St. location will eventually be closed down, Nuernberger said, but not moved to Waverly. Maintenance operations may be put in each of the four consolidated units or may be included as a part of bids for new equipment, so that the department is no longer responsible for major repairs, he said.

Burns told the board that the Waverly site is not a good testing area, because with only two villages, it is not representative of the other quadrants.

The problems and priorities of servicing an area like the southeast section of the county, with seven or eight villages, is different from servicing an area where there is one very large and one very small community, Burns said.

Burns emphasized the problem of fast snow removal from those county roads leading from villages into Lincoln so that residents can get to work quickly.

Fensler Named President Of Nebraska Farmer Co.

Bob Fensler, Lincoln, has been named president of the Nebraska Farmer Co., a subsidiary of Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc., succeeding Tom Hickey who retired April 30.

Hickey served the publication for 41 years.

Fensler was also named publisher. He has been advertising manager for the past 11 years. He began his career with the company in 1955 as an advertising representative following several years with the Lincoln Journal-Star Printing Co., Western Paper Co., and as a lieutenant in the U.S. Army Air Corps.

Fensler is a member of the board of directors of the national Agricultural Publisher's Assn. and of Farm Publications Report. He also serves as a director and secretary of the State Farm Magazine Advertising Bureau and is New York supervisor of Midwest Unit Farm Publications.

Harry R. Anderson, assistant advertising manager for the past three years, was appointed to succeed Fensler as advertising manager of the farm magazine.

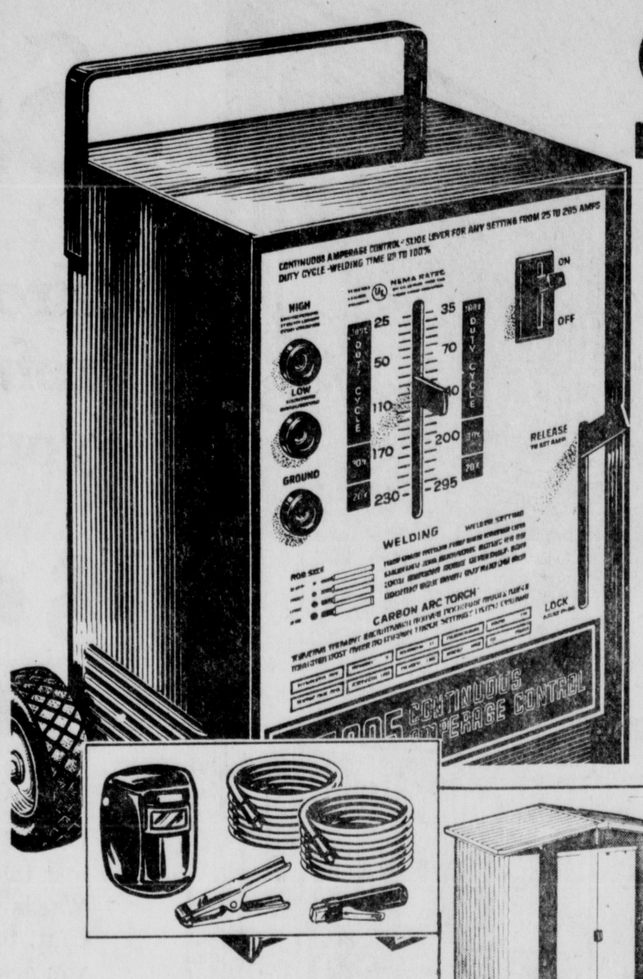

The Nebraska Farmer Co., headquartered in Lincoln, publishes the Nebraska Farmer and the Colorado Rancher and Farmer. Jim Austin, vice president of Nebraska Farmer Co., was named publisher of the Colorado Rancher & Farmer, with offices in Denver.

Striking Painters To Vote On Offer

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Striking painters will vote Wednesday on the latest offer by construction companies to end the nine-day-old work stoppage which has paralyzed major construction in Lincoln.

Union officials gave the latest offer's chances even odds for acceptance by the 65 painters. They said it differs little from a proposal defeated by the union membership last Wednesday by a 3-1 margin.

Leonard Lorenzen, spokesman for Lincoln Painters Local 1923, said the latest offer "didn't really excite" the four-man negotiating committee and added it is being offered to the membership without a recommendation.

According to Dean Kratz, Lincoln representative of the Building Construction Employers Association (BCEA), the latest proposal includes the original pay offer (an 85¢ per hour increase now, followed by a 7½¢ increase on Oct. 1 and a 50¢ per hour increase on April 1, 1976).

The painters want to leave next year's pay raise open to negotiation. Kratz said that demand exceeds what the BCEA gave nine other unions recently.

Kratz said the offer on the structural steel pay issue is essentially the same. The painters were seeking top scale for work on exterior columns from the ground floor up instead of just above the first 40 feet.

The latest offer, Kratz said, would give the structural steel pay to painters on ladders working above the 30-foot level.

Another offer concerning safety hooded masks has been modified. The latest offer requires painters to wear the masks only in enclosed areas where air circulation is poor.

Lorenzen said, "Well, I feel with the modifications threre is a 50-50 chance of adoption. If they accept it, it won't be by a wide margin.

"We're hoping we can get this strike over with."

Lorenzen said the negotiating team was split on whether the offer should be accepted.

Mel Kurpjuweit, a member of the negotiating team, said the offer will be explained to the membership at a meeting which will tentatively be held at 7 a.m., Wednesday at the Labor Temple.

"We'll explain the offer and let them vote," he said.

He said the BCEA offer was made during a 7½-hour negotiating session Tuesday.

The strike has sent pickets to all major construction sites in Lincoln, including the National Bank of Commerce project, the new federal office building, the new state office building, the UNL fieldhouse, the county juvenile attention center and the Ruth D. Hill School.

Construction companies affected by the strike include: Morrison Knudson Co., Henry L. Beck Co., Olson, Kingery, M.W. Anderson, Meyers, Dwight E. Nelson, Walter J. Broer and several subcontractors.

County Consolidation Plan Draws Criticism

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

A plan to consolidate 18 small county road maintenance sheds into four larger districts has drawn some criticism from county residents, particularly people living in the Malcolm and Raymond areas.

An attorney for several dozen county residents opposed to the consolidation Tuesday asked the County Board for a "moratorium on consolidation efforts."

The board listened to the arguments, presented their own support of County Engineer Marv Nuernberger's consolidation proposal, agreed to accept petitions bearing 583 names of residents opposed to the consolidation, but did not agree to any moratorium.

Under Nuernberger's plan, the 18 maintenance stations, located in many of the county's villages, would be combined into four units, two in the southern and two in the northern part of the county.

The first site — to test the quadrant plan — is Waverly, where purchase negotiations for a former grain storage land are currently underway.

The Waverly site would also temporarily house all the fuel storage tanks now at the West O St. facility. The O St. tanks are unsafe, Nuernberger said.

The petitions, presented by attorney Steve Burns, contended that the central maintenance depot would be moved from West O St. to Waverly — false information, according to Nuernberger.

The O St. location will eventually be closed down, Nuernberger said, but not moved to Waverly. Maintenance operations may be put in each of the four consolidated units or may be included as a part of bids for new equipment, so that the department is no longer responsible for major repairs, he said.

Burns told the board that the Waverly site is not a good testing area, because with only two villages, it is not representative of the other quadrants.

The problems and priorities of servicing an area like the southeast section of the county, with seven or eight villages, is different from servicing an area where there is one very large and one very small community, Burns said.

Burns emphasized the problem of fast snow removal from those county roads leading from villages into Lincoln so that residents can get to work quickly.

Burns wanted a moratorium on the Waverly site so that his clients could collect more petition signatures.

The Waverly site was chosen primarily because there was a positive response from the residents, Board Chairman Jan Gauger said.

Nine Men Apply For County-City Building Official

Nine men, the majority from Lincoln and Omaha, have applied for the newly created position of county-city building administrator, according to the City Personnel Department.

The building administrator will run the daily operations of the County-City Building under the newly formed Building Commission, a board of two city councilmen, two county commissioners and three lay people.

The position currently carries an approximate $13,000 to $16,000 salary range, but that might be adjusted upward, the Building Commission decided Tuesday morning.

The candidates to date are from Lincoln, Omaha, Beatrice and Council Bluffs, a personnel department represenative said. Friday is the closing day for applications.

Henderson Children Help Boost Donations

Contributions to the Lincoln Red Cross tornado fund, helped by a donation from four Henderson, Neb., children who washed bicycles to earn their gift, totaled $1,582 Tuesday.

That brought the total contributed to the Lincoln fund to $25,674.28.

Laurie and Kristi Wood and their neighbors Jaenene and Jackie Regier in Henderson sent $1.40 "to help the houses in the tornado."

They wrote that "The thing we did to get the money was wash bikes."

Wheelchair Bandit Gets Two Years' Probation

Omaha (AP) — James Alan McMahon, 28, charged with obtaining money by false pretenses from several banks here while operating from a wheelchair, was placed on two years' probation Monday.

District Judge James Buckley imposed the sentence on McMahon, ordering him to make restitution. He has been placed on probation in Lincoln for a similar offense.

Police said the Cornhusker Bank reported a man in a wheelchair came in Sept. 5 and opened an account under a name and address that later proved to be fictitious.

Eight days later, police said, the man deposited three checks totaling $1,804 and withdrew $104. They said the next day he returned and withdrew $1,100. The deposited checks proved to be bogus and the bank reported a loss of $1,204, police said.

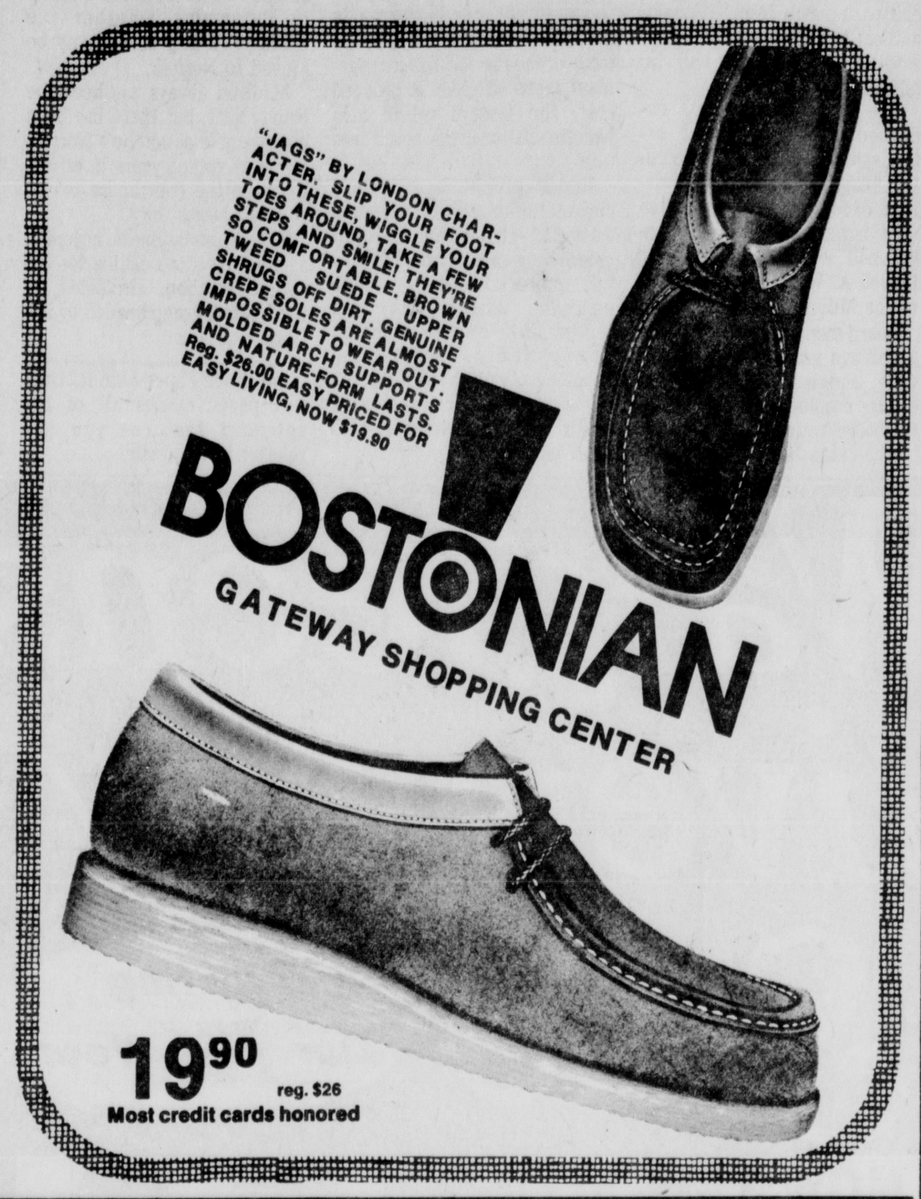

Similar incidents were reported about the same time by the Douglas County Bank and the Southwest Bank of Omaha.

McMahon was charged with obtaining money by false pretenses in Lincoln following complaints of similar incidents at four banks there. Three of those banks reported losses of nearly $3,800.

McMahon, who is confined to a wheelchair, served as an unsalaried counselor in a YMCA youth-assistance program that operated an employment service for "high-risk" youths and counseled runaways in 1971, officials said.

Keiner, Former Radio Executive In Omaha, Dies

Omaha (AP) — Word was received here of the death of John "Jack" Keiner, former Omaha radio executive and an Emmy award winning producer.

Keiner, who was 46, began his career as a producer at KOIL radio station in Omaha.

He worked for radio and television stations in New York and San Diego, Calif. There he won two Emmys for producing TV programs about protecting California's natural beauty and for covering the California freeway system.

The funeral was Monday. He died of a heart attack at his Palm Springs, Calif., home. At the time of his death he was a free lance advertising and promotion executive.

CPA's Install New President

Omaha (AP) — James A. Herbert of Omaha was installed Tuesday as president-elect of the Nebraska Society of Certified Public Accountants, to serve next year.

Duane L. Thelen of Omaha is president this year, succeeding Robert G. Hinrichs of Lincoln.

Other officers are Raymond L. Huelskamp of Omaha, secretary, and Robert A. Helm of Lincoln, treasurer.

Elected directors for two-year terms were Harold E. Hoff and Larry R. Larson, both of Omaha. William A. Kuntz of Omaha was named to a one-year term.

Phone Pioneer Association Officers Told

Arthur Sharp of Lincoln was announced as the new president of the Frank H. Woods Telephone Pioneer Assn. at the group's 34th anniversary banquet and reunion.

Sharp is employe relations supervisor for The Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co. at Lincoln. He succeeds Tom Goldenstein of Lincoln as president.

Other officers named in the statewide election were: Jack Caldwell, Lincoln, first vice president; Darlene Remmers, Lincoln, second vice president, and Loal Genrich, Lincoln, treasurer.

Jack Geist and Clarence Schleufer, both of Lincoln, were elected to the association's executive committee. Marie Buttery of Lincoln is secretary of the association.

Meritorious service awards were presented to Ernest Royce, Lincoln, A. L. Ager, Lincoln, and posthumously to Ralph Connors. Life memberships were announced for Rolland Winders and Keith Knudsen, both of Lincoln.

Henderson Children Help Boost Donations

Contributions to the Lincoln Red Cross tornado fund, helped by a donation from four Henderson, Neb., children who washed bicycles to earn their gift, totaled $1,582 Tuesday.

That brought the total contributed to the Lincoln fund to $25,674.28.

Laurie and Kristi Wood and their neighbors Jaenene and Jackie Regier in Henderson sent $1.40 "to help the houses in the tornado."

Tech College Board Guessing On Budget

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Rendered temporarily helpless as its future sits pliable in pending legislative bills, the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College Area Board was forced into guesswork Tuesday in considering its 1975-76 budget.

Still subject to legislative changes are LB344, to operate the state community college system, and LB216, to pay part of the bills from state tax funds. Final action on the two bills is expected late this week.

"Frankly," said Southeast Area President Robert Eicher, "if LB344 passes, we probably would not exceed the recommendations of the fiscal office this year."

Budget Recommended

The Legislative Fiscal Analyst has recommended a $5.5 million budget for the three-campus Southeast Area, including $4.2 million in general fund dollars. However, local taxation authority provided in LB344 would significantly reduce that state tax obligation.

The analyst's recommendation would put Southeast "on a very strict continuation budget next year," which the college area could live with, Eicher said.

If the Legislature passes LB344 without an emergency clause, thus delaying its first effective date until late August, "We would have financial problems," he said.

Collection Lags

Eicher noted collection lags would result in July and August to meet payroll and other encumbrances in the switch from current legislation.

And "even if we operate with deficit spending next year — which I think we will" under LB344, Eicher said once the funding mechanisms get into operation, the college areas will "catch up."

However, he cautioned the board that such expected deficits shouldn't prompt curtailment of planned or needed programs or activities.

The Southeast board also discussed the possibility of raising tuition on the Fairbury, Lincoln and Milford campuses. Members were receptive to that, if necessary, and especially if expressed as legislative intent.

Budgets In Limbo

But until the governor finally signs community college legislation, the Southeast and the five other college area boards' budget considerations are in limbo.

The Southeast members scheduled a special meeting for 9 a.m. June 4 to discuss only budget items for the year beginning July 1, and projections which then can be made for 1976-77. The board will meet at the Bryan Center, 1701 S. 40th.

The board also discussed analyzing area employers' skill needs from Southeast Community College graduates, in concert with providing local return for local funding and control. Eicher expressed concern, however, about whether area needs can be met with restrictive continuation budgets.

In another funding trouble-spot, the board directed its attorney Doug Curry to draft proposed changes in the trust indenture for the Fairbury campus dormitory, to allow a change in use. The Southeast area has been unable to make payments under current stipulated use as a dorm and cafeteria, because of vacancy rates resulting in insufficient income.

To Be Sent To HUD

If approved, the board will submit the proposals to U.S. Housing and Urban Development (HUD) officials in June. JUD owns the dorm. Board members also ordered payment of $8,145 in interest, from reserve funds, due last October on the dorm bonds.

Eicher noted that some other schools are paying for dorm maintenance costs out of state tax sources, prohibited in the Fairbury dorm indenture. If that were changed to allow college staff use, "We would be authorized to make payment from the general fund," Eicher said, and could end the problem of delinquent payments.

In other business, Don Searcy, Nebraska Bicentennial Commission director, tabbed Southeast as the first bicentennial college in Nebraska.

In presenting Eicher and Board Chairman Robert Wekesser of Lincoln a bicentennial flag, Searcy recognized Southeast's series of programs, "Bicentennial — Celebrating Our Heritage and Future," which he said is unlike any other in Nebraska.

About 200 adults have enrolled in 18 different bicentennial classes, ranging from Nebraska authors to contemporary issues. Additional programs will be added in 1976.

The board unanimously endorsed the concept of establishing a Southeast Community College Educational Foundation, to serve the 15-county area with numerous funds. One envisioned would be named for Lowell A. Welsh, past president of the Milford campus.

Board members also discussed a uniform grading system areawide, and a tuition policy for college employes, both proposed for board actioon in June.

The standardized grading system would be fully computerized for use beginning in the fall quarter, Eicher said. As well as making records management more efficient at reduced cost, the system would also benefit students, the board was told.

Under proposals for adult course tuition, to be effective July 1, full-time college employes would pay only $1 plus any materials fees to take courses which have no maximum or require minimum enrollments. Part-time employes would be eligible likewise, if their supervisors deem the study beneficial to their jobs.

Election Date Set

Madison (AP) — County commissioners Tuesday set July 29 as the date of a special election to determine whether the Madison County seat should be moved to Norfolk.

Madison always has been the county seat, but there has been considerable action by a Norfolk group in recent years in efforts to move the courthouse to the county's largest city.

The commissioners accepted as valid petitions calling for the special election, circulated by the Norfolk group headed by Dr. Gordon Adams.

Campus Police Seek Suspect Who Carried Rifle Into Building

Campus police said an escaped mental patient walked into the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Architectural Hall Monday carrying a rifle.

Police said the man, a former architecture student who took graduate courses, but did not finish, asked to see Homar Puderbaugh, chairman of the Architecture Dept.

The man left Arch Hall after a secretary told him that Puderbaugh was out of town.

The man had threatened architecture faculty members several months ago. He was admitted to the Lincoln Regional Center in December, 1974, and escaped several days later, police said.

The man was still being sought Tuesday night.

Burned Woman, Child Serious

A woman and child flown to St. Elizabeth Community Health Center Monday night from Alliance after sustaining severe burns remained in serious condition Tuesday.

Mrs. Felix Dubray, 37, and Chris PicketPin, 3, were burned when Mrs. Dubray tried to start a car by priming the carburetor with gasoline. The gas ignited and the can exploded.

If approved, the board will submit the proposals to U S. Housing and Urban Development (HUD) officials in June JUD owns the dorm Board members also ordered payment of $8,145 in interest, from reserve funds, due last October on the dorm bonds

Eicher noted that some other schools are paying for dorm maintenance costs out of state tax sources, prohibited in the Fairbury dorm indenture If that were changed to allow college staff use, "We would be authorized to make payment from the general fund," Eicher said, and could end the problem of delinquent payments

In other business, Don Searcy, Nebraska Bicentennial Commission director, tabbed Southeast as the first bicentennial college in Nebraska

In presenting Eicher and Board Chairman Robert Wekesser of Lincoln a bicentennial flag, Searcy recognized Southeast's series of programs, "Bicentennial — Celebrating Our Heritage and Future," which he said is unlike any other in Nebraska

About 200 adults have enrolled in 18 different bicentennial classes, ranging from Nebraska authors to contemporary issues. Additional programs will be added in 1976.

The board unanimously endorsed the concept of establishing a Southeast Community College Educational Foundation, to serve the 15-county area with numerous funds. One envisioned would be named for Lowell A. Welsh, past president of the Milford campus.

Board members also discussed a uniform grading system areawide, and a tuition policy for college employes, both proposed for board actioon in June.

The standardized grading system would be fully computerized for use beginning in the fall quarter, Eicher said As well as making records management more efficient at reduced cost, the system would also benefit students, the board was told

Under proposals for adult course tuition to be effective July 1, full-time college employes would pay only $1 plus any materials fees to take courses which have no maximum or require minimum enrollments Part-time employes would be eligible likewise, if their supervisors deem the study beneficial to their jobs

Election Date Set

Madison (AP) — County commissioners Tuesday set July 29 as the date of a special election to determine whether the Madison County seat should be moved to Norfolk.

Madison always has been the county seat, but there has been considerable action by a Norfolk group in recent years in efforts to move the courthouse to the county's largest city

The commissioners accepted as valid petitions calling for the special election, circulated by the Norfolk group headed by Dr. Gordon Adams.

Campus Police Seek Suspect Who Carried Rifle Into Building

Campus police said an escaped mental patient walked into the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Architectural Hall Monday carrying a rifle.

Police said the man, a former architecture student who took graduate courses, but did not finish, asked to see Homar Puderbaugh, chairman of the Architecture Dept

The man left Arch Hall after a secretary told him that Puderbaugh was out of town

The man had threatened architecture faculty members several months ago He was admitted to the Lincoln Regional Center in December 1974, and escaped several days later, police said

The man was still being sought Tuesday night

Hardin: World Can Feed Itself

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Clifford Hardin, former chancellor at the University of Nebraska who left Nebraska to become U.S. secretary of agriculture, was back in Lincoln Tuesday visiting friends and speaking at a luncheon sponsored by the National Bank of Commerce.

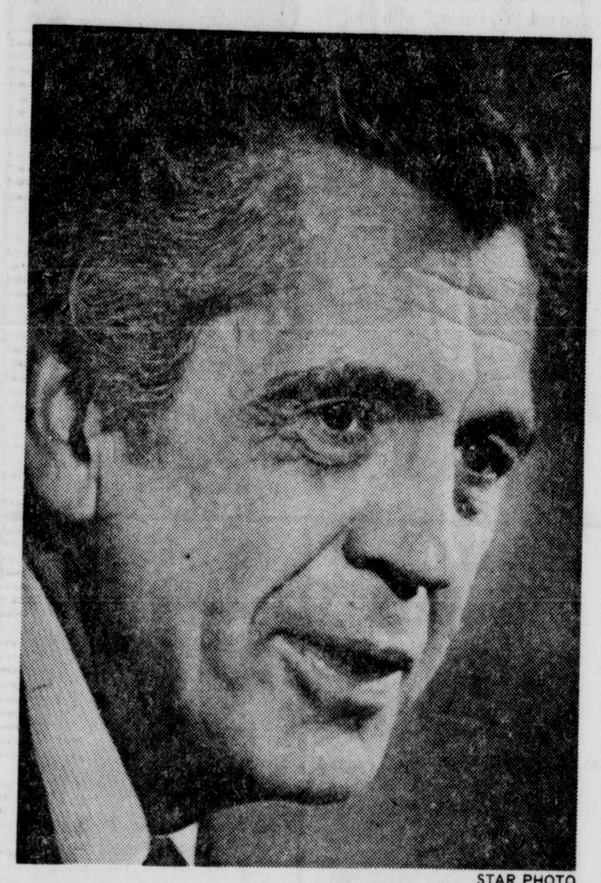

Hardin told the gathering that "If the developing nations make needed changes in their food policy, and if the developed nations provided them with technical assistance, it should be possible for the world to feed its population in the year of 2000 at a better rate than it does now."

Hardin predicted that the world demand for food would increase at an average rate of 5% per year into the 1980s and beyond.

Population Growth

Hardin noted that unprecedented population growth was "the other side of the food problem." He concentrated on production and distribution of food in his talk.

Hardin described the current worldwide food problems as "a bubble or bulge in the production trend line." He said a combination of episodes including poor harvests in several countries, a two year cessation of fish meal production in Peru, and the currency revaluations had made U.S. grain cheap in other countries.

STAR PHOTO

Hardin . . . speaks on food problems.

"If we had anything like average crop weather in 1974, food problems might well be behind us now," he said.

'Russian Grain Deal'

Hardin noted that the "so called Russian grain deal," was large, sudden and disruptive, but its total dollar value was $915 million, while Japan had increased its purchases by $1.5 billion. Europe, with Russia excluded, had increased its purchases of grain by $2.5 billion in the same year.

"Obviously, population growth is one of the forces in food demand, but rising affluence is a more important matter," he said.

"As income levels increase, people start climbing what has been termed the food ladder. The first craving is for vegetable oil for people on starch diets. Next they want protein, including meats, and finally more luxury type items, such as food fruits and vegetables out of season," he said.

Hardin predicted that "we will again have surpluses of some crops." "Total food production in the world is increasing faster than the population is growing by a narrow margin, but the distribution isn't equal," he said.

Food Survey Made

During a news conference following his talk, Hardin noted that a recent survey of 74 nations revealed that a third of them were increasing their food production faster than their population, a third were holding their own, and the final third had a population that increased faster than its food production.

In commenting on the recently vetoed farm bill, Hardin said he would have opposed the increase in loan rates, but would not have opposed the target price concept as a means of providing farmers with some assurance "we wouldn't experience a price disaster. Obviously, farmers must find some means of recovering their increasing costs to produce food at all.

"Farmers have to be paid in order to produce, but even if all the starving nations suddenly struck oil and had the csah to buy enough food for their people we couldn't produce enough food to feed the entire world. They will have to do it themselves with their own soil and our technical help," he said.

U.S. Market Not Hurt

Hardin said he doubted that increasing another nation's ability to produce food really hurts U.S. markets.

"In almost every instance it makes them a better market for some U.S. farm products because they usually aren't buying anything from us now. They simply can't generate any foreign exchange to make purchases unless they can produce something to sell themselves," he said.

Hardin said companies such as Ralston Purina, of which he is an executive vice president, can and do play an important role in feeding the world.

He cited a valley in Columbia which changed from a pasture area to heavy crop production because his company built a mill to process sorghum there.

"Today they have a market for their sorghum and a thriving livestock industry because Purina built a plant there. We have plants in 23 countries and sell products in 48 countries. Only 14 Americans are involved in our overseas operations directly, but we have 8,000 employes in other nations creating jobs," he said.

Hardin predicted that most U.S. farm exports would be feed grains, but noted that there was some potential for developing a export market for better cuts of American beef in many nations.

Two More Towns Told Viet Doctors To Come

From Press Reports

Two more Nebraska communities — Weeping Water and Ravenna — received news Tuesday that South Vietnam refugee doctors will be arriving in those towns.

Mayor Byron Baker of Weeping Water said late Tuesday he thought the physician recruited to come to his town might be arriving Wednesday.

Baker and Councilman Bill Duff went to Camp Pendleton in California last week where they signed a contract which committed the physician identified as Dr. Nguyen, to come to the Cass County community. The doctor and his wife, who is a pharmacist, have three children.

Cash donations and pledges have been gathered in Weeping Water to support the doctor and his family while he prepares himself for taking the Nebraska medical examinations.

Ravenna residents are looking forward to the arrival, possibly this week, of Dr. Dan Nun Hung and his wife.

Jack Spiegel, publisher of the Ravenna News, went to Camp Pendleton last week to interview some of the immigrant physicians.

Meanwhile, Ravenna residents are going all out for the new doctor. He will locate in the Ravenna Clinic, and housing has been provided for him and his wife.

Multiple Sclerosis Fails To Ground Globetrotter

Clarkson (AP) — Robert (Bob) Tomasek was stricken with multiple sclerosis 22 years ago while he was in military service but he still gets around, even around the world.

After receiving his honorable discharge, Tomasek returned to Clarkson and set up a radio and television repair shop. However, after three years, his sight and balance prevented him from working.

In 1968, he decided to travel and has been around the world, including two trips to Europe, where he visited cousins in Czechoslovakia.

Tomasek, 45, gets along on two canes. But he is also able to travel around town by using a three-wheel cycle.

Omaha Pickets Protest Nonunion Cleanup Work

Omaha (AP) — An architect said pickets of Laborers Local 1140 stopped tornado cleanup and reconstruction work Tuesday until a nonunion cleanup crew was taken off the job.

A picket who did not disclose his name said "we've got too many guys out of work. If the cleanup work gets done, we're gonna do it."

Architect Roberg Teig said two pickets carried signs at the storm damaged Oak Park Building and one picket was in front of the adjacent Frost Car Care Center.

Teig, whose firm is directing repair work, said two of the pickets were protesting the hiring of a nonunion cleanup crew at the Oak Park Building. He said he was uncertain why the single picket was placed in front of the adjacent building.

Teig said pickets at the Oak Park Building were withdrawn after storm repair work had been delayed about three hours. He said he was negotiating for removal of the picket at the Frost Car Care Center.

Nebraskan Placed On Probation

Des Moines, Iowa (UPI) — A Nebraska man who pleaded guilty to the 1968 $10,000 robbery of the Plaza State Bank in Des Moines has been placed on probation after being sentenced to 25 years in the State Men's Reformatory at Anamosa, Iowa.

Polk County (Iowa) District Judge Waldo Wheeler released Stephen Paul Ranney, 29, of Omaha, on probation and recommended he be transferred to Nebraska.

According to court records, Ranney and another man robbed the Des Moines Bank at gunpoint June 5, 1968. Ranney was arrested by FBI agents last Jan. 1 in Las Vegas, Nev. The other suspect has not been apprehended.

No Change Seen In Grading Costs

Omaha (AP) — A Department of Agriculture official Tuesday put a considerable dent in opposition claims that the USDA's new beef grading standards will substantially increase the cost of grading beef.

Testifying before U.S. District Court Judge Robert V. Denney, David K. Hallett, chief of the USDA's Meat Grading Service, said, "I do not expect any material change in the time or cost of grading."

Denney is holding hearings on a suit filed by the Independent Meat Packers Association of Omaha, which is seeking to permanently enjoin the USDA from implementing the new standards.

The plaintiffs, who have been joined by 10 intervenor groups, claim the actual effort needed in going through the new stamping procedures and the mandatory yield grading if a carcass is quality graded will increase the packers costs. Those increases will have to be passed on to the consumer, they say.

Currently, two major methods are used to move carcasses through a packing plant:

—The chain method, which automatically pulls the carcasses past the grader.

—The rail method, which must be operated manually by pushing the carcasses.

In each case, the carcass hangs upside down.

The plaintiffs have claimed that the number of stamps placed on a carcass could be doubled in some instances.

However, Hallet said the new grading procedures will actually reduce the number of grading stamps placed on a carcass in a chain operation, and increase by only two the number of stamps needed on a rail operation.

Hallett added that the elimination of conformation body structure as a quality grading evaluator will be among a number of factors that will make it easier and less time consuming to judge a carcass. In addition, roller stamps now required on the brisket would be made optional, another time-saver, according to Hallett.

In addition, Hallet said the elimination of the upswing in the marbling-maturity relationship in cattle aged through 30 months will result in less time needed in the evaluation of quality grades.

The plaintiffs called three Omaha meat packers to the stand last week, each testifying that the new standards will increase their costs. The estimates varied from a 30% increase to a 100% increase.

To disclaim the increased cost angle and to show how nominal the grading cost is, Hallet said the nationwide average for grading beef is "slightly less than five cents" per 100 pounds of dressed carcass weight, or about one penny for every 20 pounds.

Under cross examination, Hallett did admit that the addition of mandatory yield grading will increase costs to some extent, saying, "I would not say there would not be some cost increase to some packers."

But, he added, such factors must be taken into account on a nationwide basis, not in isolated instances.

Hallett also noted that two informal studies have been done to test the speed of a grader using the new standards. In each case, Hallet said, the number of carcasses graded in a one-hour period was reduced, but not significantly.

Police Arrest 3 Youths

Three youths were arrested Tuesday night after a rock throwing incident near 23rd and Vine.

Police said the disturbance began when three girls threw rocks at a passing car. Five occupants of the car got out and an argument ensued.

A crowd gathered and police had some difficulty dispersing the 20-35 people involved.

Second shift police units were held overtime in case they might be needed.

Thone To Meet With Constituents

Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb., has scheduled four meetings with constituents during the Memorial Day congressional recess. The meetings will be held Saturday, May 24, 2-4 p.m. at the Gage County Courthouse in Beatrice; Thursday, May 29, 9-11 a.m. at the Nemaha County Courthouse in Auburn and 2-4 p.m. at the Jefferson County Courthouse in Fairbury; and Saturday, May 31, 2-4 p.m. at the Saunders County Courthouse in Wahoo.

Westgate School Rebuilding OKd

Omaha (AP) — A new, air-conditioned school will greet students at Westgate Elementary School when they return for the 1975-76 year, the District 66 Board of Education decided. The school was virtually destroyed by the May 6 tornado in Omaha. Despite the proposed addition of air conditioning, a multipurpose room and a tornado shelter, Supt. Vaughn Phelps said the district plans to rebuild the school for less than its estimated $1.6 million value.

SENCA Marks 9th Birthday

Auburn — A rededication ceremony marked the ninth birthday of the Southeast Nebraska Community Action at the Community Action Center here. Principal speaker was Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan.

Civic Center Feasibility Study Approved

Grand Island (UPI) — The City Council has authorized a feasibility study for a proposed civic center which could be built as part of Grand Island's Bicentennial efforts. The council voted to include in its upcoming budget not more than $20,000 for the civic center study. Steve Leininger, city Bicentennial chairman, said he had talked with 10 planning firms and the majority said the study could be accomplished at a cost from $15,000 to $20,000.

Two Summer Simmental Events Set

Seward — Simmental enthusiasts will have two events to attend in Nebraska this summer, according to Doug Brand of Seward, a member of the Nebraska Junior Simmental Association. On June 28, Midwest 4-H, FFA and Junior Simmental members will gather in Seward at the County Fairgrounds for the Blue Valley Simmental Expo, a steer and breeding heifer show. The Nebraska Junior Simmental Association and Nebraska Simmental Association will host their second annual Junior Field Day August 2 at the International Beef Breeders Progeny Test Farm at Palisade.

No Change Seen In Grading Costs

Omaha (AP) — A Department of Agriculture official Tuesday put a considerable dent in opposition claims that the USDA's new beef grading standards will substantially increase the cost of grading beef.

Testifying before U.S. District Court Judge Robert V. Denney, David K. Hallett, chief of the USDA's Meat Grading Service, said, "I do not expect any material change in the time or cost of grading."

Denney is holding hearings on a suit filed by the Independent Meat Packers Association of Omaha, which is seeking to permanently enjoin the USDA from implementing the new standards.

The plaintiffs, who have been joined by 10 intervenor groups, claim the actual effort needed in going through the new stamping procedures and the mandatory yield grading if a carcass is quality graded will increase the packers costs. Those increases will have to be passed on to the consumer, they say.

Currently, two major methods are used to move carcasses through a packing plant.

—The chain method, which automatically pulls the carcasses past the grader.

—The rail method, which must be operated manually by pushing the carcasses.

In each case, the carcass hangs upside down.

The plaintiffs have claimed that the number of stamps placed on a carcass could be doubled in some instances.

However, Hallet said the new grading procedures will actually reduce the number of grading stamps placed on a carcass in a chain operation, and increase by only two the number of stamps needed on a rail operation.

Hallett added that the elimination of conformation body structure as a quality grading evaluator will be among a number of factors that will make it easier and less time consuming to judge a carcass. In addition, roller stamps now required on the brisket would be made optional, another time-saver, according to Hallett.

In addition, Hallet said the elimination of the upswing in the marbling-maturity relationship in cattle aged through 30 months will result in less time needed in the evaluation of quality grades.

The plaintiffs called three Omaha meat packers to the stand last week, each testifying that the new standards will increase their costs. The estimates varied from a 30% increase to a 100% increase.

To disclaim the increased cost angle and to show how nominal the grading cost is, Hallet said the nationwide average for grading beef is "slightly less than five cents" per 100 pounds of dressed carcass weight, or about one penny for every 20 pounds

Under cross examination, Hallett did admit that the addition of mandatory yield grading will increase costs to some extent, saying, "I would not say there would not be some cost increase to some packers."

But, he added, such factors must be taken into account on a nationwide basis, not in isolated instances.

Hallett also noted that two informal studies have been done to test the speed of a grader using the new standards. In each case, Hallet said, the number of carcasses graded in a one-hour period was reduced, but not significantly.

Local Unit On Aging Praised

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln-Lancaster Commission on Aging was commended Tuesday as having one of the best-balanced programs in the country.

Dr. Arthur Fleming, U.S. commissioner on aging, in Lincoln to speak at a banquet honoring senior volunteers in the Retired Senior Volunteer Program, said he was very impressed with the Lincoln program. He congratulated those responsible for providing leadership to make the pgorams possible.

Fleming said he was also impressed that 46% of the funding for Lincoln's programs comes from sources other than federal funding and indicated he was hopeful that as the federal dollars increase, the older persons will benefit further.

'Scratching Surface'

Stressing the importance of utilizing the contributions and talents of senior citizens, Fleming said "we are just scratching the surface . . . and non-involvement leads to physical and spiritual deterioration."

Opposing the mandatory retirement age of some organizations, Fleming said under such a policy, there is no decision-making . . . "the calendar makes the decision for you."

He said such a policy is in direct conflict with the "dignity and worth of each human being" belief.

'Put On Shelf'

"Many older persons feel they have been put on the shelf," he said, adding that 18-20% of the nation's people 65 years of age and older live below the poverty threshold, and 5% or one million persons reside in skilled, intermediate or some other care facility.

"Once the opportunities are opened up for their continued involvement, the senior citizens have the obligation to take advantage and become involved," he said.

Fleming said he is confident that people are becoming more conscious of the issues affecting the senior citizen population and there is "momentum and acceleration" which is not entirely due to federal funding.

Progress is being made, according to Fleming, in the areas of transportation, income, legal assistance, nutrition, information and referral services and reaching minority groups which are major concerns of the elderly throughout the nation.

Increase Cited

He pointed to the 8% adjustment being made in the income floor of the elderly and Social Security recipients effective July 1.

"When you move up the level of income for older, more of them will be able to make all the decisions about their lives instead of being forced to have others make decisions for them," he said.

He said he is concerned about the some two million who are isolated and not being reached and who are therefore unaware of the resources available to them.

The volunteers are essential in helping identify these people and "building bridges," he said.

73 Pins Awarded

Seventy-three volunteers were awarded pins Tuesday night for having given between 50 and 250 hours of service in the volunteer program, and 36 were honored for donating in excess of 250 hours.

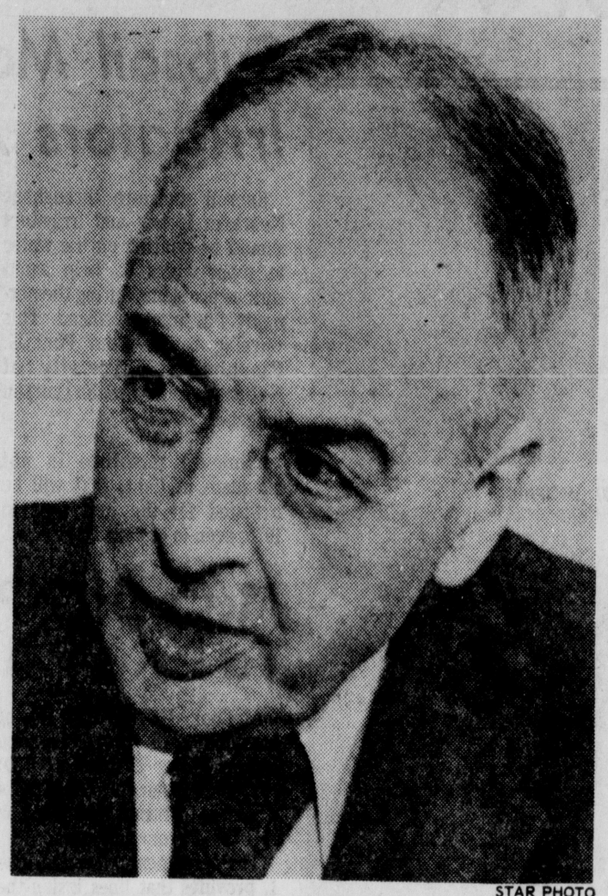

Special awards went to Gertrude Mehrens for 500 hours at Tabitha; L. Carroll Unland, 630 hours at Lancaster Manor United Cerebral Palsy and others; Florence Johnson, 800 hours as a "clown" and at Tabitha; Ralph Harden, 900 hours at St. Paul Methodist Senior Diners site, and Nellie Allen, 1,620 hours helping at the O Street Center and mending for the Good Neighbor Center.

The Retired Senior Volunteer Program is federally funded, part of the Action Agency and sponsored locally by the Lincoln-Lancaster Commission on Aging.

The program involves the recruitment and placement of retired persons over 60 in volunteer work in any of more than 70 agencies which request such help.

According to Pauline Anderson, director, these people do not replace paid staff nor depire others of employment.

"In every situation they provide services, courtesies and skills which would otherwise be lacking. They add an extra ingredient to the life of the community — love," she said.

Overtime Potato Tossed To DAS

State Fire Marshal Ace Backer said Tuesday he has turned the question of overtime compensation for state employes over to the State Department of Administrative Services.

State Personnel Director Roy Gardner wrote Backer a letter advising him to review employe records and to pay the compensation owed in accord with an attorney general's opinion.

Backer has received claims from the estate of Paul Thien, the late deputy fire marshal, and two men, Myron Piening and Virgil Tweton, for uncompensated overtime work.

The attorney general's opinion said claims can only be made for uncompensated overtime earned within two years of the time the claim was filed and at the rate paid at the time it was earned.

Backer said all records of employes "are fully intact" and said claims from the Nebraska Association of Public Employes about destruction of employe records "certainly wasn't a good statement."

Backer said, "The state certainly doesn't hide things from its employes and the public."

Airport Authority Draws Up Projects List

The Lincoln Airport Authority Monday approved and sent to the federal level a $2.3 million list of six projects that it wants to undertake during the coming fiscal year.

The list does not commit the authority to the projects, but it gives the federal level and the general public an idea of what the authority is considering.

Heading the list is extending and putting an overlay on a taxiway at the airport. The project would cost an estimated $1.4 milloin.

Next on the list is construction of a combined fire and maintenance building at a cost of $650,000.

Other projects include installation of apron lighting, a water main and a service road.

In other action, the board approved the purchase of a $119,000 snowblower, and four snowplows, total cost about $238,000 when delivered.

The board also accepted a bid of $1,272,812 from Constructors, Inc. for paving at the airport and a bid of $73,930 from Commonwealth Electric Co. for lighting.

In the midst of tossing around million-dollar figures, the board also reorganized. Incumbent Dick Joyce and newcomer Don Geis were sworn in.

Geis promptly made good on a campaign promise to work to make the new terminal more barrier-free to handicapped people.

Authority staff people were directed to work with the League of Human Dignity on the matter. Issues raised have been that the guardrails on the escalator should be extended, that the elelvator buttons should be lower, that Braille instructions should be placed at certain locations and that restroom doors should open more easily (for wheelchair users).

In other organizational activity Fred Eiche was elected chairman. Dick Joyce was installed as vice chairman, Joseph Hampton as secretary and Robert Phillips, outgoing chairman, as assistant secretary.

Author Denies Ford Is Called Dummy In Book

Jerusalem (UPI) — Political writer Matti Golan, author of a book banned for security reasons, denied a report that the manuscript quoted Secretary of State Henry Kissinger as calling then-Vice President Gerald Ford "a dummy."

"The name Ford did not appear in my book," Golan said, reacting to a report in the German newspaper Die Welt. Die Welt said Golan's book, "Confrontation and Disengagement," quoted Kissinger as calling Ford "a dummy" and going on to say, "I don't see how Nixon could pick him."

COLOR

ONE OF SIX COTTAGES . . . departure from Beatrice State Home's traditional wards.

Cottages Replace Wards

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Beatrice — Mod furniture, one triangular room after another, wild color everywhere — it hardly sounds like pioneering.

But six such cottages at the Beatrice State Home do exemplify a notable change in concept. And by mid-summer, 96 mentally retarded occupants will be moved in and reaping the benefits.

The pleasant cottages are a significant departure from the ward living style which has long characterized the institution. Homey yet highly functional, they point up a growing emphasis upon individualized care.

8-Bed Units

Of unconventional design, the six basically brick units are double-L shaped and are built entirely at ground level. Each has a pair of clearly defined eight-bed units, with each of the eight bedrooms shared by two residents.

Each cottage thus houses 16 persons under a plan which also includes two living rooms, a dining room, small den, utility room and office. The triangular pattern eliminates corridors and provides a feeling of spaciousness.

"The design attempts to effect a compromise between normalization and the special learning needs of the severely retarded," said Jerry F. Griepentrog, BSH director of programming. "It is also important to provide an environment which stimulates the senses of the residents."

Colors, shapes and textures consequently get much emphasis throughout the units. Since many of the future occupants have physical as well as mental handicaps, there are such special accommodations as grab-bar bath tubs, stepless entrances and wheelchair-high lavatories.

The cottages will be staffed around the clock, though there are no live-in facilities for counselors. A small kitchen will permit the preparation of snacks, but the main meals will still come from the home's centralized cooking facilities.

Each cottage cost about $125,000 with furnishings, approximately $26 per square foot. A second set of six has been approved by the appropriations committee but awaits clearance by the Legislature as a whole.

The first cottage, which will be home to 16 non-ambulatory teenage boys, will be occupied yet this month. The other five are scheduled for completion in July. All will house severely retarded.

Subsoil Moisture Reported Low; Irrigators Advised To Pour It On

Subsoil moisture throughout Nebraska is low and irrigators should be pouring on the water in many areas to help avoid serious problems during the normally hot months ahead. This warning comes from Paul E. Fischbach, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension irrigationist.

"Subsoil moisture is not adequate in fields that will be irrigated for the first time in 1975, even in eastern Nebraska," Fischbach said. Central Nebraska fields irrigated in 1974 require irrigation now to replace the subsoil moisture to five feet, he added.

Louis Daigger, district Extension irrigation specialist at the Panhandle Station, Scottsbluff, said the situation is much the same in western Nebraska. There is a relatively low plant water demand now, he said, and it is a good time to replenish soil water.

Daigger said that in a three-year trial at Scottsbluff, alfalfa used an average .16 inch of water per day for the first cutting. Usage jumped to .24 inch per day for the second and third cuttings.

During 1974, corn used an average of .24 inch per day from June 20-Sept. 1, according to Fischbach. Usage of .40 inch per day was common when temperatures soared to 100 degrees accompanied by high winds. He said this translates to a required net application of 14 inches during the period.

Although peak daily plant water use for July and August may be high, the specialists said, application rates may be less if there is adequate subsoil moisture.

Daigger pointed out, however, that sufficient water cannot be stored in some soils, like sandy loam, and it is advisable to determine soil texture and make an estimate of soil water holding capacity.

McCook, NPPD Agree To Power Arrangement

McCook (UPI) — The city of McCook and the Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) reached agreement Tuesday on a power contract for McCook and the surrounding area.

The agreement, effective June 1, provides that lines inside the city will become the property of McCook without cost. In turn, the city agreed to buy the fringe area system for $170,000, to be paid in annual installments of $23,097.

With interest added to the installment payments, total cost of the fringe area system will amount to $230,979.

The agreement also stipulates McCook will purchase its power from NPPD for 15 years with an automatic renewal for another 10 years. NPPD will lease the system from McCook during this period.

Discounting revenues from tax-supported agencies which now receive a discount on their power bills and any amounts due to application of fuel costs, NPPD will pay McCook 10% of the adjusted retail revenues.

This will serve as a lease payment. NPPD will be responsible for payment of all taxes and insurance.

Omahan Not Guilty Due To Insanity

Omaha (AP) — Edward Paul Bartunek Jr. of Omaha has been found innocent of second degree murder by reason of insanity at the time his wife Diane Kay was stabbed to death last October.

His attorney, Asst. Public Defender Ivory Griggs, said he expects the ruling will make Bartunek a free man in the near future.

District Judge James Buckley ordered that his finding be certified to the Douglas County Board of Mental Health. The board is to decide whether Bartunek "is either sane or mentally ill and a fit subject for custody and treatment in a hospital."

Griggs said in light of psychiatric reports on his client, he expects Bartunek to be found sane.

Griggs said Bartunek is not now confined but in accordance with state law, Buckley ordered that he be committed to the custody of the county director of medical services for a period not to exceed 30 days.

The director, Dr. David Bean, Douglas County Hospital administrator, testified at a January hearing that Bartunek was mentally competent to stand trial and would be a fit subject for release from the hospital if he adhered to a schedule of medication and was supervised.

Bartunek was released following that hearing.

He had been admitted to the hospital Oct. 21 after he was charged in the fatal stabbing of his 31-year-old wife.

Local Unit On Aging Praised

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln-Lancaster Commission on Aging was commended Tuesday as having one of the best-balanced programs in the country.

Dr. Arthur Fleming, U.S. commissioner on aging, in Lincoln to speak at a banquet honoring senior volunteers in the Retired Senior Volunteer Program, said he was very impressed with the Lincoln program. He congratulated those responsible for providing leadership to make the pgorams possible.

Fleming said he was also impressed that 46% of the funding for Lincoln's programs comes from sources other than federal funding and indicated he was hopeful that as the federal dollars increase, the older persons will benefit further.

'Scratching Surface'

Stressing the importance of utilizing the contributions and talents of senior citizens, Fleming said "we are just scratching the surface . . . and non-involvement leads to physical and spiritual deterioration."

Opposing the mandatory retirement age of some organizations, Fleming said under such a policy, there is no decision-making . . . "the calendar makes the decision for you."

He said such a policy is in direct conflict with the "dignity and worth of each human being" belief.

'Put On Shelf'

"Many older persons feel they have been put on the shelf," he said, adding that 18-20% of the nation's people 65 years of age and older live below the poverty threshold, and 5% or one million persons reside in skilled, intermediate or some other care facility.

"Once the opportunities are opened up for their continued involvement, the senior citizens have the obligation to take advantage and become involved," he said.

Fleming said he is confident that people are becoming more conscious of the issues affecting the senior citizen population and there is "momentum and acceleration" which is not entirely due to federal funding.

Progress is being made, according to Fleming, in the areas of transportation, income, legal assistance, nutrition, information and referral services and reaching minority groups which are major concerns of the elderly throughout the nation.

Increase Cited

He pointed to the 8% adjustment being made in the income floor of the elderly and Social Security recipients effective July 1.

"When you move up the level of income for older, more of them will be able to make all the decisions about their lives instead of being forced to have others make decisions for them," he said.

He said he is concerned about the some two million who are isolated and not being reached and who are therefore unaware of the resources available to them.

The volunteers are essential in helping identify these people and "building bridges," he said.

73 Pins Awarded

Seventy-three volunteers were awarded pins Tuesday night for having given between 50 and 250 hours of service in the volunteer program, and 36 were honored for donating in excess of 250 hours.

Special awards went to Gertrude Mehrens for 500 hours at Tabitha; L. Carroll Unland, 630 hours at Lancaster Manor United Cerebral Palsy and others; Florence Johnson, 800 hours as a "clown" and at Tabitha; Ralph Harden, 900 hours at St. Paul Methodist Senior Diners site, and Nellie Allen, 1,620 hours helping at the O Street Center and mending for the Good Neighbor Center.

The Retired Senior Volunteer Program is federally funded, part of the Action Agency and sponsored locally by the Lincoln-Lancaster Commission on Aging.

The program involves the recruitment and placement of retired persons over 60 in volunteer work in any of more than 70 agencies which request such help.

According to Pauline Anderson, director, these people do not replace paid staff nor depire others of employment.

"In every situation they provide services, courtesies and skills which would otherwise be lacking. They add an extra ingredient to the life of the community — love," she said.

Overtime Potato Tossed To DAS

State Fire Marshal Ace Backer said Tuesday he has turned the question of overtime compensation for state employes over to the State Department of Administrative Services.

State Personnel Director Roy Gardner wrote Backer a letter advising him to review employe records and to pay the compensation owed in accord with an attorney general's opinion.

Backer has received claims from the estate of Paul Thien, the late deputy fire marshal, and two men, Myron Piening and Virgil Tweton, for uncompensated overtime work.

The attorney general's opinion said claims can only be made for uncompensated overtime earned within two years of the time the claim was filed and at the rate paid at the time it was earned.

Backer said all records of employes "are fully intact" and said claims from the Nebraska Association of Public Employes about destruction of employe records "certainly wasn't a good statement."

Backer said, "The state certainly doesn't hide things from its employes and the public."

Airport Authority Draws Up Projects List

The Lincoln Airport Authority Monday approved and sent to the federal level a $2.3 million list of six projects that it wants to undertake during the coming fiscal year.

The list does not commit the authority to the projects, but it gives the federal level and the general public an idea of what the authority is considering.

Heading the list is extending and putting an overlay on a taxiway at the airport. The project would cost an estimated $1.4 milloin.

Next on the list is construction of a combined fire and maintenance building at a cost of $650,000.

Other projects include installation of apron lighting, a water main and a service road.

In other action, the board approved the purchase of a $119,000 snowblower, and four snowplows, total cost about $238,000 when delivered.

The board also accepted a bid of $1,272,812 from Constructors, Inc. for paving at the airport and a bid of $73,930 from Commonwealth Electric Co. for lighting.

In the midst of tossing around million-dollar figures, the board also reorganized. Incumbent Dick Joyce and newcomer Don Geis were sworn in.

Geis promptly made good on a campaign promise to work to make the new terminal more barrier-free to handicapped people.

Authority staff people were directed to work with the League of Human Dignity on the matter. Issues raised have been that the guardrails on the escalator should be extended, that the elelvator buttons should be lower, that Braille instructions should be placed at certain locations and that restroom doors should open more easily (for wheelchair users).

In other organizational activity Fred Eiche was elected chairman. Dick Joyce was installed as vice chairman, Joseph Hampton as secretary and Robert Phillips, outgoing chairman, as assistant secretary.

Author Denies Ford Is Called Dummy In Book

Jerusalem (UPI) — Political writer Matti Golan, author of a book banned for security reasons, denied a report that the manuscript quoted Secretary of State Henry Kissinger as calling then-Vice President Gerald Ford "a dummy."

"The name Ford did not appear in my book," Golan said, reacting to a report in the German newspaper Die Welt. Die Welt said Golan's book, "Confrontation and Disengagement," quoted Kissinger as calling Ford "a dummy" and going on to say, "I don't see how Nixon could pick him."

College-Educated Woman Shopping For Sterilization

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old college-educated, unmarried woman.

I have definitely made up my mind that I do not want to bear any children. If I marry and want a child, I will adopt a homeless child since I think there are already too many children in the world.

Also, I would like to be able to have sex without worrying about getting pregnant, and no matter what anybody says, there is absolutely NO method of contraception that is 100 per cent foolproof.

I have asked every doctor I know to perform an operation on me to prevent pregnancy, but so far, I have found no one who will. They all say: "Oh, you'll change your mind one day and then will be sorry." Or: "Have a few kids first — then I'll do it for you." They act like they'd be committing some kind of crime.

Abby, why shouldn't I be able to have that kind of operation if that is what I want? And where can I find a doctor who will do it?

IDAHO READER

DEAR READER: I personally feel that if you do not want children, it's your right. Keep shopping around for a doctor. If you can't find one, inquire at your nearest Planned Parenthood office for information. Their motto is: "Every child should be a wanted child." And I couldn't agree more.

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote to ask why a Catholic would wear a star of David — a symbol of the Jewish faith.

I am a Catholic who, during the war years, was closely associated with three of the finest men I have ever known. I shall never forget their integrity, patriotism and high moral standards. And today, when I am asked why I, a Catholic, wear a star of David, I waste not one second to explain that Mike Korman of Houston, Texas, Sid Kaufman of Steubenville, Ohio, and Jerry Goldberg of Ft. Lee, New Jersey, are worthy of being remembered for the years we spent in constant companionship as comrades in arms.

Woman Sheriff Riding Solo

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Reva Richmond is now riding solo as Marin County's first woman sheriff assigned to patrol.

Deputy Richmond has taken the same courses, passed the same tests, been trained in the same pistol shooting and tactics of self-defense as male deputies.

"I'm the first of a kind and I think no one knows quite what to do with me." She expects to be assigned out of the sheriff's main office in the civic center and carry out any assignment that might be given a male counterpart.

"No, I am not scared," she said.

She is married to a deputy sheriff, Robert Richmond, who works out of another substation.

She was asked if he gave her patrolling tips.

"No, we hardly see each other. He works from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. I work from 4 p.m. until midnight. We don't even have the same days off."

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♦	1♠	2♥	Pass
3♥	Pass	4♥

Opening lead — ace of spades.

There is no advantage in bucking your head against a stone wall. When all the evidence indicates that a normal line of play will lead to defeat, it is certainly reasonable to seek another method that offers at least some chance of success.

Consider this deal where South starts by losing three spade tricks. East returns the jack of diamonds, taken with the king, and it appears that South must rely on a club finesse to make the contract.

But the bidding tells declarer that East almost surely has the king of clubs for his overcall, so South must start to think seriously of some way other than a club finesse to escape his club loser.

In line with this, declarer plays the A-K of trumps, East showing out, and then makes his bid for fame and fortune by cashing the ace of clubs, deliberately shunning the finesse. He then plays the Q-J of trumps, producing this position:

North
♣J

West
Immaterial

East
♦10 9 6
♣K

South
♥8
♦5
♣Q 10

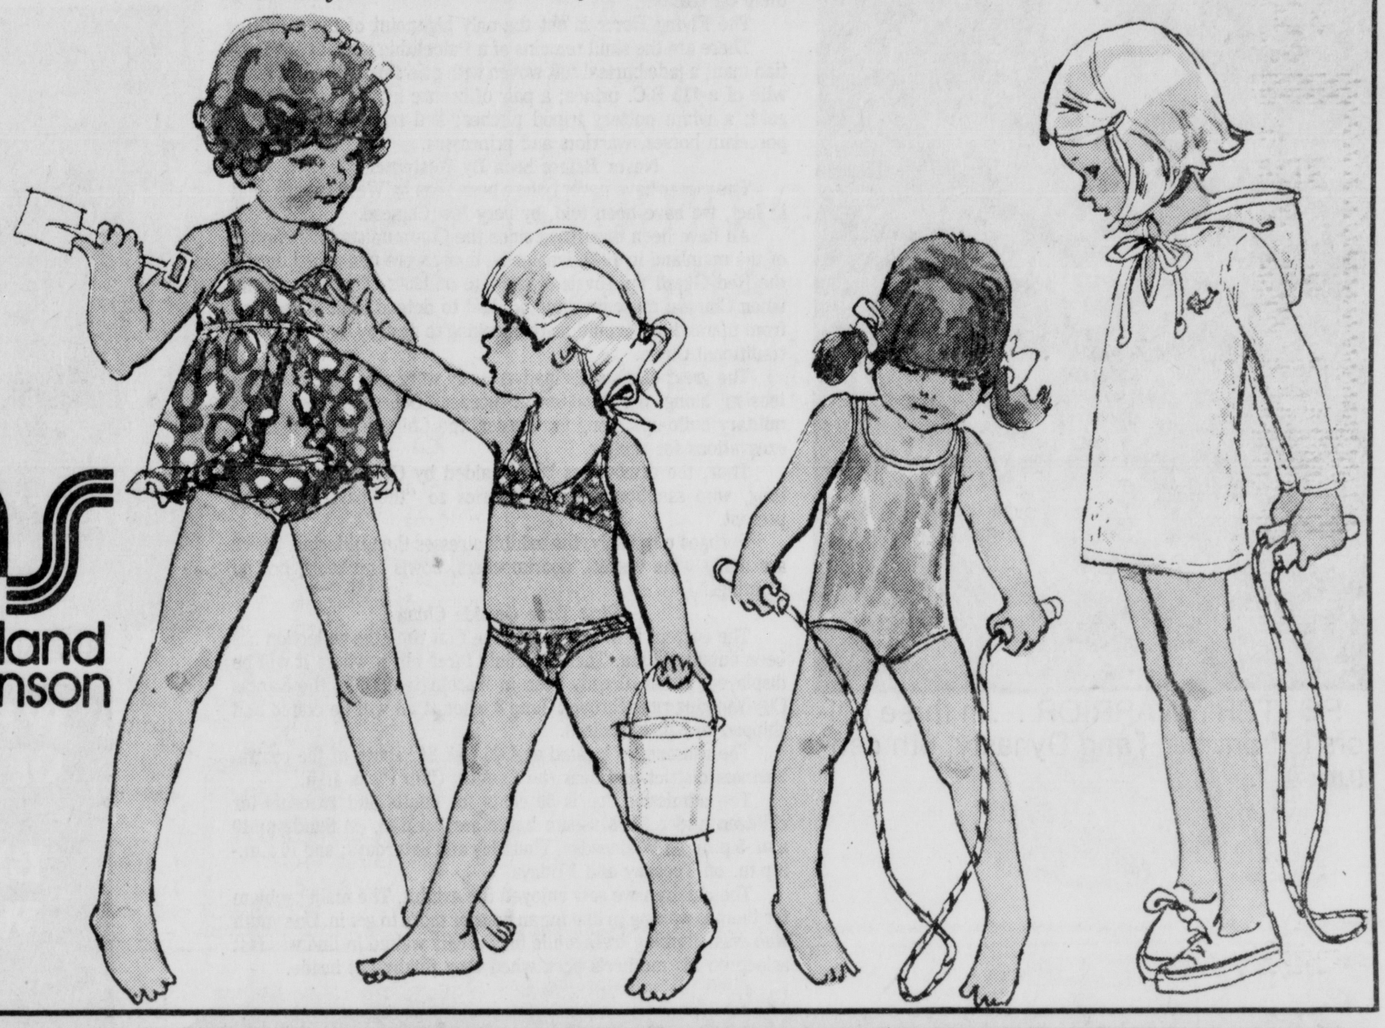

South next plays the eight of hearts, discarding a club from dummy, and East finds himself in a pickle. Whatever he discards, declarer wins the rest of the tricks.

In effect, by adopting this method of play, South rejects the tempting club finesse in exchange for a line of play that will win all the marbles if East has four or more diamonds in addition to the king of clubs. In the actual case, declarer is amply rewarded for veering from the obvious line of play.

Couple Fixes Up Bad Credit Rating

By LEONARD M. GROUPE
(c) Chicago Daily News

Bill and Sally B. were worried about their credit rating. Not that they were in debt, because they didn't owe anybody a dime. Besides, they had money in the bank and Bill had a fine job with a bright future. Yet they had good reason to worry about their credit.

The time had come for them to give up crowded apartment living and buy a home of their own. Their worry was that because of a poor credit history, they might not be able to get a mortgage.

Five years ago they were over their heads in debt. With two incomes they purchased on credit, all at once, just about everything families used to take years to get.

The roof caved in on them when Sally had to leave her job to become a mother. In the space of seven months, their car had been repossessed, four collection agencies were hounding them, there were three judgments and two wage garnishments against Bill.

They learned their lesson well, so when things got better they began to dig themselves out. It took just about three years, but they managed to pay every debt. They didn't owe a dime, but their credit was shot. They didn't care, because they didn't want any credit.

But now they wanted to buy a house. Knowing they'd never be able to qualify for a mortgage unless they re-established their credit, they sought my advice on how to do it. The steps they took could well be a blueprint for many people who for one reason or another have "lost their credit" due to a poor credit history.

There was a file on Bill and Sally at each of several credit bureaus and at each their file looked like a disaster area. They were advised that before making any mortgage applications, they should start out with one of the big credit bureaus and learn what a credit report on them would say. Only then could it be determined how to improve the looks of that report.

Any consumer can learn what's in his credit report without charge within 30 days of being denied credit due to that credit report. Otherwise the credit bureau will make a charge, usually $4 or $5, unless the consumer can show that some of the information on file is incorrect or not up to date.

It isn't necessary to actually go to the credit bureau, because the contents of the file can be disclosed by telephone. If you phone, the credit bureau will mail out a written request and identification form, which the law requires it to have back before making any confidential disclosures over the telephone.

The way their record stood at the credit bureaus, it would have been impossible for Bill and Sally to have obtained a mortgage — or any other kind of credit. A repossession, three open judgments, reports of "slow pay" from all over town and four accounts turned over to collection agencies. Yet, everything had already been paid in full!

The credit bureau had no knowledge that these judgments had been paid, because no release of the judgments had been filed in court. This is a commonly overlooked, but very important, detail to tend to when paying a judgment.

When they said that these accounts had all been paid, the credit bureau became obligated under the law to investigate the current status of each of the accounts. It took time and effort, but the records were brought up to date.

As bad as their up-to-date credit report would be, it was no longer so disastrous that it would obviously keep them from being considered for a mortgage. As corrected, such a report along with their lack of current debt and the fact that they had money in the bank could almost be taken as proof of their financial rehabilitation.

COLOR

ONE OF SIX COTTAGES . . . departure from Beatrice State Home's traditional wards.

Cottages Replace Wards

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Beatrice — Mod furniture, one triangular room after another, wild color everywhere — it hardly sounds like pioneering.

But six such cottages at the Beatrice State Home do exemplify a notable change in concept. And by mid-summer, 96 mentally retarded occupants will be moved in and reaping the benefits.

The pleasant cottages are a significant departure from the ward living style which has long characterized the institution. Homey yet highly functional, they point up a growing emphasis upon individualized care.

8-Bed Units

Of unconventional design, the six basically brick units are double-L shaped and are built entirely at ground level. Each has a pair of clearly defined eight-bed units, with each of the eight bedrooms shared by two residents.

Each cottage thus houses 16 persons under a plan which also includes two living rooms, a dining room, small den, utility room and office. The triangular pattern eliminates corridors and provides a feeling of spaciousness.

"The design attempts to effect a compromise between normalization and the special learning needs of the severely retarded," said Jerry F. Griepentrog, BSH director of programming. "It is also important to provide an environment which stimulates the senses of the residents."

Colors, shapes and textures consequently get much emphasis throughout the units. Since many of the future occupants have physical as well as mental handicaps, there are such special accommodations as grab-bar bath tubs, stepless entrances and wheelchair-high lavatories.

The cottages will be staffed around the clock, though there are no live-in facilities for counselors. A small kitchen will permit the preparation of snacks, but the main meals will still come from the home's centralized cooking facilities.

Each cottage cost about $125,000 with furnishings, approximately $26 per square foot. A second set of six has been approved by the appropriations committee but awaits clearance by the Legislature as a whole.

The first cottage, which will be home to 16 non-ambulatory teenage boys, will be occupied yet this month. The other five are scheduled for completion in July. All will house severely retarded.

TRIANGULAR ROOM . . . no hallways.

Subsoil Moisture Reported Low; Irrigators Advised To Pour It On

Subsoil moisture throughout Nebraska is low and irrigators should be pouring on the water in many areas to help avoid serious problems during the normally hot months ahead. This warning comes from Paul E. Fischbach, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension irrigationist.

"Subsoil moisture is not adequate in fields that will be irrigated for the first time in 1975, even in eastern Nebraska," Fischbach said. Central Nebraska fields irrigated in 1974 require irrigation now to replace the subsoil moisture to five feet, he added.

Louis Daigger, district Extension irrigation specialist at the Panhandle Station, Scottsbluff, said the situation is much the same in western Nebraska. There is a relatively low plant water demand now, he said, and it is a good time to replenish soil water.

Daigger said that in a three-year trial at Scottsbluff, alfalfa used an average .16 inch of water per day for the first cutting. Usage jumped to .24 inch per day for the second and third cuttings.

During 1974, corn used an average of .24 inch per day from June 20-Sept. 1, according to Fischbach. Usage of .40 inch per day was common when temperatures soared to 100 degrees accompanied by high winds. He said this translates to a required net application of 14 inches during the period.

Although peak daily plant water use for July and August may be high, the specialists said, application rates may be less if there is adequate subsoil moisture.

Daigger pointed out, however, that sufficient water cannot be stored in some soils, like sandy loam, and it is advisable to determine soil texture and make an estimate of soil water holding capacity.

McCook, NPPD Agree To Power Arrangement

McCook (UPI) — The city of McCook and the Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) reached agreement Tuesday on a power contract for McCook and the surrounding area.

The agreement, effective June 1, provides that lines inside the city will become the property of McCook without cost. In turn, the city agreed to buy the fringe area system for $170,000, to be paid in annual installments of $23,097.

With interest added to the installment payments, total cost of the fringe area system will amount to $230,979.

The agreement also stipulates McCook will purchase its power from NPPD for 15 years with an automatic renewal for another 10 years. NPPD will lease the system from McCook during this period.

Discounting revenues from tax-supported agencies which now receive a discount on their power bills and any amounts due to application of fuel costs, NPPD will pay McCook 10% of the adjusted retail revenues.

This will serve as a lease payment. NPPD will be responsible for payment of all taxes and insurance.

Omahan Not Guilty Due To Insanity

Omaha (AP) — Edward Paul Bartunek Jr of Omaha has been found innocent of second degree murder by reason of insanity at the time his wife Diane Kay was stabbed to death last October.

His attorney, Asst. Public Defender Ivory Griggs, said he expects the ruling will make Bartunek a free man in the near future.

District Judge James Buckley ordered that his finding be certified to the Douglas County Board of Mental Health. The board is to decide whether Bartunek "is either sane or mentally ill and a fit subject for custody and treatment in a hospital."

Griggs said in light of psychiatric reports on his client, he expects Bartunek to be found sane

Griggs said Bartunek is not now confined but in accordance with state law, Buckley ordered that he be committed to the custody of the county director of medical services for a period not to exceed 30 days.

The director, Dr. David Bean, Douglas County Hospital administrator, testified at a January hearing that Bartunek was mentally competent to stand trial and would be a fit subject for release from the hospital if he adhered to a schedule of medication and was supervised.

Bartunek was released following that hearing.

He had been admitted to the hospital Oct. 21 after he was charged in the fatal stabbing of his 31-year-old wife.

The Chinese Exhibition

FAR LEFT
Bronze 'lei' from Shang Dynasty

MIDDLE

RIGHT

and LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writers

For the ordinary art exhibit, many people wouldn't dream of driving four hours and spending another hour and a half standing in line.

Be advised that the Chinese Archeological Exhibition now at the Nelson Gallery-Atkins Museum in Kansas City, Mo., is no ordinary art show.

POTTERY WARRIOR . . in three colors is from the Tang Dynasty, 8th century AD.

After spending close to 2½ hours viewing the exhibit, our party of six agreed it was well worth the time and expense.

The spellbinding collection of 385 objects spanning a period from 600,000 B.C. to the 14th Century A.D. has been hailed as the greatest cultural happening in Kansas City's history.

That's certain.

Importance Not Overblown

Fortunately, the super-hyped advertising barrage for the exhibit — mounted by Kansas City's tourism people — doesn't overblow its importance or beauty, as often happens.

Even the hallmark of the exhibit, the Flying Horse of Kansu, still awes viewers who have seen it plastered on billboards along Interstate 29, displayed in magazines and hawked in department stores.

The unknown Chinese craftsman who cast the 11-inch bronze sometime during the Han Dynasty (206 B.C.-220 A.D.) has defied the adman's unnerving ability to swell expectations only to dash them on reality.

The Flying Horse is not the only highpoint of the exhibit.

There are the skull remains of a Paloelithic man, called Lantian man; a jade burieal suit woven with gold thread for Tou Wan, wife of a 113 B.C. prince; a pair of bronze leopards inlaid with gold; a white pottery tripod pitcher; and numerous pieces of porcelain horses, warriors and princesses.

Never Before Seen By Westerners

The pieces have never before been seen by Western man, and in fact, we have been told, by very few Chinese.

All have been unearthed since the Communists took control of the mainland in 1949. Ironically, many were unearthed during the Red Guard upheavals of the late of 1960s. That was a time when Chinese museum directors had to defend their collections from marauding revolutionaries seeking to destroy the vestiges of traditional China.

The great discovereis inadvertently were aided by mounting tension along the Sino-Soviet border. Concerned by Soviet military build-ups along the border, the Chinese began massive excavations for shelter.

Thus, the discoveries began, aided by Chairman Mao Tse-tung, who sanctioned the recoveries so "the past serves the present."

Perhaps purposely, the exhibit stresses the utilitarian. There are many wine vessels, doorknockers, bowls and tools, but no paintings.

First Time Outside China

The current U.S. tour marks the first time the collection has been outside China. There are only three cities where it will be displayed. It has already been in Washington, D.C.; the Kansas City showing runs through June 8 when it all will be crated and shipped to San Francisco.

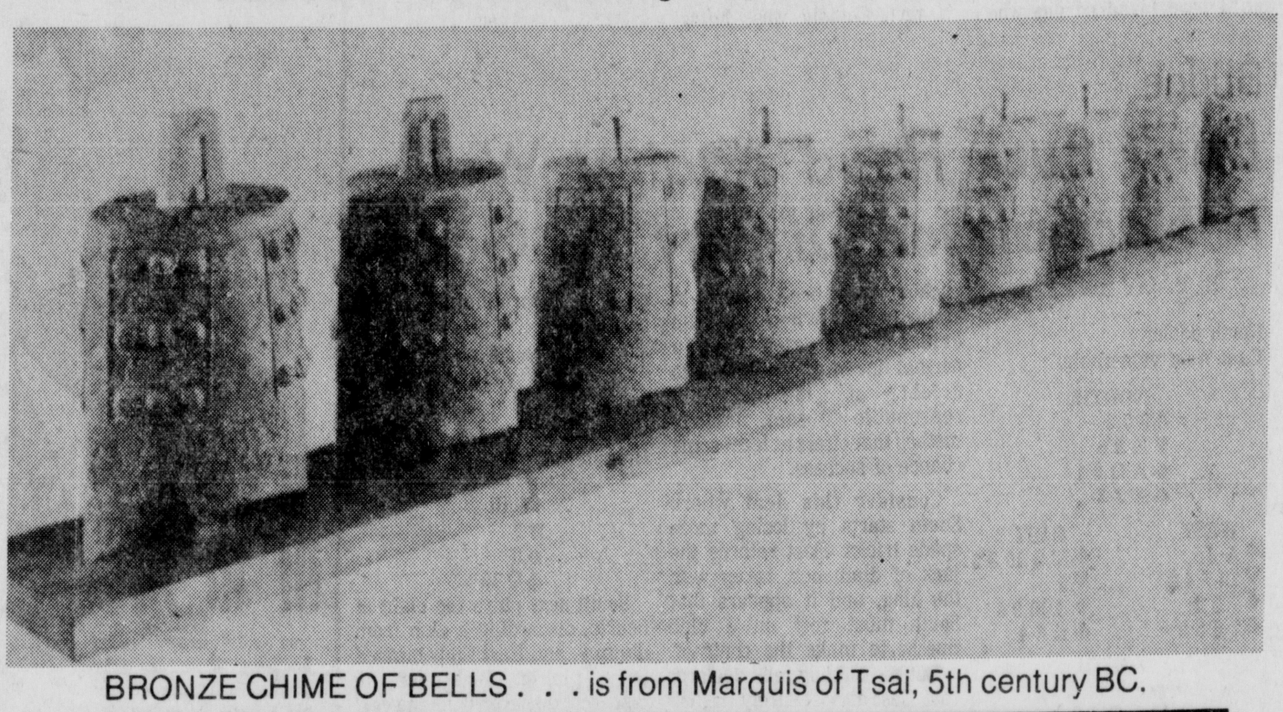

The museum is located at 4525 Oak St., south of the central business district and near the Country Club Plaza area.

The admission fee is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children under 12. Museum hours are 2-6 p.m. on Sundays; 10 a.m.-5 p.m. on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturdays; and 10 a.m.-9 p.m. on Tuesday and Fridays.

The children we saw enjoyed the exhibit. The main problem for them is waiting in line for an hour or more to get in. One youth who was climbing trees while his parents waited in line was fast asleep on his mother's back when they finally got inside.

JADE SUIT . . . is sewn with gold thread for wife of prince.

BRONZE CHIME OF BELLS . . . is from Marquis of Tsai, 5th century BC.

College-Educated Woman Shopping For Sterilization

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old college-educated, unmarried woman.

I have definitely made up my mind that I do not want to bear any children. If I marry and want a child, I will adopt a homeless child since I think there are already too many children in the world.

Also, I would like to be able to have sex without worrying about getting pregnant, and no matter what anybody says, there is absolutely NO method of contraception that is 100 per cent foolproof.

I have asked every doctor I know to perform an operation on me to prevent pregnancy, but so far, I have found no one who will. They all say: "Oh, you'll change your mind one day and then will be sorry." Or: "Have a few kids first — then I'll do it for you." They act like they'd be committing some kind of crime.

Abby, why shouldn't I be able to have that kind of operation if that is what I want? And where can I find a doctor who will do it?

IDAHO READER

DEAR READER: I personally feel that if you do not want children, it's your right. Keep shopping around for a doctor. If you can't find one, inquire at your nearest Planned Parenthood office for information. Their motto is: "Every child should be a wanted child." And I couldn't agree more.

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote to ask why a Catholic would wear a star of David — a symbol of the Jewish faith.

I am a Catholic who, during the war years, was closely associated with three of the finest men I have ever known. I shall never forget their integrity, patriotism and high moral standards. And today, when I am asked why I, a Catholic, wear a star of David, I waste not one second to explain that Mike Korman of Houston, Texas, Sid Kaufman of Steubenville, Ohio, and Jerry Goldberg of Ft. Lee, New Jersey, are worthy of being remembered for the years we spent in constant companionship as comrades in arms.

Woman Sheriff Riding Solo

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Reva Richmond is now riding solo as Marin County's first woman sheriff assigned to patrol.

Deputy Richmond has taken the same courses, passed the same tests, been trained in the same pistol shooting and tactics of self-defense as male deputies.

"I'm the first of a kind and I think no one knows quite what to do with me." She expects to be assigned out of the sheriff's main office in the civic center and carry out any assignment that might be given a male counterpart.

"No, I am not scared," she said.

She is married to a deputy sheriff, Robert Richmond, who works out of another substation.

She was asked if he gave her patrolling tips.

"No, we hardly see each other. He works from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. I work from 4 p.m. until midnight. We don't even have the same days off."

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	1 ♠	2 ♥	Pass

Opening lead — ace of spades.

There is no advantage in bucking your head against a stone wall. When all the evidence indicates that a normal line of play will lead to defeat, it is certainly reasonable to seek another method that offers at least some chance of success.

Consider this deal where South starts by losing three spade tricks. East returns the jack of diamonds, taken with the king, and it appears that South must rely on a club finesse to make the contract.

But the bidding tells declarer that East almost surely has the king of clubs for his overcall, so South must start to think seriously of some way other than a club finesse to escape his club loser.

In line with this, declarer plays the A-K of trumps, East showing out, and then makes his bid for fame and fortune by cashing the ace of clubs, deliberately shunning the finesse. He then plays the Q-J of trumps, producing this position:

South next plays the eight of hearts, discarding a club from dummy, and East finds himself in a pickle. Whatever he discards, declarer wins the rest of the tricks.

In effect, by adopting this method of play, South rejects the tempting club finesse in exchange for a line of play that will win all the marbles if East has four or more diamonds in addition to the king of clubs. In the actual case, declarer is amply rewarded for veering from the obvious line of play.

Couple Fixes Up Bad Credit Rating

By LEONARD M. GROUPE
(c) Chicago Daily News

Bill and Sally B. were worried about their credit rating. Not that they were in debt, because they didn't owe anybody a dime. Besides, they had money in the bank and Bill had a fine job with a bright future. Yet they had good reason to worry about their credit.

The time had come for them to give up crowded apartment living and buy a home of their own. Their worry was that because of a poor credit history, they might not be able to get a mortgage.

Five years ago they were over their heads in debt. With two incomes they purchased on credit, all at once, just about everything families used to take years to get.

The roof caved in on them when Sally had to leave her job to become a mother. In the space of seven months, their car had been repossessed, four collection agencies were hounding them, there were three judgments and two wage garnishments against Bill.

They learned their lesson well, so when things got better they began to dig themselves out. It took just about three years, but they managed to pay every debt. They didn't owe a dime, but their credit was shot. They didn't care, because they didn't want any credit.

But now they wanted to buy a house. Knowing they'd never be able to qualify for a mortgage unless they re-established their credit, they sought my advice on how to do it. The steps they took could well be a blueprint for many people who for one reason or another have "lost their credit" due to a poor credit history.

There was a file on Bill and Sally at each of several credit bureaus and at each their file looked like a disaster area. They were advised that before making any mortgage applications, they should start out with one of the big credit bureaus and learn what a credit report on them would say. Only then could it be determined how to improve the looks of that report.

Any consumer can learn what's in his credit report without charge within 30 days of being denied credit due to that credit report. Otherwise the credit bureau will make a charge, usually $4 or $5, unless the consumer can show that some of the information on file is incorrect or not up to date.

It isn't necessary to actually go to the credit bureau, because the contents of the file can be disclosed by telephone. If you phone, the credit bureau will mail out a written request and identification form, which the law requires it to have back before making any confidential disclosures over the telephone.

The way their record stood at the credit bureaus, it would have been impossible for Bill and Sally to have obtained a mortgage — or any other kind of credit. A repossession, three open judgments, reports of "slow pay" from all over town and four accounts turned over to collection agencies. Yet, everything had already been paid in full!

The credit bureau had no knowledge that these judgments had been paid, because no release of the judgments had been filed in court. This is a commonly overlooked, but very important, detail to tend to when paying a judgment.

When they said that these accounts had all been paid, the credit bureau became obligated under the law to investigate the current status of each of the accounts. It took time and effort, but the records were brought up to date.

As bad as their up-to-date credit report would be, it was no longer so disastrous that it would obviously keep them from being considered for a mortgage. As corrected, such a report along with their lack of current debt and the fact that they had money in the bank could almost be taken as proof of their financial rehabilitation.

He Collects Remnants Of Political Campaigns

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — The shop sits off in the corner of a downtown Pittsburgh shopping arcade cluttered with the tarnished remnants of old political campaigns and the shiny hopes of new ones.

The campaigns, the issues, the protests are all chronicled on small round metal buttons: "Bomb Hanoi" and "Ban the Bomb," Nixon-Agnew vs. McGovern-Shriver. From the Harding-Coolidge campaign in 1920 to "WIN" in 1974.

For 63 years, the A.G. Trimble Co. has sold buttons.

Campaign buttons, promotional buttons, gag buttons, protest buttons. And business, despite the flop of President Ford's WIN program, is booming.

Richard Trimble heads the company today. But his 95-year-old father, A.G. Trimble, the designer of the first button formally approved by the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission, is still active.

"I never knew anything else but buttons," says Richard. "I have a degree in chemical engineering, but I've been in the button business for more than 30 years.

"Campaign buttons as we know them go back to 1896, but brass buttons for George Washington are still in existence today," he adds.

Calvin Coolidge and Warren Harding were running for President in 1920 when A.G., already a button maker, got into the political side of the business.

"Dad made buttons in that campaign . . . and we've made buttons for every campaign since," Trimble says.

The elder Trimble is credited with the "I Like Ike" slogan for the Eisenhower campaigns, according to a national organization of collectors of political memorabilia.

He already has designed Ford-Rockefeller buttons for 1976.

"I've got buttons for Kennedy, Wallace, Jackson, Weicker and Mondale already made up," Richard says. "We make them up and send them to committees that might want to promote a candidate. I don't even wait for them to admit they're running," he adds.

Trimble said he sold more than one million WIN buttons — and still has about 25,000 retired to a back room.

"The button business started to rebound in 1968 with the protest movements," the younger Trimble says. "And Watergate produced hundreds of buttons, some really clever. I've got a collection of about 800 protest buttons at home."

Political buttons, it seems, are hottest on the collector's circuit.

"A 1920 James Cox-Franklin Roosevelt campaign button is worth about $3,000 today," Trimble says. "And $300 to $500 for a rare political button is not really uncommon."

Nonpolitical buttons?

"You can get $10 or $15 for a Hoot Gibson or Shirley Temple button," Trimble says.

TRIMBLE . . . looks over array of lapel buttons sold by his firm. AP

Falling Seats Crushed Baby Carriage

By VICTORIA WAGER

Way back when our baby daughter was three months old, we were planning enthusiastically for the Johnson County Fair. Fred was grooming his percheron mares to exhibit and I was planning for picnic dinners, the clothes we would need, and how to keep the baby comfortable during the three day event.

We decided we needed a baby carriage, so we made a trip over to Auburn to find one. There were two nice ones shown us and after some deliberation we decided on the less expensive one. They were almost identical as to basic construction, only that one was more ornate and consequently more expensive. I was pleased and quite proud, satisfied our babe would be comfortable.

Things were shaping up for a good time at the fair. A neighbor had agreed to drive Fred's antique Sears, one-cyclinder, chain-drive car around the race track on its own power. It was one of the first models put out in about 1905, and was already a relic with rubber tires and a top like a top buggy. The Hazel McOwen Stock Company was coming back and was a real attraction. We would do chores early and spend the days at the fair.

The performance was in a big tent with tiers of seats around the outside of the arena stage. We parked the baby carriage in the space directly below and in front of the seats. I carried the baby and climbed to the fourth seat up. Fred came up to sit beside me. The show got off to a good start and everybody was enjoying it.

An intermission was announced and almost every one stood up or climbed down for exercise or refreshments. We stayed in our seats and people had started to come back for the next session of the show.

Suddenly Fred Stood up and moved in front and over me and the baby. At the same time he whispered frantically, "Take up your feet! The seats are going down!" I could feel a swaying motion and the whole tier of seats settled without a jar or jerk, down to the ground, to the right. Some confusion and some screaming, and everyone was getting off the seats. I had hardly had time to be scared and was able to get up with Fred's help. We were not hurt or even worried until we collected our thoughts enough to wonder about the baby carriage.

Then we remembered an attendant had said, "That buggy can't stay in front of the seats." He had moved it to the end of that tier of seats directly in line with the fallen parts and it was smashed flat! A small crowd gathered round and the manager assured us something would be done about it. He suggested it could be repaired, which failed to cheer us as it was a total wreck.

Several people spoke of how lucky it was the baby wasn't in it!

One lady had a broken leg and more would probably have been hurt if the seats had been filled.

We were concerned about the baby's carriage. Coming back the next day without it was not a pleasant thought. It was a hot day and the baby and I were uncomfortable to say the least. I was not careful to conceal how I felt when I came back to the show tent, carrying the baby. And I confess I didn't try too hard to hide the baby's discomfort either.

We got through that day and came back the next and final day. We stopped at the horse barns to pretty up the mares who wore their ribbons by now. When we approached the show tent we found the self same ornate more, expensive baby carriage waiting for us.

The Chinese Exhibition

FAR LEFT
Bronze 'lei' from Shang Dynasty

MIDDLE

RIGHT

By BOB GUENTHER
and LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writers

For the ordinary art exhibit, many people wouldn't dream of driving four hours and spending another hour and a half standing in line.

Be advised that the Chinese Archeological Exhibition now at the Nelson Gallery-Atkins Museum in Kansas City, Mo., is no ordinary art show.

POTTERY WARRIOR . . . in three colors is from the Tang Dynasty, 8th century AD.

After spending close to 2½ hours viewing the exhibit, our party of six agreed it was well worth the time and expense.

The spellbinding collection of 385 objects spanning a period from 600,000 B.C. to the 14th Century A.D. has been hailed as the greatest cultural happening in Kansas City's history.

That's certain.

Importance Not Overblown

Fortunately, the super-hyped advertising barrage for the exhibit — mounted by Kansas City's tourism people — doesn't overblow its importance or beauty, as often happens.

Even the hallmark of the exhibit, the Flying Horse of Kansu, still awes viewers who have seen it plastered on billboards along Interstate 29, displayed in magazines and hawked in department stores.

The unknown Chinese craftsman who cast the 11-inch bronze sometime during the Han Dynasty (206 B.C.-220 A.D.) has defied the adman's unnerving ability to swell expectations only to dash them on reality.

The Flying Horse is not the only highpoint of the exhibit.

There are the skull remains of a Paloelithic man, called Lantian man; a jade burieal suit woven with gold thread for Tou Wan, wife of a 113 B.C. prince; a pair of bronze leopards inlaid with gold; a white pottery tripod pitcher; and numerous pieces of porcelain horses, warriors and princesses.

Never Before Seen By Westerners

The pieces have never before been seen by Western man, and in fact, we have been told, by very few Chinese.

All have been unearthed since the Communists took control of the mainland in 1949. Ironically, many were unearthed during the Red Guard upheavals of the late of 1960s. That was a time when Chinese museum directors had to defend their collections from marauding revolutionaries seeking to destroy the vestiges of traditional China.

The great discovereis inadvertently were aided by mounting tension along the Sino-Soviet border. Concerned by Soviet military build-ups along the border, the Chinese began massive excavations for shelter.

Thus, the discoveries began, aided by Chairman Mao Tse-tung, who sanctioned the recoveries so "the past serves the present."

Perhaps purposely, the exhibit stresses the utilitarian. There are many wine vessels, doorknockers, bowls and tools, but no paintings.

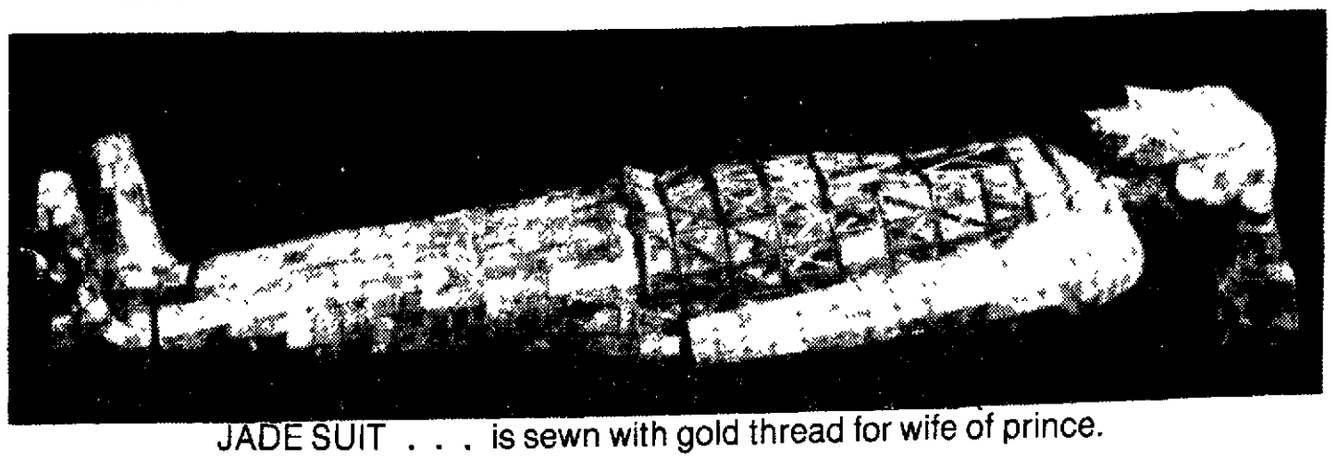

First Time Outside China

The current U.S. tour marks the first time the collection has been outside China. There are only three cities where it will be displayed. It has already been in Washington, D.C.; the Kansas City showing runs through June 8 when it all will be crated and shipped to San Francisco.

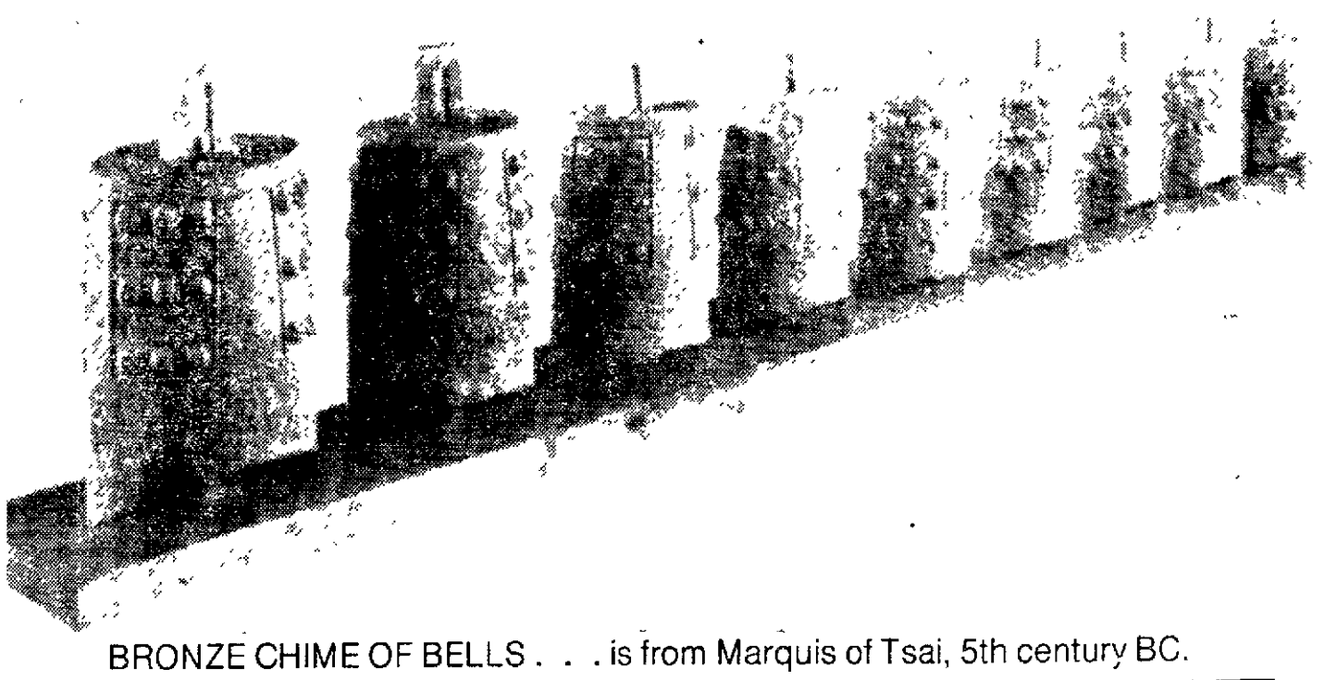

The museum is located at 4525 Oak St., south of the central business district and near the Country Club Plaza area.

The admission fee is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children under 12. Museum hours are 2-6 p.m. on Sundays; 10 a.m.-5 p.m. on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturdays; and 10 a.m.-9 p.m. on Tuesday and Fridays.

The children we saw enjoyed the exhibit. The main problem for them is waiting in line for an hour or more to get in. One youth who was climbing trees while his parents waited in line was fast asleep on his mother's back when they finally got inside.

JADE SUIT . . . is sewn with gold thread for wife of prince.

BRONZE CHIME OF BELLS . . . is from Marquis of Tsai, 5th century BC.

'Leo' Was Cather's Favorite

'MASTER LEO' . . . 60 years later and still the mischievous scamp.

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

"Master Leo" is about 60 years older now. What hair he has is snowy white and combed straight back.

But Leo Pavelka is still the handsome, mischievous scamp Willa Cather described in "My Antonia," the story of his pioneer mother's hard life.

It's not difficult to roll time back six decades and imagine a fair-skinned chap with red cheeks and a thick, curly patch of ruddy hair.

Today, the 72-year-old Pavelka, a successful, semi-retired real estate salesman at Hastings, is much older than "Little Leo", but just as playful.

'Old Enough To Be Better'

If his mother were alive, she'd probably still be introducing her best-loved son as the one who is "old enough to be better than he is."

"I was the mischievous one," he admitted in a recent interview. "I guess I'll stay that way the rest of my life. I was in more trouble than all the others in the family put together."

That's quite a reputation, considering he came from a family of 13 children, eight of whom are still living.

Pavelka's eyes fairly dance with merriment and the dimples still pop out "in unusual places" — mainly in the corners of his eyes — as he relates the most recent pranks he played on his wife.

The one he delights in most is the time he hid under their bed a gadget that made a noise like a calf bawling. Late at night, he would turn it on and off until his wife was convinced there was a calf in their back yard, maybe even trampling the flowers.

Searched The Yard

Together, they searched the yard, but no calf. Back in bed, the bawling started again until finally he couldn't hold the laughter inside.

"That was one of my best jokes ever, the most fun I ever had. That was a nice, clean prank, wasn't it?" he asked innocently.

"Not in the middle of the night it wasn't," his wife answered indignantly, pretending to be angry.

In her book, Miss Cather describes her meeting with the barefooted boy who "tied my team with two flourishes of his hands, and nodded when I asked him if his mother was at home.

"As he glanced at me, his face dimpled with a seizure of irrelevant merriment, and he shot up the windmill tower with a lightness that struck me as disdainful."

Team Of Horses

Leo, in return, said he vividly remembers Willa Cather driving a team of horses up the lane on a cool day.

"She liked to dress manish and she had a manish (low) voice," he said. "She used English everybody could understand."

Pavelka's mother was a long-time and close friend of Miss Cather, one of Nebraska's best-known, and best-loved authors.

The two young women had traveled to Nebraska on the same train. Miss Cather was coming from Virginia to live with her grandparents and Pavelka's mother had recently immigrated from Czechoslovakia.

As teenagers, the two shared many of the same dreams and experiences. Even after Miss Cather left to attend the university, the two friends did not forget.

Vividly Remembered

But it wasn't until Antonia had married and had scads of children that the reunion Pavelka so vividly remembers took place.

Later Miss Cather wrote:

"What a tableful we were at supper: two long rows of restless heads in the lamplight, and so many eyes fastened excitedly upon Antonia as she sat at the head of the table, filling the plates and starting the dishes on their way."

Of all Antonia's children, Miss Cather also singled Leo out as someone extra special.

"Willa admired me, I guess," Pavelka said. "She always liked people with a lot of nerve. I just happened to be where the action usually was."

'Tobacco'

Imagine him as an eight-year-old type smoking for the first time. Only the "tobacco" was actually a "fine blend" of feathers, horsehair and tobacco leaves stuffed into a pipe.

"I got so sick, I thought I was going to die."

Later on, "she asked me to take her out to the western part of the state so she could gather material for another book, but I was already committed."

"Committed" meant Leo had taken up wrestling and was gradually gaining a reputation for his speed and strength. He went on to train with some of the most famous wrestlers from this area, including lightweight Owen Dailey of the Minden area and Ravenna's John Pesek, who is now in Nebraska's Sports Hall of Fame.

Pavelka's career tapered off, however, after he turned down a lucrative $1,000-a-month offer to "win when I was told to win and lose when I was told to lose.

"I had too many friends and I wouldn't cheat them. After that I couldn't even get a bout for two years."

Silk Bedspread

It wasn't long afterwards that Pavelka met and married his wife. Miss Cather sent a silk bedspread for a wedding gift and the couple treasures it still.

Then there were two children of their own, a daughter, Mrs. William Hempel Jr. who lives in Lincoln and a son of Blue Hill.

Sometimes, Pavelka said, he has the urge to write a book and record some of Cather's history the way she has immortalized his family.

But retired life isn't as soft as he expected. "I'm working harder than ever, exercising, fixing up the house, working in the garden and overseeing my farms."

But if he could write that book, he would be able to spin lots more yarns about Willa Cather. Probably one of the least known is that she had trouble with spelling and her handwriting was barely legible.

Maybe there is hope for some of the rest of us.

He Collects Remnants Of Political Campaigns

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — The shop sits off in the corner of a downtown Pittsburgh shopping arcade cluttered with the tarnished remnants of old political campaigns and the shiny hopes of new ones.

The campaigns, the issues, the protests are all chronicled on small round metal buttons: "Bomb Hanoi" and "Ban the Bomb," Nixon-Agnew vs. McGovern-Shriver. From the Harding-Coolidge campaign in 1920 to "WIN" in 1974.

For 63 years, the A.G. Trimble Co. has sold buttons.

Campaign buttons, promotional buttons, gag buttons, protest buttons. And business, despite the flop of President Ford's WIN program, is booming.

Richard Trimble heads the company today. But his 95-year-old father, A.G. Trimble, the designer of the first button formally approved by the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission, is still active.

"I never knew anything else but buttons," says Richard. "I have a degree in chemical engineering, but I've been in the button business for more than 30 years.

"Campaign buttons as we know them go back to 1896, but brass buttons for George Washington are still in existence today," he adds.

Calvin Coolidge and Warren Harding were running for President in 1920 when A.G., already a button maker, got into the political side of the business.

"Dad made buttons in that campaign . . . and we've made buttons for every campaign since," Trimble says.

The elder Trimble is credited with the "I Like Ike" slogan for the Eisenhower campaigns, according to a national organization of collectors of political memorabilia.

He already has designed Ford-Rockefeller buttons for 1976.

"I've got buttons for Kennedy, Wallace, Jackson, Weicker and Mondale already made up," Richard says. "We make them up and send them to committees that might want to promote a candidate. I don't even wait for them to admit they're running," he adds.

Trimble said he sold more than one million WIN buttons — and still has about 25,000 retired to a back room.

"The button business started to rebound in 1968 with the protest movements," the younger Trimble says. "And Watergate produced hundreds of buttons, some really clever. I've got a collection of about 800 protest buttons at home."

Political buttons, it seems, are hottest on the collector's circuit.

"A 1920 James Cox-Franklin Roosevelt campaign button is worth about $3,000 today," Trimble says. "And $300 to $500 for a rare political button is not really uncommon."

Nonpolitical buttons?

"You can get $10 or $15 for a Hoot Gibson or Shirley Temple button," Trimble says.

TRIMBLE . . . looks over array of lapel buttons sold by his firm. AP

Falling Seats Crushed Baby Carriage

By VICTORIA WAGER

Way back when our baby daughter was three months old, we were planning enthusiastically for the Johnson County Fair. Fred was grooming his percheron mares to exhibit and I was planning for picnic dinners, the clothes we would need, and how to keep the baby comfortable during the three day event.

We decided we needed a baby carriage, so we made a trip over to Auburn to find one. There were two nice ones shown us and after some deliberation we decided on the less expensive one. They were almost identical as to basic construction, only that one was more ornate and consequently more expensive. I was pleased and quite proud, satisfied our babe would be comfortable.

Things were shaping up for a good time at the fair. A neighbor had agreed to drive Fred's antique Sears, one-cyclinder, chain-drive car around the race track on its own power. It was one of the first models put out in about 1905, and was already a relic with rubber tires and a top like a top buggy. The Hazel McOwen Stock Company was coming back and was a real attraction. We would do chores early and spend the days at the fair.

The performance was in a big tent with tiers of seats around the outside of the arena stage. We parked the baby carriage in the space directly below and in front of the seats. I carried the baby and climbed to the fourth seat up. Fred came up to sit beside me. The show got off to a good start and everybody was enjoying it.

An intermission was announced and almost every one stood up or climbed down for exercise or refreshments. We stayed in our seats and people had started to come back for the next session of the show.

Suddenly Fred Stood up and moved in front and over me and the baby. At the same time he whispered frantically, "Take up your feet! The seats are going down!" I could feel a swaying motion and the whole tier of seats settled without a jar or jerk, down to the ground, to the right. Some confusion and some screaming, and everyone was getting off the seats. I had hardly had time to be scared and was able to get up with Fred's help. We were not hurt or even worried until we collected our thoughts enough to wonder about the baby carriage.

Then we remembered an attendant had said, "That buggy can't stay in front of the seats." He had moved it to the end of that tier of seats directly in line with the fallen parts and it was smashed flat! A small crowd gathered round and the manager assured us something would be done about it. He suggested it could be repaired, which failed to cheer us as it was a total wreck.

Several people spoke of how lucky it was the baby wasn't in it!

One lady had a broken leg and more would probably have been hurt if the seats had been filled.

We were concerned about the baby's carriage. Coming back the next day without it was not a pleasant thought. It was a hot day and the baby and I were uncomfortable to say the least. I was not careful to conceal how I felt when I came back to the show tent, carrying the baby. And I confess I didn't try too hard to hide the baby's discomfort either.

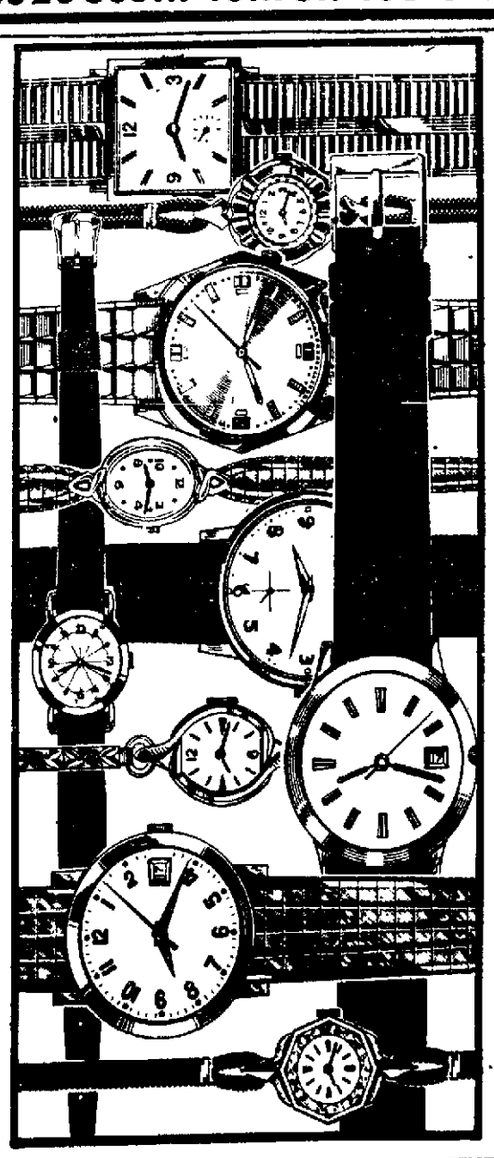

We got through that day and came back the next and final day. We stopped at the horse barns to pretty up the mares who wore their ribbons by now. When we approached the show tent we found the self same ornate more, expensive baby carriage waiting for us.

Sirhan Scheduled For 1986 Parole

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP) — Sirhan B. Sirhan, convicted assassin of Robert F. Kennedy, is scheduled for parole on Feb. 23, 1986, the California Adult Authority said Tuesday.

Sirhan, 31, was originally sentenced to die for the crime, but that sentence was thrown out by a state Supreme Court decison outlawing capital punishment.

His sentence was changed to life imprisonment, which allows for parole after at least seven years.

Announcement of the parole date was made by Philip Guthrie, a deputy director of the state Department of Corrections. It came nearly six years after Sirhan entered the California prison system. He is currently being held at San Quentin.

James Yoder, an administrative officer at San Quentin, said Sirhan "had a definite negative reaction" when told of the decision.

"He thought he should have gotten an earlier date," Yoder said.

Sirhan's mother, Mary, was unavailable for comment.

Sirhan was convicted of shooting Kennedy in the kitchen of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles on June 5, 1968, after the senator's victory in California's Democratic presidential primary.

Guthrie said the parole date would stand unless Sirhan had some "extreme behavior problem" before then.

Guthrie said releasing Sirhan on the 1986 date would give him a prison sentence of 16 years, nine months. He said the actual length of Sirhan's term was "at the top range for first-degree murders.

"The board is acting in a way that is consistent with standards they have established for various crimes," Guthrie.

Philadelphia Mayor Rizzo Renominated

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Democratic Mayor Frank L. Rizzo won easy renomination Tuesday night for a second term, beating the party organization that refused to endorse him because he had supported former President Richard Nixon and other Republicans.

The controversial Rizzo, a 54-year-old former police commissioner who rose to political fame on the law and order issue, trounced State Sen. Louis G. Hill, the party choice, and four other candidates in a bitter primary election struggle that had split the Democrats in America's fourth largest city.

Rizzo's triumph was more over Democratic party boss Peter J. Camiel than Hill whom he had dismissed as "a clown" and Camiel's "handpicked choice." He proudly campaigned as "the man against the machine."

You're Never Too Old To Hear Better

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

Send for this non-operating model now. Wear it in the privacy of your own home to see how tiny hearing help can be. It's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit. No wires lead from body to head.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 5205 Beltone Electronics, 4201 W. Victoria Street, Chicago, Ill. 60646.

Snack Of Future: Bug Burger, Fried Termite 'Taters

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A possible food source that has more protein than meat, fewer calories than vegetables and is cheaper than both may drive you a little bit buggy.

University of Wisconsin entomology Prof. Gene De Foliart is studying how insects might one day be used to avert a world food crisis.

His studies, on all types of bugs from termites to houseflies, show that there's really nothing wrong with eating most insects.

"There is no doubt about the quality of insects as food," he said, "but the subject has hardly been considered. A lot of insects are used for food in more primitive cultures, but not in the more civilized parts of the world."

The problem, he said, is that most people just can't stomach the idea of sitting down to a crisp green salad of creepy crawlers or a spider loaf sandwich.

"Many people have a natural revulsion to the idea of eating insects," De Foliart said.

He said Americans eventually may eat insects directly, but certainly not until the public is gradually persuaded that a bug burger is as good as a hamburger.

"I don't know if we'll ever get people to eat insects directly," he said. "It might come to that, but not right away in this country."

In the meantime, De Foliart is conducting various experiments to determine the nutritional and economic advantages of insects as food.

"Termites, for instance, have a higher protein content than beef or fish," he said. "And housefly pupae — that's the stage between the larvae and the adult — have the equivalent of fish and bone meal and are actually of better quality than soybean oil meal."

De Foliart is developing indirect means of using insects to fortify and improve supplies.

In one experiment, he fed manure to housefly larvae and then fed the larvae to chickens. The birds prospered and laid healthy high grade eggs.

But his students wouldn't eat them.

"My experience has been limited to a silkworm pupae about 10 yers ago," he said ruefully. "It tasted like a museum specimen. It really wasn't very good."

House Voted 303-96 To Open Military Academies To Women

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opening the three military academies to women was approved by the House 303 to 96 Tuesday amid objections that it would be the first step toward putting women into combat.

Opponents of the plan said they would not vote to send women into combat, and the training at West Point, Annapolis and the Air Force Academy would be a waste if the women did not do so.

But backers of the plan said women should get the same military and leadership training as men.

The measure, an amendment to a military weapons authorization bill, still requires Senate approval and President Ford's signature to become law, however.

Rep. W. C. Daniels, D-Va., noted that the action does not change the current law prohibiting women from serving in combat.

"It might be interesting if we add a new element to the great leadership of this country of ours." said Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N. Y.

Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., said the plan was "unsound from both the physiologic and national security point of view."

He asked how a woman could serve the required five years as an officer is she were pregnant three times and perhaps chose to breast-feed her children.

"There were lactating women on the frontiers of this country and there were lactating women on the fronts in Israel and somehow that didn't stop progress," responded Rep. Abzug.

The amendment to remove the restrictions on women was introduced by Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y.

Rep. Clarence B. Long, D-Md., said there was also opposition to women serving in the military during World War II, but when opponents saw it worked they changed their minds.

"Men have no monopoly on courage and intelligence," he said.

Rep. David Train, R-La., suggested a study of setting up a separate military academy for women but that was rejected 284 to 113.

Stratton originally had proposed that women go into non-fighting combat assignments as well as be admitted to the academies, but dropped the combat provision, he said, because of opposition.

Stratton said the aim of his amendment was simply to give women the equal opportunity with men to advance their military careers by getting academy training.

The services are already seeking women, he said, and "they're a part of the force.

"Their I.Q. level and enthusiasm level is higher on the whole than the men's," he said.

Ford's Half-Brother To Give Demos $50

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — President Ford's half-brother Tom has pledged $50 to Democratic State House candidates for next year's election.

"It's fantastic," said Stanley Fedewa, executive secretary of the Michigan House Democratic caucus. "We're very happy. Maybe they're catching on."

But Ford, 56, says he's not abandoning the Republican party.

As a legislative audit coordinator in the Michigan Legislature, Ford is an employe of both parties, so he tries to keep everyone happy with political contributions to both sides.

"I haven't changed parties," the former GOP state representative said Tuesday. "I play it right down the middle. This is a nonpartisan job and if I'm going to support one I have to support the other."

Last year, for example, Ford says he gave about $400 to $500, "split almost exactly down the middle to the penny" between Republicans and Democrats.

'Leo' Was Cather's Favorite

'MASTER LEO' . . . 60 years later and still the mischievous scamp.

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

"Master Leo" is about 60 years older now. What hair he has is snowy white and combed straight back.

But Leo Pavelka is still the handsome, mischievous scamp Willa Cather described in "My Antonia," the story of his pioneer mother's hard life.

It's not difficult to roll time back six decades and imagine a fair-skinned chap with red cheeks and a thick, curly patch of ruddy hair.

Today, the 72-year-old Pavelka, a successful, semi-retired real estate salesman at Hastings, is much older than "Little Leo", but just as playful.

'Old Enough To Be Better'

If his mother were alive, she'd probably still be introducing her best-loved son as the one who is "old enough to be better than he is."

"I was the mischievous one," he admitted in a recent interview. "I guess I'll stay that way the rest of my life. I was in more trouble than all the others in the family put together."

That's quite a reputation, considering he came from a family of 13 children, eight of whom are still living.

Pavelka's eyes fairly dance with merriment and the dimples still pop out "in unusual places" — mainly in the corners of his eyes — as he relates the most recent pranks he played on his wife.

The one he delights in most is the time he hid under their bed a gadget that made a noise like a calf bawling. Late at night, he would turn it on and off until his wife was convinced there was a calf in their back yard, maybe even trampling the flowers.

Searched The Yard

Together, they searched the yard, but no calf. Back in bed, the bawling started again until finally he couldn't hold the laughter inside.

"That was one of my best jokes ever, the most fun I ever had. That was a nice, clean prank, wasn't it?" he asked innocently.

"Not in the middle of the night it wasn't," his wife answered indignantly, pretending to be angry.

In her book, Miss Cather describes her meeting with the barefooted boy who "tied my team with two flourishes of his hands, and nodded when I asked him if his mother was at home.

"As he glanced at me, his face dimpled with a seizure of irrelevant merriment, and he shot up the windmill tower with a lightness that struck me as disdainful."

Team Of Horses

Leo, in return, said he vividly remembers Willa Cather driving a team of horses up the lane on a cool day.

"She liked to dress manish and she had a manish (low) voice," he said. "She used English everybody could understand."

Pavelka's mother was a long-time and close friend of Miss Cather, one of Nebraska's best-known, and best-loved authors.

The two young women had traveled to Nebraska on the same train. Miss Cather was coming from Virginia to live with her grandparents and Pavelka's mother had recently immigrated from Czechoslovakia.

As teenagers, the two shared many of the same dreams and experiences. Even after Miss Cather left to attend the university, the two friends did not forget.

Vividly Remembered

But it wasn't until Antonia had married and had scads of children that the reunion Pavelka so vividly remembers took place.

Later Miss Cather wrote:

"What a tableful we were at supper: two long rows of restless heads in the lamplight, and so many eyes fastened excitedly upon Antonia as she sat at the head of the table, filling the plates and starting the dishes on their way."

Of all Antonia's children, Miss Cather also singled Leo out as someone extra special.

"Willa admired me, I guess," Pavelka said. "She always liked people with a lot of nerve. I just happened to be where the action usually was."

'Tobacco'

Imagine him as an eight-year-old type smoking for the first time. Only the "tobacco" was actually a "fine blend" of feathers, horsehair and tobacco leaves stuffed into a pipe.

"I got so sick, I thought I was going to die."

Later on, "she asked me to take her out to the western part of the state so she could gather material for another book, but I was already committed."

"Committed" meant Leo had taken up wrestling and was gradually gaining a reputation for his speed and strength. He went on to train with some of the most famous wrestlers from this area, including lightweight Owen Dailey of the Minden area and Ravenna's John Pesek, who is now in Nebraska's Sports Hall of Fame.

Pavelka's career tapered off, however, after he turned down a lucrative $1,000-a-month offer to "win when I was told to win and lose when I was told to lose.

"I had too many friends and I wouldn't cheat them. After that I couldn't even get a bout for two years."

Silk Bedspread

It wasn't long afterwards that Pavelka met and married his wife. Miss Cather sent a silk bedspread for a wedding gift and the couple treasures it still.

Then there were two children of their own, a daughter, Mrs. William Hempel Jr. who lives in Lincoln and a son of Blue Hill.

Sometimes, Pavelka said, he has the urge to write a book and record some of Cather's history the way she has immortalized his family.

But retired life isn't as soft as he expected. "I'm working harder than ever, exercising, fixing up the house, working in the garden and overseeing my farms."

But if he could write that book, he would be able to spin lots more yarns about Willa Cather. Probably one of the least known is that she had trouble with spelling and her handwriting was barely legible.

Maybe there is hope for some of the rest of us.

Sirhan Scheduled For 1986 Parole

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP) — Sirhan B. Sirhan, convicted assassin of Robert F. Kennedy, is scheduled for parole on Feb. 23, 1986, the California Adult Authority said Tuesday.

Sirhan, 31, was originally sentenced to die for the crime, but that sentence was thrown out by a state Supreme Court decison outlawing capital punishment.

His sentence was changed to life imprisonment, which allows for parole after at least seven years.

Announcement of the parole date was made by Philip Guthrie, a deputy director of the state Department of Corrections. It came nearly six years after Sirhan entered the California prison system. He is currently being held at San Quentin.

James Yoder, an administrative officer at San Quentin, said Sirhan "had a definite negative reaction" when told of the decision.

"He thought he should have gotten an earlier date," Yoder said.

Sirhan's mother, Mary, was unavailable for comment.

Sirhan was convicted of shooting Kennedy in the kitchen of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles on June 5, 1968, after the senator's victory in California's Democratic presidential primary.

Guthrie said the parole date would stand unless Sirhan had some "extreme behavior problem" before then.

Guthrie said releasing Sirhan on the 1986 date would give him a prison sentence of 16 years, nine months. He said the actual length of Sirhan's term was "at the top range for first-degree murders.

"The board is acting in a way that is consistent with standards they have established for various crimes," Guthrie.

Philadelphia Mayor Rizzo Renominated

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Democratic Mayor Frank L. Rizzo won easy renomination Tuesday night for a second term, beating the party organization that refused to endorse him because he had supported former President Richard Nixon and other Republicans.

The controversial Rizzo, a 54-year-old former police commissioner who rose to political fame on the law and order issue, trounced State Sen. Louis G. Hill, the party choice, and four other candidates in a bitter primary election struggle that had split the Democrats in America's fourth largest city.

Rizzo's triumph was more over Democratic party boss Peter J. Camiel than Hill whom he had dismissed as "a clown" and Camiel's "handpicked choice." He proudly campaigned as "the man against the machine."

You're Never Too Old To Hear Better

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

Send for this non-operating model now. Wear it in the privacy of your own home to see how tiny hearing help can be. It's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit. No wires lead from body to head.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 5205 Beltone Electronics, 4201 W. Victoria Street, Chicago, Ill. 60646.

Snack Of Future: Bug Burger, Fried Termite 'Taters

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A possible food source that has more protein than meat, fewer calories than vegetables and is cheaper than both may drive you a little bit buggy.

University of Wisconsin entomology Prof. Gene De Foliart is studying how insects might one day be used to avert a world food crisis.

His studies, on all types of bugs from termites to houseflies, show that there's really nothing wrong with eating most insects.

"There is no doubt about the quality of insects as food," he said, "but the subject has hardly been considered. A lot of insects are used for food in more primitive cultures, but not in the more civilized parts of the world."

The problem, he said, is that most people just can't stomach the idea of sitting down to a crisp green salad of creepy crawlers or a spider loaf sandwich.

"Many people have a natural revulsion to the idea of eating insects," De Foliart said.

He said Americans eventually may eat insects directly, but certainly not until the public is gradually persuaded that a bug burger is as good as a hamburger.

"I don't know if we'll ever get people to eat insects directly," he said. "It might come to that, but not right away in this country."

In the meantime, De Foliart is conducting various experiments to determine the nutritional and economic advantages of insects as food.

"Termites, for instance, have a higher protein content than beef or fish," he said. "And housefly pupae — that's the stage between the larvae and the adult — have the equivalent of fish and bone meal and are actually of better quality than soybean oil meal."

De Foliart is developing indirect means of using insects to fortify and improve supplies.

In one experiment, he fed manure to housefly larvae and then fed the larvae to chickens. The birds prospered and laid healthy high grade eggs.

But his students wouldn't eat them.

"My experience has been limited to a silkworm pupae about 10 yers ago," he said ruefully. "It tasted like a museum specimen. It really wasn't very good."

House Voted 303-96 To Open Military Academies To Women

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opening the three military academies to women was approved by the House 303 to 96 Tuesday amid objections that it would be the first step toward putting women into combat.

Opponents of the plan said they would not vote to send women into combat, and the training at West Point, Annapolis and the Air Force Academy would be a waste if the women did not do so.

But backers of the plan said women should get the same military and leadership training as men.

The measure, an amendment to a military weapons authorization bill, still requires Senate approval and President Ford's signature to become law, however.

Rep. W. C. Daniels, D-Va., noted that the action does change the current law prohibiting women from serving in combat.

"It might be interesting if we add a new element to the great leadership of this country of ours," said Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N. Y.

Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., said the plan was "unsound from both the physiologic and national security point of view."

He asked how a woman could serve the required five years as an officer is she were pregnant three times and perhaps chose to breast-feed her children.

"There were lactating women on the frontiers of this country and there were lactating women on the fronts in Israel and somehow that didn't stop progress," responded Rep. Abzug.

The amendment to remove the restrictions on women was introduced by Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y.

Rep. Clarence B. Long, D-Md., said there was also opposition to women serving in the military during World War II, but when opponents saw it worked they changed their minds.

"Men have no monopoly on courage and intelligence," he said.

Rep. David Train, R-La., suggested a study of setting up a separate military academy for women but that was rejected 284 to 113.

Stratton originally had proposed that women go into non-fighting combat assignments as well as be admitted to the academies, but dropped the combat provision, he said, because of opposition.

Stratton said the aim of his amendment was simply to give women the equal opportunity with men to advance their military careers by getting academy training.

The services are already seeking women, he said, and "they're a part of the force.

"Their I.Q. level and enthusiasm level is higher on the whole than the men's," he said.

Ford's Half-Brother To Give Demos $50

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — President Ford's half-brother Tom has pledged $50 to Democratic State House candidates for next year's election.

"It's fantastic," said Stanley Fedewa, executive secretary of the Michigan House Democratic caucus. "We're very happy. Maybe they're catching on."

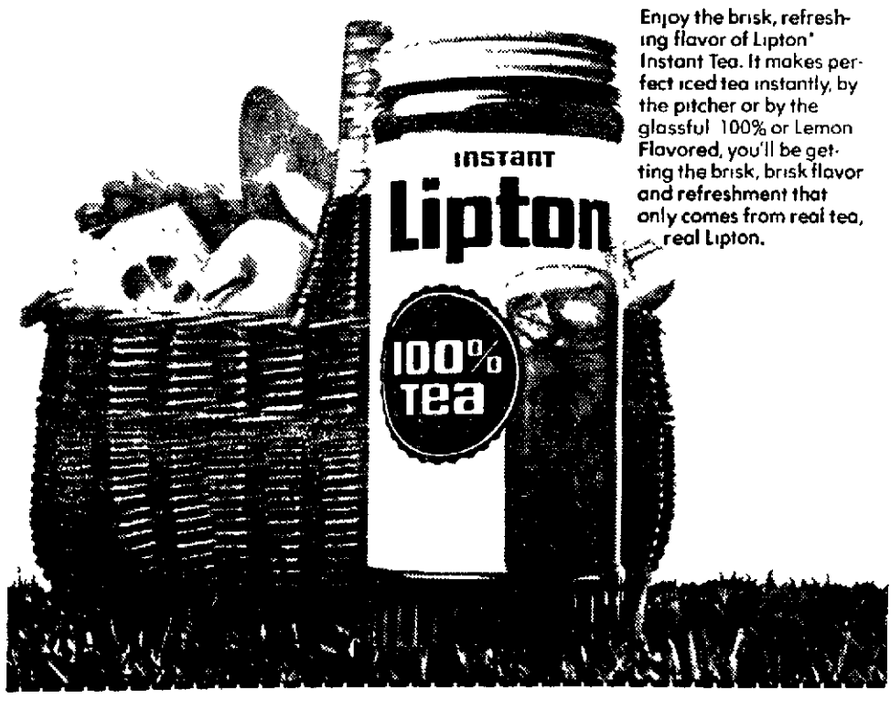

But Ford, 56, says he's not abandoning the Republican party

As a legislative audit coordinator in the Michigan Legislature, Ford is an employe of both parties, so he tries to keep everyone happy with political contributions to both sides.

"I haven't changed parties," the former GOP state representative said Tuesday. "I play it right down the middle. This is a nonpartisan job and if I'm going to support one I have to support the other."

Last year, for example, Ford says he gave about $400 to $500, "split almost exactly down the middle to the penny" between Republicans and Democrats.

Portugal's Bullfights Threatened

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Social revolution and an economic pinch are threatening bullfighting in Portugal where they don't kill the bulls and do their fighting on horseback.

Some of the country's top fighters are working almost exclusively in Spain. Agrarian reform threatens to break up the huge ranches that breed some of the Iberian Peninsula's best bulls. Fights in some major cities will be down considerably this season in number and quality.

In addition, the Communist-controlled television and radio networks have stopped beaming live bullfights and have halted a weekly 40-minute program about bullfighting, making it difficult to develop future generations of aficionados.

"Historically, bullfighting has always reflected the ideological or political or religious climate of the times, and Portugal since the coup last year is no exception," said Jose Manuel Lory, an engineer and the president of Tertulia Festa Brava, the country's leading aficionados' club. "Bullfighting here is in a bad way."

As an example, he pointed to the government's projected program of land reform, by which no irrigated land holding can be larger than 123 acres and no dry land area more than 1,235 acres.

"Bulls need much greater areas to live on, and this measure could mean the death of the large ranches," Lory said. "If the ranches and bulls disappear, so does bullfighting."

He said one bull breeder, apparently fearing nationalization of his large ranch, has asked government permission to replace his bulls with meat cattle, which need less space. Two other major breeders — Ernesto de Castro and Jose Samuel Lupi — have already moved their entire herds to ranches across the border in Spain.

Lupi is one of the country's leading equestrian fighters — a form highly developed in Portugal — but like many of his colleagues is now fighting almost exclusively in Spain. Fights are more frequent there, the money is better and for some of the wealthier horsemen the atmosphere is friendlier. In Spain there is little danger of being criticized as a rich landowner indulging a very expensive hobby.

Another aficionado said it was now understood, without ever being stated, that no good Communist would ever go to a bullfightparty chief Alvaro Cunhal doesn't like them.

"Too brutal or elitist or associated with the old order," he complained sarcastically. "But do you want to know the real reason? Everybody's head is full of political garbage and nobody has the money to go."

One of the country's leading bullfight writers, Jose de Lisboa of the Jornal de Noticias in Oporto, was equally pessimistic.

"The Lisbon bullring this year is scheduling just half the number of fights it normally holds in a season," he said. The management confirmed that part of the reason was the alarming decline in the number of foreign visitors to Portugal since the revolution.

The fights the aficionados see will be of inferior quality — from the point of view of both bulls and fighters — than in previous years, Lisboa said.

"With the stress on straightening out our balance of payments, we must export our best bulls to Spain and southern France, where they are in great demand," he said. "The result is that only our lesser animals are available for fights here."

To combat all these difficulties, Lory said, his club was holding a special meeting later this month of bullfighters, breeders, impresarios, writers and aficionados.

"We'll draw up our conclusions and present them to the authorities," he said. "Bullfighting is too entrenched in Portugal, too much a part of the fabric of life, to die without a brave fight."

Let the buyer be wary

Pardon the free translation of caveat emptor, but this is our day to push buyer wariness. To suggest shoppers follow 10 basic rules of sound shopping from the Council of Better Business Bureaus, Inc.

Why are we pushing wariness? Because it is not enough, any more, that a company provide good value in its products. In an inflated economy, it's also in everybody's interest — yours and ours — to sharpen purchasing skills. The more you manage to get for your dollar, the more the dollar is worth. Enough people buying smartly can lick inflation.

Here are 10 rules the Better Business people hold especially important:

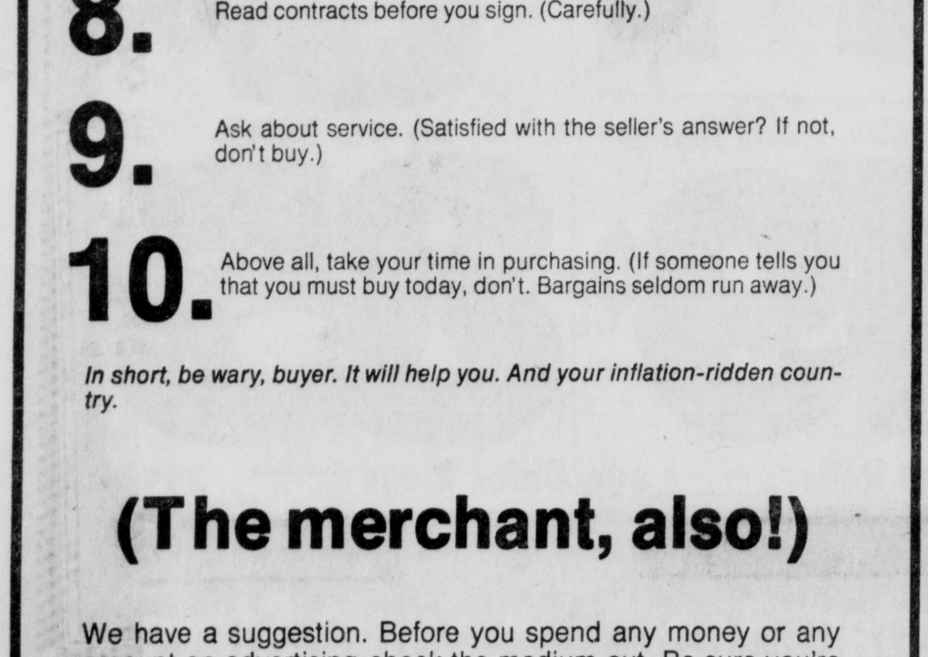

1. Read the label and know what you're buying. (Even if it means toting your glasses to the store, don't overlook the small print.)
2. Understand the guarantee. (If you have to mail a 2-ton air conditioner to Broken Rattlesnake, Arizona, for minor warranty repairs, buy another make.)
3. If you're buying an imported item that must be assembled, make sure the instructions are in English. (Or your own language may not be printable when putting it together.)
4. Know the cost of credit before you sign. (It's legally mandatory now that the seller state the exact annual interest. But sometimes sellers mumble.)
5. Read use-and-care instructions. (Don't assume the manufacturer has built in tolerances beyond the product's rated capacity. He knows his product. You don't.)
6. Check the sellers' reliability. (See how tall they'll stand behind their products.)
7. If a sales person's promises persuade you to sign on the dotted line, they are worth including in writing in the contract. (Any such changes should be initialed by you and the seller.)
8. Read contracts before you sign. (Carefully.)
9. Ask about service. (Satisfied with the seller's answer? If not, don't buy.)
10. Above all, take your time in purchasing. (If someone tells you that you must buy today, don't. Bargains seldom run away.)

In short, be wary, buyer. It will help you. And your inflation-ridden country.

(The merchant, also!)

We have a suggestion. Before you spend any money or any amount on advertising-check the medium out. Be sure you're getting adequate coverage of the buyers you want to reach. Be sure your advertising cost justifies the sales you make. Be sure you're now buying readers or listeners diluted by duplication of coverage of exaggerated coverage claims. In short, get your money's worth!

Serving a market that annually spends One Billion Dollars on retail purchases and offering daily coverage of more than 250,000 readers . . .

Canadian Universities Attracting U.S. Students

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — It's not just draft exiles who have tramped their way north to Canada. That country is harboring an increasing number of education exiles, seeking a better class of schooling than they can afford at home. Canadian schools generally cost less than American ones of equal repute — often enough less for you to save money even after transportation costs are figured in.

Jane Bryant Quinn

The average annual cost of an education in Canada runs between $2,300 and $2,600 a year. That's about what you would pay at a state university in the U.S., but considerably less than the $4,400 charged by the average private college.

Canada doesn't sock foreign students with extra charges, nor do liberal arts schools discriminate ageainst them in admissions. In fact, many educators would like more bright young Americans to come to Canada, in hopes they might eventually settle there. For years, Canadians have deplored the migration of some of their brightest young people and professionals to the U.S., and think it high time the "brain drain" ran the other way.

The main exception to the "Welcome Americans" policy lies in the applied professional programs. Most of the openings in schools of nursing, medicine, law and engineering are reserved for Canadians. And even students in the liberal arts programs will find it hard to win scholarships, or find jobs.

It is difficult, and of course subjective, to make general comparisons between Canadian and American universities. But an ex-U.S. citizen and former president of a Canadian college puts it this way: "Canadian universities, on the whole, are not nearly as bad as the worst American ones, but not as good as America's very best." There is no Harvard, or University of Chicago. But the three top schools — the University of Toronto, McGill University in Montreal, and the University of British Columbia — compare reasonably well with such schools as the Universities of Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

Canada divided her liberal arts studies into the faculty of arts and the faculty of sciences, and you may have to apply specifically to one or the other. Most of the schools require a U.S. applicant to submit College Board scores, along with high school academic records.

Canadian consuls throughout the U.S. carry an outdated booklet called "Canadian Universities and Colleges," which lists some 60 accredited schools and the majors they offer. Or, for $8.25, the Assn. of Universities and Colleges of Canada (151 Slater St., Ottawa, Ontario) will send you a directory of Canadian colleges. If you're interested in a specific field, like forestry or European history, they will mail a list of all the schools that offer it, but will not recommend one over the other. Here's a sampling of the educational environments offered north of the border:

University of Toronto — A top drawer school, tough to get into. Americans generally have to have one year of college already behind them, although some freshmen get in based on high College Boards and good performance on advanced placement tests. An excellent liberal arts program, especially in English and history. Cost, including tuition, books and living expenses: around $2,300.

McGill University — A good choice for bright students who like a more cosmopolitan atmosphere. To get in, you must be in the top fifth of your graduating class, with at least a B-plus standing. Transfers need a 3.0 average or better. Applicants to the faculty of sciences need an especially strong background. Cost: $2,300 to $2,600.

University of New Brunswick — A beautiful, sprawling campus on the outskirts of Fredericton, the provincial capital. Entrance requirements are less stringent than at top schools. A frontier area, attracting many new settlers. Cost: $2,100.

Acadia University — A small school in Wolfville, Nova Scotia, with strong ties to the New England states. Eastern Canada attracted a lot of Loyalists after the Revolutionary War, and many of its schools retain a Tory tinge. A number of Americans have come here to farm, start handcraft industries, and take up social work. Cost: $2,100.

Simon Fraser University — A new and experimental school 12 miles outside of Vancouver. A center of student activism, with a fair number of foreign students, mostly from the Far East. British Columbia has a system of regional colleges like our junior colleges. Many foreign students who didn't do particularly well in high school enter a regional college and, on the strength of a good average there, hope to trade up to a school like Simon Fraser. Cost: around $2,500.

Utility Challenges Authority Of FEA

Kansas City (AP) — Kansas City Power & Light Co. challenged the authority of the Federal Energy Administration to stop it from using natural gas at one of its big generating plants and estimated it would increase the bills of all its customers by 2 to 3 per cent.

"At current construction costs, it would take $41 million to replace with coal-fired generating units the 82,000 kilowatt hours of capacity we would lose," said Arthur J. Doyle, vice president and general counsel of the utility.

He testified at a hearing at which nine power systems in Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri were invited to react to notices that the FEA intends to order them to halt the use of natural gas or fuel oil under at least some of their boilers.

The chairman of the Iowa State Commerce Commission and witnesses from three Iowa power systems also attacked the proposed orders Tuesday.

Spokesmen for the Iowa Electric Light & Power Co. of Cedar Rapids and the Nebraska Public Power District at Columbus, Neb., are scheduled to testify Wednesday.

The FEA has issued the orders of intent to 79 power systems throughout the country. Other hearings are to be held in Atlanta, New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia.

No one appeared at Tuesday's initial hearing to challenge the contentions of the power systems that the proposed orders are unnecessary, impractical and unfair.

Ford Administration Opposes Tax Boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford administration recommended Tuesday against any new Social Security tax increases before 1977 but refused to submit specific new proposals to halt deficits expected to total $14.6 billion over the next three years.

Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Caspar W. Weinberger told the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security that the refusal was prompted by the "cavalier disregard" shown by Congress toward the administration's earlier proposal to reduce benefit increases in July for 35 million poor and elderly Americans.

The testimony was called "shocking" by the subcommittee chairman, Rep. James A. Burke, D-Mass., who said delaying higher taxes until after the next presidential election would be politically popular but fiscally irresponsible.

"You're placing us in the rather unique position of carrying the ball for you, but you don't want to throw the ball," Burke said.

Rep. Joseph E. Karth, D-Minn., told Weinberger: "You're acting like a spoiled child who didn't get his candy."

Weinberger said the proposal to limit Social Security and Supplemental Security Income cost-of-living increases to 5 per cent this year would have trimmed $2 billion from the fiscal 1976 budget deficit. An 8 per cent increase was promulgated last week.

"It may be said that limiting benefit increases is unpopular," Weinberger testified. "I can only say that what is even more unpopular is jeopardizing the fiscal integrity of the Social Security system."

Because of high inflation and unemployment, federal actuaries predict that the Social Security system will have deficits of $3 billion this calendar year, $5.8 billion in 1976 and $5.8 billion in 1977 and that, by the early 1980s, the emergency trust fund reserves will be exhausted unless something is done.

Weinberger said there is "certainly no basis for panic or alarm."

He said Congress should act soon to provide new sources of revenue but not put increases in either the payroll tax rate or the wage base upon which Social Security taxes are levied into effect before 1977 to avoid slowing the nation's economic recovery.

"Any revenue-producing method to be selected . . .," he said, "should avoid sudden and sharp rises in either the tax rate or the wage base."

Burke said in an interview after the hearing that the government could lose as much as $2 billion in interest if the Social Security trust funds are drawn down.

Congress can't wait until 1977 to halt the deficit drain, he said, and may have to boost the current $14,100 taxable wage base to a minimum of $18,000 in 1976 despite the general elections that fall.

"I'm going to take a strong stand that we have to take some steps this year," Burke said.

Relying solely on an increase in the present Social Security tax rate of 5.85 per cent each on employes and employers would require a rate as high as 6.5 per cent by 1978, he said.

In considering a higher wage base to generate more revenue, a number of options are available "but all would require fairly significant increases over the present level of $14,100, he said.

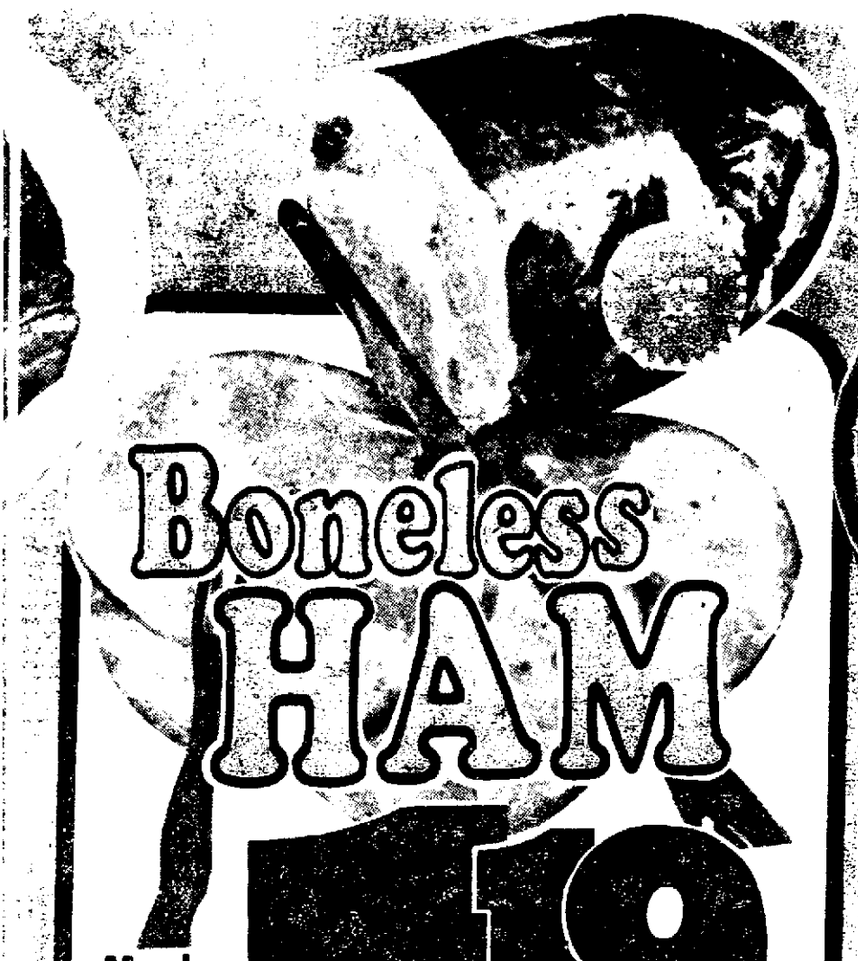

"We would caution against sudden and large increases in the wage base," Weinberger said.

Under current law, the 5.85 per cent tax rate is scheduled to climb to 6.05 per cent in 1978, 6.3 per cent in 1981 and 6.45 per cent in 1986.

The wage base is adjusted upward automatically each year, and is expected to reach about $15,000 in 1976, $16,500 in 1977, $18,300 in 1978, $19,800 in 1979 and $21,300 in 1980.

Without new legislation, therefore, persons earning up to those limits would pay $824 in Social Security taxes this year, $877 in 1976, $965 in 1977, $1,107 in 1978, $1,197 in 1979 and $1,288 in 1980.

Market Listless, Weak

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market weakened in the waning stages of a listless, indecisive session Tuesday amid some apparent concern that the recession might go deeper and longer than had been expected.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had been fractionally higher as late as 2 p.m., was down 7.20 at 830.49 by the close.

Losers nosed out gainers 736 to 659 among the 1,818 issues traded on the Big Board after trailing for most of the day.

NYSE volume edged up to 18.31 million shares from 17.87 million on Monday.

The market set out on an upward course at the opening in an evident carryover of the late buying Monday that greeted signs of falling interest rates and news that the Ford administration was looking into possible measures to stimulate the formation of capital through savings and investment.

But the rally stalled soon after, with the Dow showing only a little more than a 2-point gain at its peak.

Analysts said the market seemed to react adversely to the Commerce Department report at mid-afternoon that both the slump in the economy and inflation were worse in the first quarter than preliminary data had indicated.

Some market-watchers also noted concern that a persistent lag in auto sales might impede the economic recovery most observers are looking for in the next several months.

On Monday, Ford Motor Co. reduced its scheduled second quarter production for the second time.

Among the auto stocks, Ford was down 1⅛ at 37⅜; General Motors fell 1⅛ to 44⅝; Chrysler slipped ¼ to 11⅜, and American Motors was unchanged at 5⅜.

Wheat Futures Prices Decline

Chicago (AP) — Wheat futures declined on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday but other major farm commodities went higher.

Wheat futures advanced as much as 10 to 15 cents before suffering a decline near the close and posting losses of as much as 7 cents.

Corn was up by 9 to 10 cents, but those gains were trimmed to 1 to 2 cents at the final bell.

The story was somewhat similar for soybeans, too, which were as much as 20 cents a bushel higher at one time but closed mostly 3 to 5 cents higher. Soybean oil and meal futures also closed higher.

Iced broilers were mostly 20 to 40 cents higher.

Gold futures prices declined.

Portugal's Bullfights Threatened

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Social revolution and an economic pinch are threatening bullfighting in Portugal where they don't kill the bulls and do their fighting on horseback.

Some of the country's top fighters are working almost exclusively in Spain. Agrarian reform threatens to break up the huge ranches that breed some of the Iberian Peninsula's best bulls. Fights in some major cities will be down considerably this season in number and quality.

In addition, the Communist-controlled television and radio networks have stopped beaming live bullfights and have halted a weekly 40-minute program about bullfighting, making it difficult to develop future generations of aficionados.

"Historically, bullfighting has always reflected the ideological or political or religious climate of the times, and Portugal since the coup last year is no exception," said Jose Manuel Lory, an engineer and the president of Tertulia Festa Brava, the country's leading aficionados' club. "Bullfighting here is in a bad way."

As an example, he pointed to the government's projected program of land reform, by which no irrigated land holding can be larger than 123 acres and no dry land area more than 1,235 acres.

"Bulls need much greater areas to live on, and this measure could mean the death of the large ranches," Lory said. "If the ranches and bulls disappear, so does bullfighting."

He said one bull breeder, apparently fearing nationalization of his large ranch, has asked government permission to replace his bulls with meat cattle, which need less space. Two other major breeders — Ernesto de Castro and Jose Samuel Lupi — have already moved their entire herds to ranches across the border in Spain.

Lupi is one of the country's leading equestrian fighters — a form highly developed in Portugal — but like many of his colleagues is now fighting almost exclusively in Spain. Fights are more frequent there, the money is better and for some of the wealthier horsemen the atmosphere is friendlier. In Spain there is little danger of being criticized as a rich landowner indulging a very expensive hobby.

Another aficionado said it was now understood, without ever being stated, that no good Communist would ever go to a bullfightparty chief Alvaro Cunhal doesn't like them.

"Too brutal or elitist or associated with the old order," he complained sarcastically. "But do you want to know the real reason? Everybody's head is full of political garbage and nobody has the money to go."

One of the country's leading bullfight writers, Jose de Lisboa of the Jornal de Noticias in Oporto, was equally pessimistic.

"The Lisbon bullring this year is scheduling just half the number of fights it normally holds in a season," he said. The management confirmed that part of the reason was the alarming decline in the number of foreign visitors to Portugal since the revolution.

The fights the aficionados see will be of inferior quality — from the point of view of both bulls and fighters — than in previous years, Lisboa said.

"With the stress on straightening out our balance of payments, we must export our best bulls to Spain and southern France, where they are in great demand," he said. "The result is that only our lesser animals are available for fights here."

To combat all these difficulties, Lory said, his club was holding a special meeting later this month of bullfighters, breeders, impresarios, writers and aficionados.

"We'll draw up our conclusions and present them to the authorities," he said. "Bullfighting is too entrenched in Portugal, too much a part of the fabric of life, to die without a brave fight."

Let the buyer be wary

Pardon the free translation of caveat emptor, but this is our day to push buyer wariness. To suggest shoppers follow 10 basic rules of sound shopping from the Council of Better Business Bureaus, Inc.

Why are we pushing wariness? Because it is not enough, any more, that a company provide good value in its products. In an inflated economy, it's also in everybody's interest — yours and ours — to sharpen purchasing skills. The more you manage to get for your dollar, the more the dollar is worth. Enough people buying smartly can lick inflation.

Here are 10 rules the Better Business people hold especially important:

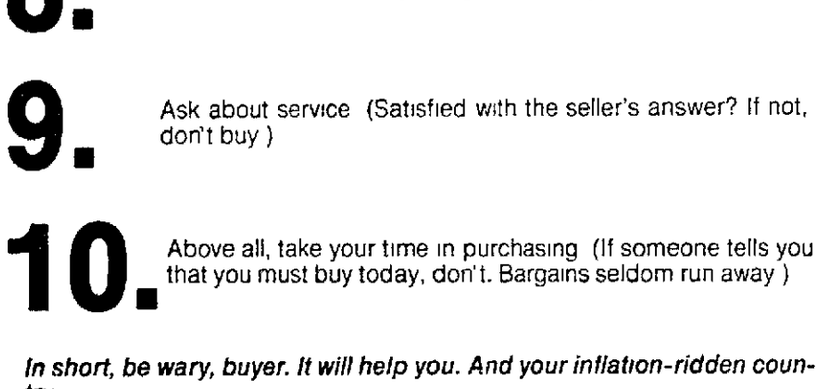

1. Read the label and know what you're buying (Even if it means toting your glasses to the store, don't overlook the small print)
2. Understand the guarantee (If you have to mail a 2-ton air conditioner to Broken Rattlesnake, Arizona, for minor warranty repairs, buy another make)
3. If you're buying an imported item that must be assembled, make sure the instructions are in English. (Or your own language may not be printable when putting it together)
4. Know the cost of credit before you sign (It's legally mandatory now that the seller state the exact annual interest But sometimes sellers mumble.)
5. Read use-and-care instructions (Don't assume the manufacturer has built in tolerances beyond the product's rated capacity He knows his product. You don't)
6. Check the sellers' reliability (See how tall they'll stand behind their products)
7. If a sales person s promises persuade you to sign on the dotted line they are worth including in writing in the contract (Any such changes should be initialed by you and the seller)
8. Read contracts before you sign (Carefully)
9. Ask about service (Satisfied with the seller's answer? If not, don't buy)
10. Above all, take your time in purchasing (If someone tells you that you must buy today, don't. Bargains seldom run away)

In short, be wary, buyer. It will help you. And your inflation-ridden country.

(The merchant, also!)

We have a suggestion. Before you spend any money or any amount on advertising-check the medium out. Be sure you're getting adequate coverage of the buyers you want to reach. Be sure your advertising cost justifies the sales you make. Be sure you're now buying readers or listeners diluted by duplication of coverage of exaggerated coverage claims. In short, get your money's worth!

Canadian Universities Attracting U.S. Students

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — It's not just draft exiles who have tramped their way north to Canada. That country is harboring an increasing number of education exiles, seeking a better class of schooling than they can afford at home. Canadian schools generally cost less than American ones of equal repute — often enough less for you to save money even after transportation costs are figured in.

The average annual cost of an education in Canada runs between $2,300 and $2,600 a year. That's about what you would pay at a state university in the U.S., but considerably less than the $4,400 charged by the average private college.

Canada doesn't sock foreign students with extra charges, nor do liberal arts schools discriminate ageainst them in admissions. In fact, many educators would like more bright young Americans to come to Canada, in hopes they might eventually settle there. For years, Canadians have deplored the migration of some of their brightest young people and professionals to the U.S., and think it high time the "brain drain" ran the other way.

The main exception to the "Welcome Americans" policy lies in the applied professional programs. Most of the openings in schools of nursing, medicine, law and engineering are reserved for Canadians. And even students in the liberal arts programs will find it hard to win scholarships, or find jobs.

It is difficult, and of course subjective, to make general comparisons between Canadian and American universities. But an ex-U.S. citizen and former president of a Canadian college puts it this way: "Canadian universities, on the whole, are not nearly as bad as the worst American ones, but not as good as America's very best." There is no Harvard, or University of Chicago. But the three top schools — the University of Toronto, McGill University in Montreal, and the University of British Columbia — compare reasonably well with such schools as the Universities of Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

Canada divided her liberal arts studies into the faculty of arts and the faculty of sciences, and you may have to apply specifically to one or the other. Most of the schools require a U.S. applicant to submit College Board scores, along with high school academic records.

Jane Bryant Quinn

Canadian consuls throughout the U.S. carry an outdated booklet called "Canadian Universities and Colleges," which lists some 60 accredited schools and the majors they offer. Or, for $8.25, the Assn. of Universities and Colleges of Canada (151 Slater St., Ottawa, Ontario) will send you a directory of Canadian colleges. If you're interested in a specific field, like forestry or European history, they will mail a list of all the schools that offer it, but will not recommend one over the other. Here's a sampling of the educational environments offered north of the border:

University of Toronto — A top drawer school, tough to get into. Americans generally have to have one year of college already behind them, although some freshmen get in based on high College Boards and good performance on advanced placement tests. An excellent liberal arts program, especially in English and history. Cost, including tuition, books and living expenses: around $2,300.

McGill University — A good choice for bright students who like a more cosmopolitan atmosphere. To get in, you must be in the top fifth of your graduating class, with at least a B-plus standing. Transfers need a 3.0 average or better. Applicants to the faculty of sciences need an especially strong background. Cost: $2,300 to $2,600.

University of New Brunswick — A beautiful, sprawling campus on the outskirts of Fredericton, the provincial capital. Entrance requirements are less stringent than at top schools. A frontier area, attracting many new settlers. Cost: $2,100.

Acadia University — A small school in Wolfville, Nova Scotia, with strong ties to the New England states. Eastern Canada attracted a lot of Loyalists after the Revolutionary War, and many of its schools retain a Tory tinge. A number of Americans have come here to farm, start handcraft industries, and take up social work. Cost: $2,100.

Simon Fraser University — A new and experimental school 12 miles outside of Vancouver. A center of student activism, with a fair number of foreign students, mostly from the Far East. British Columbia has a system of regional colleges like our junior colleges. Many foreign students who didn't do particularly well in high school enter a regional college and, on the strength of a good average there, hope to trade up to a school like Simon Fraser. Cost: around $2,500.

Utility Challenges Authority Of FEA

Kansas City (AP) — Kansas City Power & Light Co. challenged the authority of the Federal Energy Administration to stop it from using natural gas at one of its big generating plants and estimated it would increase the bills of all its customers by 2 to 3 per cent.

"At current construction costs, it would take $41 million to replace with coal-fired generating units the 82,000 kilowatt hours of capacity we would lose," said Arthur J. Doyle, vice president and general counsel of the utility.

He testified at a hearing at which nine power systems in Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri were invited to react to notices that the FEA intends to order them to halt the use of natural gas or fuel oil under at least some of their boilers.

The chairman of the Iowa State Commerce Commission and witnesses from three Iowa power systems also attacked the proposed orders Tuesday.

Spokesmen for the Iowa Electric Light & Power Co. of Cedar Rapids and the Nebraska Public Power District at Columbus, Neb., are scheduled to testify Wednesday.

The FEA has issued the orders of intent to 79 power systems throughout the country. Other hearings are to be held in Atlanta, New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia.

No one appeared at Tuesday's initial hearing to challenge the contentions of the power systems that the proposed orders are unnecessary, impractical and unfair.

Social Security . . .

Ford Administration Opposes Tax Boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford administration recommended Tuesday against any new Social Security tax increases before 1977 but refused to submit specific new proposals to halt deficits expected to total $14.6 billion over the next three years.

Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Caspar W. Weinberger told the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security that the refusal was prompted by the "cavalier disregard" shown by Congress toward the administration's earlier proposal to reduce benefit increases in July for 35 million poor and elderly Americans.

The testimony was called "shocking" by the subcommittee chairman, Rep. James A. Burke, D-Mass., who said delaying higher taxes until after the next presidential election would be politically popular but fiscally irresponsible.

"You're placing us in the rather unique position of carrying the ball for you, but you don't want to throw the ball," Burke said.

Rep. Joseph E. Karth, D-Minn., told Weinberger: "You're acting like a spoiled child who didn't get his candy."

Weinberger said the proposal to limit Social Security and Supplemental Security Income cost-of-living increases to 5 per cent this year would have trimmed $2 billion from the fiscal 1976 budget deficit. An 8 per cent increase was promulgated last week.

"It may be said that limiting benefit increases is unpopular," Weinberger testified. "I can only say that what is even more unpopular is jeopardizing the fiscal integrity of the Social Security system."

Because of high inflation and unemployment, federal actuaries predict that the Social Security system will have deficits of $3 billion this calendar year, $5.8 billion in 1976 and $5.8 billion in 1977 and that, by the early 1980s, the emergency trust fund reserves will be exhausted unless something is done.

Weinberger said there is "certainly no basis for panic or alarm."

He said Congress should act soon to provide new sources of revenue but not put increases in either the payroll tax rate or the wage base upon which Social Security taxes are levied into effect before 1977 to avoid slowing the nation's economic recovery.

"Any revenue-producing method to be selected . . .," he said, "should avoid sudden and sharp rises in either the tax rate or the wage base."

Burke said in an interview after the hearing that the government could lose as much as $2 billion in interest if the Social Security trust funds are drawn down.

Congress can't wait until 1977 to halt the deficit drain, he said, and may have to boost the current $14,100 taxable wage base to a minimum of $18,000 in 1976 despite the general elections that fall.

"I'm going to take a strong stand that we have to take some steps this year," Burke said.

Relying solely on an increase in the present Social Security tax rate of 5.85 per cent each on employes and employers would require a rate as high as 6.5 per cent by 1978, he said.

In considering a higher wage base to generate more revenue, a number of options are available "but all would require fairly significant increases over the present level of $14,100, he said.

"We would caution against sudden and large increases in the wage base," Weinberger said.

Under current law, the 5.85 per cent tax rate is scheduled to climb to 6.05 per cent in 1978, 6.3 per cent in 1981 and 6.45 per cent in 1986.

The wage base is adjusted upward automatically each year, and is expected to reach about $15,000 in 1976, $16,500 in 1977, $18,300 in 1978, $19,800 in 1979 and $21,300 in 1980.

Without new legislation, therefore, persons earning up to those limits would pay $824 in Social Security taxes this year, $877 in 1976, $965 in 1977, $1,107 in 1978, $1,197 in 1979 and $1,288 in 1980.

Dog-Saving Sailor Cited In Deaths Of 2 Crewmen

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The owner of a shipwrecked yacht who allegedly saved the life of his dog while allowing two young crewmen to die in frigid water was indicted Tuesday for causing their deaths by misconduct and negligence.

The crewmen died after being lashed to a lifeboat in 43-degree water for 10 hours following the Jan. 28, 1974, wreck of a 61-foot schooner, the "Sadie and Edgar," off Little Beech Island near Atlantic City.

A federal grand jury charged the master of the yacht, Cyril E. LaBrecque, 50, with negligent operation of the schooner and the lifeboat resulting in death — a federal maritime law violation equivalent to manslaughter.

U.S. Atty. Jonathan L. Goldstein said the last federal case arising in similar circumstances occurred in 1842.

After the wreck of the schooner, Goldstein said, one of its two lifeboats proved unseaworthy. LaBrecque, his wife Jessie, 51; an injured crewman, Michael J. Rika, 20, of South Windsor, Conn., and the LaBrecque's 80-pound Labrador Retriever got into an 11-foot wooden rowboat.

Three other crewmen, Bradford Blakely, 20, and Paul Sagarino, 19, both of Wethersfield, Conn., and Valentine Bach, 47, of Chester, Conn., were left in the water hanging to the sides of the dinghy.

The indictment charged that LaBrecque refused their requests to throw the dog overboard or to rotate the people in and out of the water, giving each a chance to warm up.

From midnight to 10 a.m., Jan. 29, the indictment said, the boat drifted further offshore. The indictment said that after 10 hours in the water, Blakely and Sagarino died. Drowning was officially the cause of death. LaBrecque then allowed Bach to climb aboard the rowboat, Goldstein said.

Shortly after noon, a passing tanker picked up the four survivors, the dog and the two corpses, which were still tied to the sides of the dinghy.

The three-count indictment specifically charged LaBrecque with involuntary manslaughter on the high seas, misconduct and inattention to duty by a ship's captain and negligent operation of a boat in violation of the Federal Boating Safety Act.

The counts carry maximum penalties of 10 years, three years and one year in prison, as well as a total of $12,000 in fines.

Goldstein said LaBrecque, who lived in South Windsor, Conn., before the voyage, has moved to Santa Ana, Calif., with his wife and dog.

Ford Says He'd Honor Treaty If Korea Attacked

NEW YORK (AP) — President Ford has committed his administration to standing its ground in South Korea in the event of attack from the North.

"We have a treaty with South Korea," he said in an interview published in Wednesday's edition of the New York Daily News. "The South Koreans have done an outstanding job in building up their own military capability, defending their economy, and they are a loyal ally.

"I think it's important that we let them, as well as others, know that at least this administration intends to live up to our signed obligations."

In the domestic field, Ford was asked to comment on suggestions the vice presidential nomination be thrown open in the 1976 Republican convention "in order to satisify the Ronald Reagan conservatives."

". . . I picked Nelson Rockefeller," Ford said, "and I think he has done a good job. I would expect on the basis of performance that he would be my running mate in 1976 . . . He would be a good partner and he has proven to be a good partner, and I see no reason to change."

Human Services Budget Gets OK

The Region V Community Human Services Board approved Monday two fiscal year 1976 budgets for mental health services and mental retardation services in southeast Nebraska that total over $4.2 million.

About 75% of the amount, $3,271,853, was tagged for community-based mental retardation services provided by six area agencies in the 16 counties the board encompasses.

A funding breakdown of the two budgets shows mental retardation program funds coming from four sources: federal, $1,717,015; state, $562,960; county, $332,405; and other local sources, $659,473.

Community mental health program financing comes from state and county funds only; $674,785 from the state and $258,831 from the county.

The board approved distributing funds for mental retardation programs that included the following amounts: Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation, $1,877,541; Saunders County Office of Mental Retardation, $342,083; Otoe County Office Of Mental Retardation, $158,662; Southeast Nebraska Office of Mental Retardation, $142,415; York, $59,967; Martin Luther Adult Home, $141,889; and Martin Luther Child Development, $72,958.

The board endorsed the following allotments of mental health program money: Seward, $208,042; Beatrice, $255,000; and Lincoln, $436,374.

Both budgets also include money for regional office costs and staff costs. Costs for the regional offices in Lincoln are $34,200 for Region V Community Mental Health Services, and $476,338 for Region V Community Mental Retardation Services.

Salaries for Region V administrative and clerical employes total $350,781 in the budget. The board approved $1,770,235 to pay professionals working with clients in the 16 counties.

The board opposed, however, a 15% salary hike, settling instead for a 10% increase.

Ford Capri Recall Issued

Dearborn, Mich. (AP) — Some 44,890 U.S. owners of Capri I and Capri II models are being notified by Ford Motor Co. of a potential brake problem.

The automaker estimated that about 40% of the vehicles being recalled may have an improperly made front brake hose. The outer covering of the hose is susceptible to splitting, which could cause brake fluid to leak out, and the loss of front wheel brakes, the company said.

NOISE IN THE HOME

The AMA reports indicate that the noise level in the average American home has more than doubled in the last four decades. It is reported that the health hazard of noise is as serious as that posed by polluted air and water.

The intensity of sound is measured in decibels. The noise level of conversation at three feet is 65 decidels; a vacuum about 73 decibels; dishwasher 60-70 — the typical kitchen often reaches a decibel level of 80, same as noise at a busy street corner — or in a cockpit of an old DC-3.

A steady reading of 90 to 95 can caused permanent hearing damage. Protect your ears . . . they are precious.

I'll be gald to send you a MAICO booklet on "Nerve Deafness" that you'll enjoy reading. Located at 415 Sharp Bldg., Lincoln. Phone 432-8597

Power Failure To Cause Loss Of 2 Satellites

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A power failure in a Titan III-C rocket's third stage has ruined the intended orbit of secret military communications satellites worth $57 million, the Air Force said.

A spokesman said the two 1,200 pound Twin Triple-7 satellites and the third stage of their Titan III-C rocket tumbled in orbit before reaching its scheduled orbit 22,300 miles from earth. They said the material was expected to remain in orbit only a short time before it probably would re-enter the earth's atmosphere.

The power failure was discovered when monitors on the ground reported that the third stage, which was to power the two satellites to their final orbits over the Pacific and Indian Oceans, failed to fire.

The satellites can handle more than 1,300 telephone calls as well as television or other messages as part of a worldwide secret communications network for United States defense forces.

The two satellites were to join twin satellites launched in December 1973 and operating from orbits over the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans.

Coding of messages and scrambling of phone conversations is handled by ground equipment. The satellites have special equipment that keeps others from jamming the satellites or eavesdroping.

Market Listless, Weak

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market weakened in the waning stages of a listless, indecisive session Tuesday amid some apparent concern that the recession might go deeper and longer than had been expected.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had been fractionally higher as late as 2 p.m., was down 7.20 at 830.49 by the close.

Losers nosed out gainers 736 to 659 among the 1,818 issues traded on the Big Board after trailing for most of the day.

NYSE volume edged up to 18.31 million shares from 17.87 million on Monday.

The market set out on an upward course at the opening in an evident carryover of the late buying Monday that greeted signs of falling interest rates and news that the Ford administration was looking into possible measures to stimulate the formation of capital through savings and investment.

But the rally stalled soon after, with the Dow showing only a little more than a 2-point gain at its peak.

Analysts said the market seemed to react adversely to the Commerce Department report at mid-afternoon that both the slump in the economy and inflation were worse in the first quarter than preliminary data had indicated.

Some market-watchers also noted concern that a persistent lag in auto sales might impede the economic recovery most observers are looking for in the next several months.

On Monday, Ford Motor Co. reduced its scheduled second quarter production for the second time.

Among the auto stocks, Ford was down 1⅛ at 37⅜; General Motors fell 1⅛ to 44⅝; Chrysler slipped ¼ to 11⅜, and American Motors was unchanged at 5⅜.

Wheat Futures Prices Decline

Chicago (AP) — Wheat futures declined on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday but other major farm commodities went higher.

Wheat futures advanced as much as 10 to 15 cents before suffering a decline near the close and posting losses of as much as 7 cents.

Corn was up by 9 to 10 cents, but those gains were trimmed to 1 to 2 cents at the final bell.

The story was somewhat similar for soybeans, too, which were as much as 20 cents a bushel higher at one time but closed mostly 3 to 5 cents higher. Soybean oil and meal futures also closed higher.

Iced broilers were mostly 20 to 40 cents higher.

Gold futures prices declined.

New Measures Explored To Limit Heart Attack Damage

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The battle against heart attack is far from won, but gains are being made in limiting the damage which they cause. Charles Marwick covers the National Institute of Health which are headquartered in a suburb of Washington, D.C., for McGraw-Hill World News.)

By CHARLES MARWICK

Bethesda, Md. — A new approach is being taken in the treatment of those who have had heart attacks. It holds promise for a much more complete recovery than has been the case until now.

Essentially it consists of using drugs and other means to reduce damage to the heart muscle that follows a heart attack. The result, it is believed, will be to cut the toll heart attacks levy in terms of disability.

When a heart attack occurs, the blood supply to some part of the heart muscle is cut off or reduced drastically. The result is an area of badly damaged or dead tissue.

Sometimes this damage is so severe that the person stricken with a heart attacks falls dead almost at once. This happens in about half of the one and a quarter million Americans who annually suffer heart attacks. In others, the damage is severe but not so severe as to cause immediate death.

When stricken individuals can be brought quickly to a hospital equipped with acute coronary care units, experience has shown that the death rate can be reduced by about one-third. Those units (and there are some 2,000 hospitals in the U.S. with such equipment) monitor the patient with electronic equipment. They enable abnormalities such as irregular heart beats to be detected and treated quickly.

Now experts in heart disease have found that, contrary to much previous thinking, the amount of dead tissue that results from a blockage of blood to the heart muscle is not determined irrevocably at the time of the heart attack. It has now become clear, points out Dr. Eugene Braunwald of Harvard Medical School, that the extent of injury to the heart muscle can be substantially reduced in a number of ways even if these steps are not taken for several hours after the actual attack.

These measures include the use of drugs that slow the heart beat, the use of nitroglycerin which has been found to reduce the muscle damage and also favorably alters some of the abnormal heart rhythms, devices that reduce the amount of oxygen to the heart, and drugs that widen the blood vessels and so improve the flow of blood.

These ideas are firmly based on experimental studies which show they indeed cut the damage to the heart muscle. There is no particular difficulty about applying them to patients, but there is a problem in that it is difficult to determine whether or not they actually work in humans in the way they do in animals and whether the patient will in fact benefit in a measurable way. Thus these new concepts have not yet been widely applied.

It is unlikely that any one of these measures will end up as the single treatment to reduce heart muscle damage. It is more likely that the treatment will have to be individualized for each patient and take account of other problems such as the presence of high blood pressure. Nevertheless, heart disease experts are confident that a new era is opening up in the treatment of acute heart attacks.

"It is," says Harvard's Dr. Braunwald, "an idea whose time — for testing — has come."

Belgian Royalty Given Sacrament By Pope Paul VI

Vatican City (UPI) — King Baudouin and Queen Fabiola of Belgium, on a Holy Year pilgrimage to Rome, were given communion Sunday by Pope Paul VI.

The royal couple sat near the towering Bernini altar on two armchairs upholstered in brown velvet during the mass, accompanied by a small retinue of diplomats.

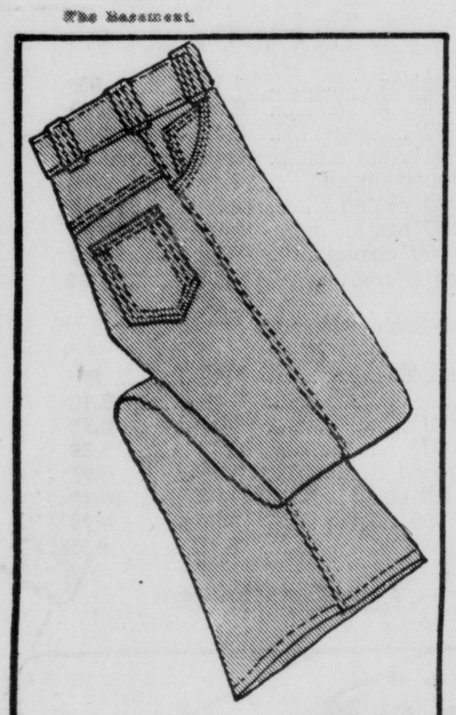

The congregation also included members of the Marian and Mariological congresses and 10,000 members, most of them Americans, of the Ninth International Conference of the Charismatic Movement, led by Leo Cardinal Suenens of Belgium.

Dog-Saving Sailor Cited In Deaths Of 2 Crewmen

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The owner of a shipwrecked yacht who allegedly saved the life of his dog while allowing two young crewmen to die in frigid water was indicted Tuesday for causing their deaths by misconduct and negligence.

The crewmen died after being lashed to a lifeboat in 43-degree water for 10 hours following the Jan. 28, 1974, wreck of a 61-foot schooner, the "Sadie and Edgar," off Little Beech Island near Atlantic City.

A federal grand jury charged the master of the yacht, Cyril E. LaBrecque, 50, with negligent operation of the schooner and the lifeboat resulting in death — a federal maritime law violation equivalent to manslaughter.

U.S. Atty. Jonathan L. Goldstein said the last federal case arising in similar circumstances occurred in 1842.

After the wreck of the schooner, Goldstein said, one of its two lifeboats proved unseaworthy. LaBrecque, his wife Jessie, 51; an injured crewman, Michael J. Rika, 20, of South Windsor, Conn., and the LaBrecque's 80-pound Labrador Retriever got into an 11-foot wooden rowboat.

Three other crewmen, Bradford Blakely, 20, and Paul Sagarino, 19, both of Wethersfield, Conn., and Valentine Bach, 47, of Chester, Conn., were left in the water hanging to the sides of the dinghy.

The indictment charged that LaBrecque refused their requests to throw the dog overboard or to rotate the people in and out of the water, giving each a chance to warm up.

From midnight to 10 a.m., Jan. 29, the indictment said, the boat drifted further offshore. The indictment said that after 10 hours in the water, Blakely and Sagarino died. Drowning was officially the cause of death. LaBrecque then allowed Bach to climb aboard the rowboat, Goldstein said.

Shortly after noon, a passing tanker picked up the four survivors, the dog and the two corpses, which were still tied to the sides of the dinghy.

The three-count indictment specifically charged LaBrecque with involuntary manslaughter on the high seas, misconduct and inattention to duty by a ship's captain and negligent operation of a boat in violation of the Federal Boating Safety Act.

The counts carry maximum penalties of 10 years, three years and one year in prison, as well as a total of $12,000 in fines.

Goldstein said LaBrecque, who lived in South Windsor, Conn., before the voyage, has moved to Santa Ana, Calif., with his wife and dog.

Ford Says He'd Honor Treaty If Korea Attacked

NEW YORK (AP) — President Ford has committed his administration to standing its ground in South Korea in the event of attack from the North.

"We have a treaty with South Korea," he said in an interview published in Wednesday's edition of the New York Daily News. "The South Koreans have done an outstanding job in building up their own military capability, defending their economy, and they are a loyal ally.

"I think it's important that we let them, as well as others, know that at least this administration intends to live up to our signed obligations."

In the domestic field, Ford was asked to comment on suggestions the vice presidential nomination be thrown open in the 1976 Republican convention "in order to satisfy the Ronald Reagan conservatives."

"... I picked Nelson Rockefeller," Ford said, "and I think he has done a good job. I would expect on the basis of performance that he would be my running mate in 1976 ... He would be a good partner and he has proven to be a good partner, and I see no reason to change."

Human Services Budget Gets OK

The Region V Community Human Services Board approved Monday two fiscal year 1976 budgets for mental health services and mental retardation services in southeast Nebraska that total over $4.2 million.

About 75% of the amount, $3,271,853, was tagged for community-based mental retardation services provided by six area agencies in the 16 counties the board encompasses.

A funding breakdown of the two budgets shows mental retardation program funds coming from four sources: federal, $1,717,015; state, $562,960; county, $332,405; and other local sources, $659,473.

Community mental health program financing comes from state and county funds only; $674,785 from the state and $258,831 from the county.

The board approved distributing funds for mental retardation programs that included the following amounts: Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation, $1,877,541; Saunders County Office of Mental Retardation, $342,083; Otoe County Office Of Mental Retardation, $158,662; Southeast Nebraska Office of Mental Retardation, $142,415; York, $59,967; Martin Luther Adult Home, $141,889; and Martin Luther Child Development, $72,958.

The board endorsed the following allotments of mental health program money: Seward, $208,042; Beatrice, $255,000; and Lincoln, $436,374.

Both budgets also include money for regional office costs and staff costs. Costs for the regional offices in Lincoln are $34,200 for Region V Community Mental Health Services, and $476,338 for Region V Community Mental Retardation Services.

Salaries for Region V administrative and clerical employes total $350,781 in the budget. The board approved $1,770,235 to pay professionals working with clients in the 16 counties.

The board opposed, however, a 15% salary hike, settling instead for a 10% increase.

Ford Capri Recall Issued

Dearborn, Mich. (AP) — Some 44,890 U.S. owners of Capri I and Capri II models are being notified by Ford Motor Co. of a potential brake problem.

The automaker estimated that about 40% of the vehicles being recalled may have an improperly made front brake hose. The outer covering of the hose is susceptible to splitting, which could cause brake fluid to leak out, and the loss of front wheel brakes, the company said.

NOISE IN THE HOME

The AMA reports indicate that the noise level in the average American home has more than doubled in the last four decades. It is reported that the health hazard of noise is as serious as that posed by polluted air and water.

The intensity of sound is measured in decibels. The noise level of conversation at three feet is 65 decibels; a vacuum about 73 decibels; dishwasher 60-70 — the typical kitchen often reaches a decibel level of 80, same as noise at a busy street corner — or in a cockpit of an old DC-3.

A steady reading of 90 to 95 can caused permanent hearing damage. Protect your ears . . . they are precious.

Power Failure To Cause Loss Of 2 Satellites

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A power failure in a Titan III-C rocket's third stage has ruined the intended orbit of secret military communications satellites worth $57 million, the Air Force said.

A spokesman said the two 1,200 pound Twin Triple-7 satellites and the third stage of their Titan III-C rocket tumbled in orbit before reaching its scheduled orbit 22,300 miles from earth. They said the material was expected to remain in orbit only a short time before it probably would re-enter the earth's atmosphere.

The power failure was discovered when monitors on the ground reported that the third stage, which was to power the two satellites to their final orbits over the Pacific and Indian Oceans, failed to fire.

The satellites can handle more than 1,300 telephone calls as well as television or other messages as part of a worldwide secret communications network for United States defense forces.

The two satellites were to join twin satellites launched in December 1973 and operating from orbits over the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans.

Coding of messages and scrambling of phone conversations is handled by ground equipment. The satellites have special equipment that keeps others from jamming the satellites or eavesdroping.

Proposed Rules May Mean Permit To Stock Pond, Plow Field

The possibility looms that a farmer would be required to get a federal permit to enlarge a farm stock pond, deepen an irrigation ditch or plow a field, if federal authority for disposal of dredged or fill materials is expanded under the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (FWPCA).

State officials, heads of water agencies and commissions and University of Nebraska-Lincoln water experts have joined in underlining the crucial significance of proposed rules and regulations for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to regulate disposal of dredged or fill material in "waters of the United States."

The term "Waters of the United States" has not been defined by the Congress or the courts. However, the Corps of Engineers has been ordered this spring by the U.S. District Court to act within the concept used by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), in carrying out its discharge permit program under a section of the FWPCA, or so-called Clean Waters Act.

A lawsuit was filed in August, 1974, by the Natural Resources Defense Council and the National Wildlife Federation against the secretary of army, chief of engineers and the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. It challenged successfully an administrative decision by the Corps of Engineers that section 404 of the FWPCA (regulation of disposal of dredged or fill material) related only to "navigable waters."

EPA Regulation

EPA regulations define "Waters of the United States" as including not only "all navigable waters of the U.S. and their tributaries," already a controversial subject in Nebraska involving the status of the Platte River, but also all interstate rivers.

Going far beyond the present responsibility and authority of the corps relating to present or historically navigable rivers, however, is the EPA definition which specifies "all lakes, rivers and streams within a state which are used by interstate travelers for recreation or other purposes, or which are used by interstate commerce, including agriculture."

Dayle E. Williamson, Executive Secretary of the Nebraska Natural Resources Commission, warned that "if the broad interpretation of the waters and lands affected is adopted, permits may be required for an enormous range of activities."

Officials and leaders in the water field have urged a broad spectrum of farm organizations, water-related organizations and individuals to furnish comments to the Army Corps of Engineers by the deadline of June 6.

Four Alternatives

The corps is offering four alternative regulations with varying scopes of application and inviting public comment to aid in adoption of a system of regulations to implement the court order.

Alternative 1, the broadest of the four, is favored by EPA and in essence extends Federal jurisdiction over the disposal of dredged or fill material to virtually every coastal and inland artificial or natural body of water.

Alternative 2 includes a more limited definition of "Waters of the U.S." Jurisdiction over inland waters would be limited to navigable waters of the U.S. and their primary tributaries up to their headwaters. (Under the present Corps policy, this would include the Platte River in Nebraska.) Under this alternative, a permit would not be required for the disposal of less than 100 cubic yards of dredged or fill material.

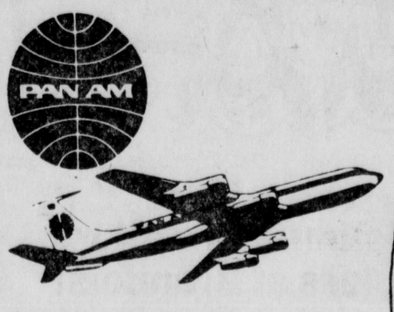

Alternative 3 adopts the same broad definition as Alternative 1, but permits would be required only for disposal of dredged or fill material in navigable waters. Applications for permits would be processed at the Federal level only if there are no objections from appropriate state agencies. The state's position would be weighed heavily unless there is an "overriding national interest" to the contrary.

Alternative 4 is favored by the Corps of Engineers. It adopts the limited definition of waters in Alternative 2, and the initial state certification and authorization requirements of Alternative 3 prior to any federal processing of a permit to dispose of dredged or fill material in other than navigable waters.

Adoption of any of the alternatives, state officials feel, will result in much red tape and an inevitable delay in securing of permits — but they generally consider Alternative 4 as "the lesser evil."

As a general rule, according to the Federal Register, the average Department of Army permit requires four months to process if a routine, noncontroversial activity is involved.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

San Francisco — I had lunch at the North Beach Restaurant (the original San Francisco Bay Leaf restaurant) with a left-handed lawyer who said: "I may start a class action for the benefit of southpaws."

He said: "One of every 20 people is left-handed. Yet industry ignores their needs which are different than right handers. We are a put-upon minority."

This would never occur to people who write with their right hands. The principle beef of this lefty is about cigaret lighters.

He said: "If you buy a lighter with a wheel thumbed from the side — a French Dupont or an English Dunhill — it's made to thumb with the right hand.

"If you thumb it with the left hand, it spins away from you. And may even escape and land in the soup at the next table."

All God's chillun got troubles. But some you never knew about before.

☆ ☆ ☆

Our black cat, Hell, brought in the morning mouse. I am getting blooming tired of capturing mice before coffee.

It's a daily thing with this cat — she must be working for a merit badge in mouse hunting.

I said to the children: "You get rid of this mouse. And fetch me the cooking sherry."

Good thing I have nerves like piano wire. An ordinary bloke would cave in under these things.

☆ ☆ ☆

I've been reading a book called: "Stress." Stress is bad for you. Sad to say, most things in our modern life are filled with stress.

The medic has no real answers for this stressed life when it gives you headaches, flat feet, falling hair and splashes your stomach walls with battery acid.

"A period of 20 minutes, morning and afternoon, at meditation is a relief."

I sat down to meditate. Immediately I found myself meditating on life's stress-filled problems. It's later than you think. So don't think.

☆ ☆ ☆

It is stress, says the medic, that puts us on squareface gin. That sends us to the couch or swinging on a chandelier.

"Take long walks," said my doctor.

He should see me at airports where I spend a good deal of my stressed life. When I check in my ticket, they press a button which tells the pilot to move the airplane from nearby Gate 1 to faraway Gate 52.

That's when I do my long walks.

☆ ☆ ☆

Well, here's a balmy day in May and I am moving. Evicted, by thunder, from the nest I had furnished with non-stress items. I mean, I got used to this place.

The writing medicas have figured out a scale of stress. Moving ranks way up there. Getting out of one place and into another makes you tense as a bed spring.

But move I must. New walls. New leases. New numbers on doors and phones. One year (I was living in hotels) I had to move 24 times!

I wound up in pitiful shape. The medic pumped up the judas cuff on my arm and watched it hit a high that was good for the Guinness Book of Records.

☆ ☆ ☆

"No rest for the weary," said my grandmother. I imagine there was stress for everybody in those sleepy time days.

However, there were no shrinks to tell you you were stressed. No pills to pep you up or put you down.

Grandmother just said: "Drat it! The sink's stopped up again." She got the plunger and pumped it. She lived a long, long life.

New York City Cancels Offering

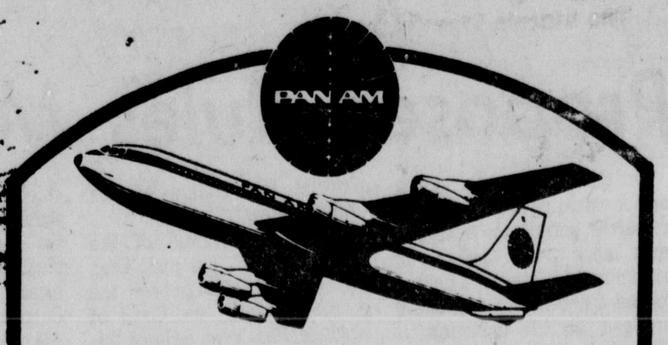

New York (AP) — New York City cancelled its $280 million note offering.

The money from the sale is needed to retire $220 million of notes expiring on May 30 and to help pay city employes this month.

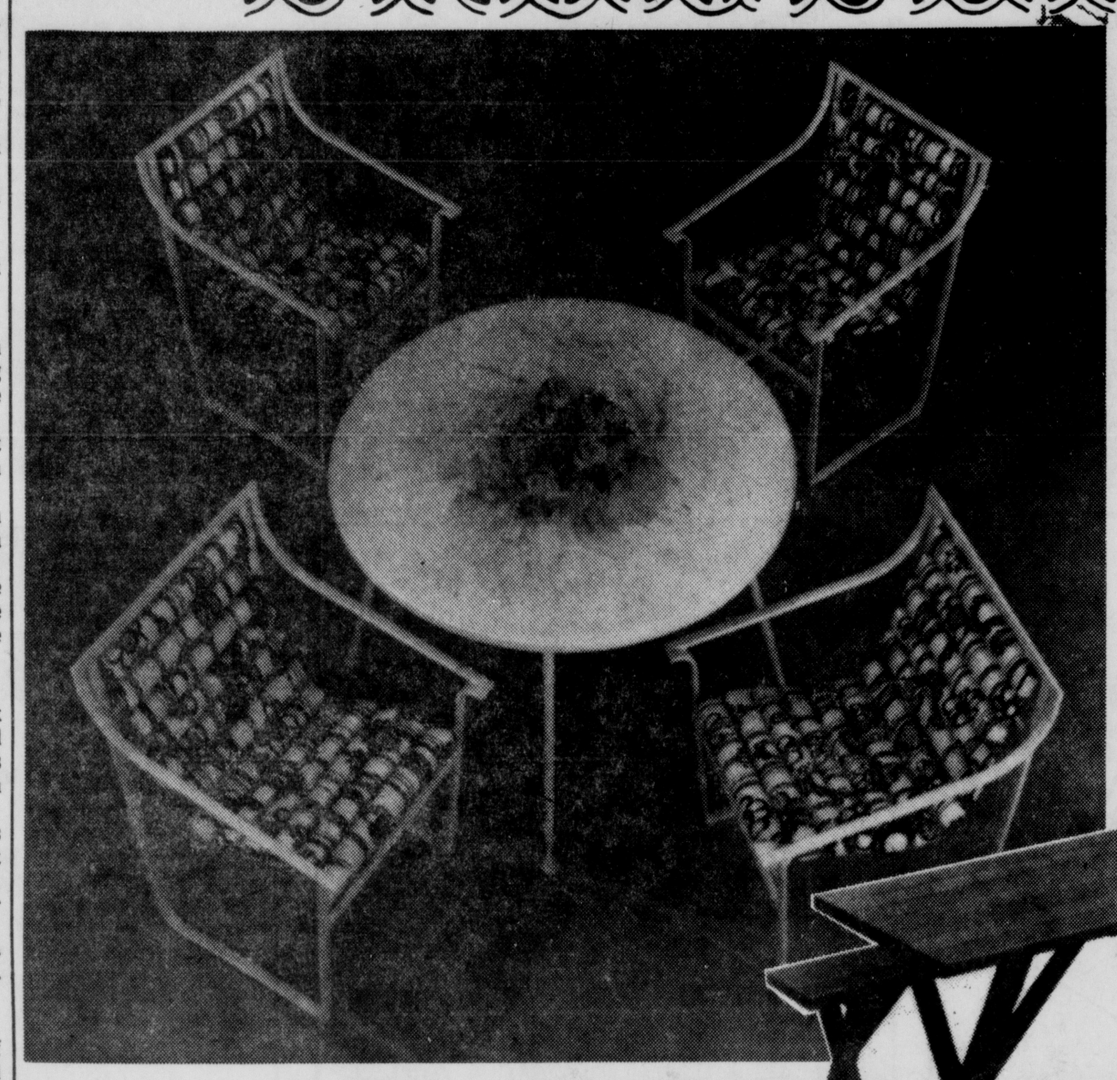

Many Wall Streeters were surprised last week when New York City announced the offering in the midst of its current cash crisis and few if any bids were expected for the issue.

City officials said they met with the major metropolitan banks to try to work out an underwriting for some short-term notes.

New Measures Explored To Limit Heart Attack Damage

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The battle against heart attack is far from won, but gains are being made in limiting the damage which they cause. Charles Marwick covers the National Institute of Health which are headquartered in a suburb of Washington, D.C., for McGraw-Hill World News.)

By CHARLES MARWICK

Bethesda, Md — A new approach is being taken in the treatment of those who have had heart attacks. It holds promise for a much more complete recovery than has been the case until now

Essentially it consists of using drugs and other means to reduce damage to the heart muscle that follows a heart attack The result, it is believed, will be to cut the toll heart attacks levy in terms of disability

When a heart attack occurs, the blood supply to some part of the heart muscle is cut off or reduced drastically The result is an area of badly damaged or dead tissue

Sometimes this damage is so severe that the person stricken with a heart attacks falls dead almost at once Thus happens in about half of the one and a quarter million Americans who annually suffer heart attacks In others, the damage is severe but not so severe as to cause immediate death

When stricken individuals can be brought quickly to a hospital equipped with acute coronary care units, experience has shown that the death rate can be reduced by about one-third Those units (and there are some 2,000 hospitals in the U S with such equipment) monitor the patient with electronic equipment They enable abnormalities such as irregular heart beats to be detected and treated quickly

Now experts in heart disease have found that, contrary to much previous thinking, the amount of dead tissue that results from a blockage of blood to the heart muscle is not determined irrevocably at the time of the heart attack It has now become clear, points out Dr. Eugene Braunwald of Harvard Medical School, that the extent of injury to the heart muscle can be substantially reduced in a number of ways even if these steps are not taken for several hours after the actual attack

These measures include the use of drugs that slow the heart beat, the use of nitroglycerin which has been found to reduce the muscle damage and also favorably alters some of the abnormal heart rhythms, devices that reduce the amount of oxygen to the heart, and drugs that widen the blood vessels and so improve the flow of blood

These ideas are firmly based on experimental studies which show they indeed cut the damage to the heart muscle. There is no particular difficulty about applying them to patients, but there is a problem in that it is difficult to determine whether or not they actually work in humans in the way they do in animals and whether the patient will in fact benefit in a measurable way Thus these new concepts have not yet been widely applied.

It is unlikely that any one of these measures will end up as the single treatment to reduce heart muscle damage It is more likely that the treatment will have to be individualized for each patient and take account of other problems such as the presence of high blood pressure Nevertheless, heart disease experts are confident that a new era is opening up in the treatment of acute heart attacks

"It is," says Harvard's Dr Braunwald, "an idea whose time — for testing — has come"

Belgian Royalty Given Sacrament By Pope Paul VI

Vatican City (UPI) — King Baudouin and Queen Fabiola of Belgium, on a Holy Year pilgrimage to Rome, were given communion Sunday by Pope Paul VI.

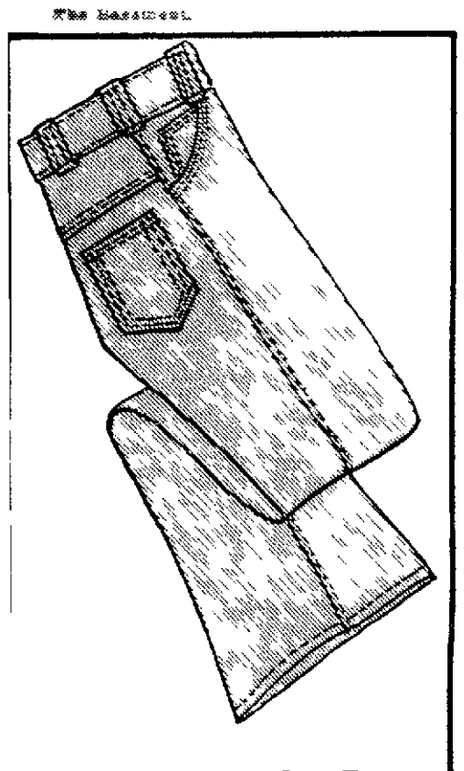

The royal couple sat near the towering Bernini altar on two armchairs upholstered in brown velvet during the mass, accompanied by a small retinue of diplomats

The congregation also included members of the Marian and Mariological congresses and 10,000 members, most of them Americans, of the Ninth International Conference of the Charismatic Movement, led by Leo Cardinal Suenens of Belgium

Israel, Europe Closer

JERUSALEM (AP) — The signing of an agreement with the European Common Market is helping Israel overcome a notion that it is a diplomatically isolated nation surrounded by hostile Arabs.

The agreement for one thing means that Israel inevitably will firm up its political ties with Europe. Perhaps the trend already has begun, for three European foreign ministers have come to Israel for political talks in the past six weeks.

Next month Premier Yitzhak Rabin will meet President Ford for talks aimed — say the Americans — "at further strengthening the friendly ties," a change from the frosty atmosphere caused by the failure of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's peace effort March 22.

Meanwhile, the Soviets have made low-key overtures to Jerusalem, and Foreign Minister Yigal Allon, who has been touring European capitals, will visit Communist Romania this month.

"We have been trying to improve relations with Europe, and we seem to be doing fairly well," says a senior Israeli official.

Even some of the African states who severed ties with Israel are guardedly trying to rewin Jerusalem's friendship, Israeli sources say.

It is a striking contrast to the picture just a few months ago. First there was the shock of the Palestine Liberation Organization being accepted into the United Nations in November. Then Kissinger's effort failed and he blamed Israel.

"With America, it looks much better than it did last March," says the official.

But for Israel, the deal with the Common Market is Jerusalem's biggest foreign policy achievement in years.

The agreement, under which tariffs on trade between Israel and the market countries will gradually drop to zero by 1989, is the biggest economic venture Israel has ever entered — even larger than the multibillion-dollar deal it signed with West Germany in 1954 to compensate for Nazi extermination of Jews.

In 1974, Israel imported $1.967 billion in goods from Common Market countries — triple what it exported to them. By 1989, thanks to the agreement, the Israelis hope to wipe out the deficit.

The Common Market also is negotiating a similar deal with Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia, but the talks are being impeded by technological problems.

In Israel's case, France and West Germany stepped in to hasten agreement in a manner which Israelis took as a clear gesture of friendship.

Proposed Rules May Mean Permit To Stock Pond, Plow Field

The possibility looms that a farmer would be required to get a federal permit to enlarge a farm stock pond, deepen an irrigation ditch or plow a field, if federal authority for disposal of dredged or fill materials is expanded under the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (FWPCA).

State officials, heads of water agencies and commissions and University of Nebraska-Lincoln water experts have joined in underlining the crucial significance of proposed rules and regulations for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to regulate disposal of dredged or fill material in "waters of the United States."

The term "Waters of the United States" has not been defined by the Congress or the courts. However, the Corps of Engineers has been ordered this spring by the U.S. District Court to act within the concept used by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), in carrying out its discharge permit program under a section of the FWPCA, or so-called Clean Waters Act.

A lawsuit was filed in August, 1974, by the Natural Resources Defense Council and the National Wildlife Federation against the secretary of army, chief of engineers and the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. It challenged successfully an administrative decision by the Corps of Engineers that section 404 of the FWPCA (regulation of disposal of dredged or fill material) related only to "navigable waters."

EPA Regulation

EPA regulations define "Waters of the United States" as including not only "all navigable waters of the U.S. and their tributaries," already a controversial subject in Nebraska involving the status of the Platte River, but also all interstate rivers.

Going far beyond the present responsibility and authority of the corps relating to present or historically navigable rivers, however, is the EPA definition which specifies "all lakes, rivers and streams within a state which are used by interstate travelers for recreation or other purposes, or which are used by interstate commerce, including agriculture."

Dayle E. Williamson, Executive Secretary of the Nebraska Natural Resources Commission, warned that "if the broad interpretation of the waters and lands affected is adopted, permits may be required for an enormous range of activities."

Officials and leaders in the water field have urged a broad spectrum of farm organizations, water-related organizations and individuals to furnish comments to the Army Corps of Engineers by the deadline of June 6.

Four Alternatives

The corps is offering four alternative regulations with varying scopes of application and inviting public comment to aid in adoption of a system of regulations to implement the court order.

Alternative 1, the broadest of the four, is favored by EPA and in essence extends Federal jurisdiction over the disposal of dredged or fill material to virtually every coastal and inland artificial or natural body of water.

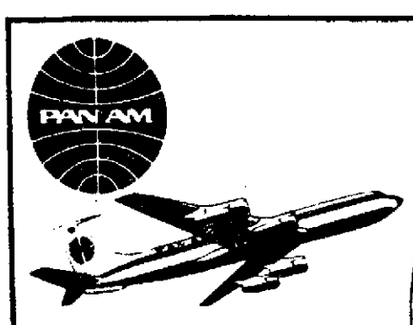

Alternative 2 includes a more limited definition of "Waters of the U.S." Jurisdiction over inland waters would be limited to navigable waters of the U.S. and their primary tributaries up to their headwaters. (Under the present Corps policy, this would include the Platte River in Nebraska.) Under this alternative, a permit would not be required for the disposal of less than 100 cubic yards of dredged or fill material.

Alternative 3 adopts the same broad definition as Alternative 1, but permits would be required only for disposal of dredged or fill material in navigable waters. Applications for permits would be processed at the Federal level only if there are no objections from appropriate state agencies. The state's position would be weighed heavily unless there is an "overriding national interest" to the contrary.

Alternative 4 is favored by the Corps of Engineers. It adopts the limited definition of waters in Alternative 2, and the initial state certification and authorization requirements of Alternative 3 prior to any federal processing of a permit to dispose of dredged or fill material in other than navigable waters.

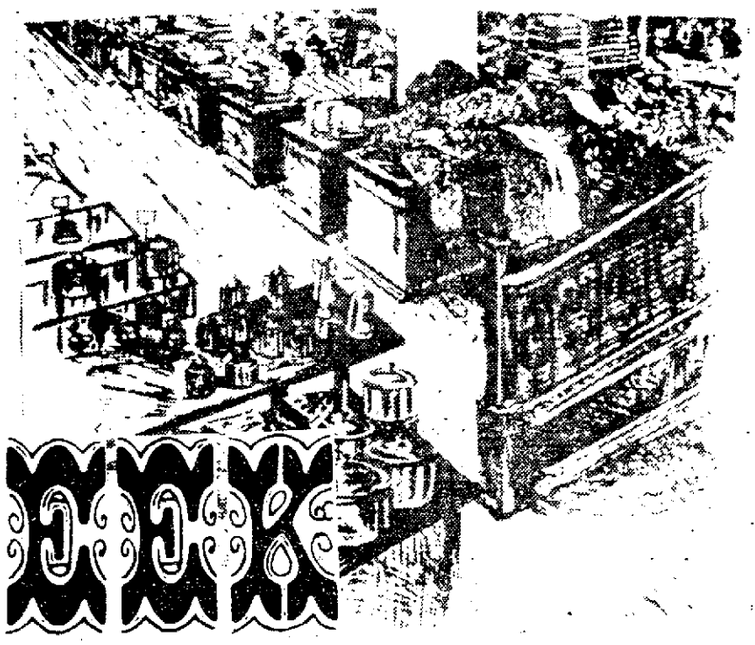

Adoption of any of the alternatives, state officials feel, will result in much red tape and an inevitable delay in securing of permits — but they generally consider Alternative 4 as "the lesser evil."

As a general rule, according to the Federal Register, the average Department of Army permit requires four months to process if a routine, noncontroversial activity is involved.

ACTION LINE UPDATE: Due to the continuing inquiries about unfilled orders with Record Club of America, we are passing the following information on to our readers. The club filed bankruptcy petitions in February. Any member who has a claim is an unsecured creditor and should file a proof of claim form with the bankruptcy judge. The proper forms can be obtained by writing to the judge. The address is Thomas C. Gibbons, Bankruptcy Judge, P. O. Box 908, Harrisburg, Pa. 17108.

I have had my curiosity aroused by recent articles about the late Nebraska Poet Laureate John Neihardt. His middle name is listed as Gneisenau and I was wondering where he got such a strange name?.

L. D., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Carl Jones, curator of the Neihardt Museum at Bancroft passes along the following information. The poet's original middle name was Greenleaf after the famous poet John Greenleaf Whittier. This name was given to him by his father. However, when Neihardt became a poet he felt it presumptious to have such a famous middle name. He then assumed the middle name of Gneisenau after an ancestor. Jones believes this can be traced back to Graf von Gneisenau a famous Prussian general in the Napoleonic wars and credited with being one of the founder's of the German General Staff.

Is there any place in or around Lincoln where a person can learn the sport of hang gliding?

M.R., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The persons to contact for information about hang gliding are Tim Johnson, 477-2173, or Stan Harroun, 477-9581.

Recently I stopped at a crosswalk for a pedestrian and a car passed me on the left. This car nearly hit the person walking across the street. Is there any way I could have been liable if an accident had occurred since I was blocking the view of the other car?

B. H., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Inspector Dean Leitner says that you wouldn't be liable. He says there is a specific ordinance which forbids a car to pass another vehicle stopped at a pedestrian crosswalk and the other driver would have been at fault.

I need an unscratched copy of the out-of-print MGM record called Gateway to the West by Robert Farnon & Orchestra. Can ACTION LINE try to run this down for me?

Lou Ell, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: After contacting several Lincoln radio stations and a large Omaha station we've been unable to locate a copy. We also contacted Lieberman's Enterprises in Omaha, the fourth largest record wholesaler in the world, to no avail. Mike Johansen of Lieberman's suggests the only way you'll probably be able to find it is if someone reading the column has a copy. So if any of our reader's have a copy of the record that Mr. Ell can tape or purchase would they please contact him.

I ordered some personalized post cards from Westberg's in Colorado Springs last January. They still haven't arrived. Would ACTION LINE either get a refund for me or have the post cards sent?

Mrs. S. S., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The firm's customer relations department says they've been having some problems with their supplier. However, a spokesman, says your order will be checked and if the cards aren't already on the way you'll be receiving a refund very soon.

Youth Beaten On Eve Of Court Appearance

A 17-year-old youth was beaten Monday night in an apparent attempt to frighten him into not testifying in court.

Daniel W. Rhoades, 17, of 3087 Vine, and Gary Strauss, 22, 843 N. 29th, said they were attacked by about six youths in the Kerr-McGee Station at 1060 N. 27th.

Rhoades told police one of the youths walked up to him outside the station and said, "I hear you're going to trial tomorrow."

When Rhoades answered that he had been subpoened and would be in court, he said, the youth and about four others begin hitting him.

Gary Strauss, inside the station, said youths threw a bottle of pop and two cans of oil at him. The bottle and one oil can hit him, dousing him with liquid and bruising his head.

Rhoades was slated to testify in Municial Court in connection with an assault at the station in January. He appeared in court, but the trial was postponed.

Police said one youth has been arrested in connection with the Monday incident. He pleaded innocent to a charge of assault Monday in Municipal Court.

Western Fire Bans Removed

Chadron (UPI) — The U.S. Agriculture Department's Forest Service said Tuesday it was lifting a fire ban on portions of the McKelvie National Forest and the Belsey division of the Nebraska National Forest.

Merle Prince, forest supervisor, said the ban on building fires or camping except in developed recreation areas was imposed because of dry grass conditions in the Nebraska Sandhills.

Now that the range has greened up, Prince said, the hazardous fire conditions no longer exist.

However, he emphasized, "Everyone should be careful with fires. Sparks falling in the residual dry grass, leaves and needles can start fires."

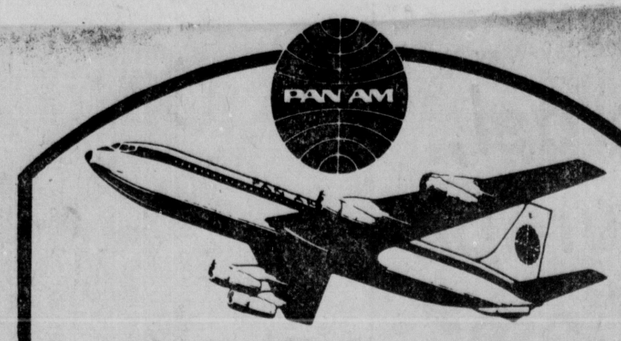

Ban On Cars Foreseen

Atlanta (UPI) — Federal Highway Administrator Norbert T. Tiemann predicted that in the future American cities will have to prohibit private automobiles from congested downtown areas.

Going to move? Then notify the Circulation Dept. so you won't miss your paper. Be sure to give both old and new address.

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — I had lunch at the North Beach Restaurant (the original San Francisco Bay Leaf restaurant) with a left-handed lawyer who said: "I may start a class action for the benefit of southpaws."

He said: "One of every 20 people is left-handed. Yet industry ignores their needs which are different than right handers. We are a put-upon minority."

This would never occur to people who write with their right hands. The principle beef of this lefty is about cigaret lighters.

He said: "If you buy a lighter with a wheel thumbed from the side — a French Dupont or an English Dunhill — it's made to thumb with the right hand.

"If you thumb it with the left hand, it spins away from you. And may even escape and land in the soup at the next table."

All God's chillun got troubles. But some you never knew about before.

☆ ☆ ☆

Our black cat, Hell, brought in the morning mouse. I am getting blooming tired of capturing mice before coffee.

It's a daily thing with this cat — she must be working for a merit badge in mouse hunting.

I said to the children: "You get rid of this mouse. And fetch me the cooking sherry."

Good thing I have nerves like piano wire. An ordinary bloke would cave in under these things.

☆ ☆ ☆

I've been reading a book called: "Stress." Stress is bad for you. Sad to say, most things in our modern life are filled with stress.

The medic has no real answers for this stressed life when it gives you headaches, flat feet, falling hair and splashes your stomach walls with battery acid.

"A period of 20 minutes, morning and afternoon, at meditation is a relief."

I sat down to meditate. Immediately I found myself meditating on life's stress-filled problems. It's later than you think. So don't think.

☆ ☆ ☆

It is stress, says the medic, that puts us on squareface gin. That sends us to the couch or swinging on a chandelier.

"Take long walks," said my doctor.

He should see me at airports where I spend a good deal of my stressed life. When I check in my ticket, they press a button which tells the pilot to move the airplane from nearby Gate 1 to faraway Gate 52.

That's when I do my long walks.

☆ ☆ ☆

Well, here's a balmy day in May and I am moving. Evicted, by thunder, from the nest I had furnished with non-stress items. I mean, I got used to this place.

The writing medicas have figured out a scale of stress. Moving ranks way up there. Getting out of one place and into another makes you tense as a bed spring.

But move I must. New walls. New leases. New numbers on doors and phones. One year (I was living in hotels) I had to move 24 times!

I wound up in pitiful shape. The medic pumped up the judas cuff on my arm and watched it hit a high that was good for the Guinness Book of Records.

☆ ☆ ☆

"No rest for the weary," said my grandmother. I imagine there was stress for everybody in those sleepy time days.

However, there were no shrinks to tell you you were stressed. No pills to pep you up or put you down.

Grandmother just said: "Drat it! The sink's stopped up again." She got the plunger and pumped it. She lived a long, long life.

New York City Cancels Offering

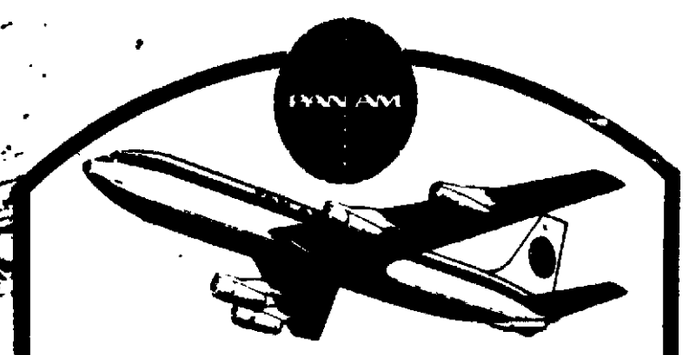

New York (AP) — New York City cancelled its $280 million note offering.

The money from the sale is needed to retire $220 million of notes expiring on May 30 and to help pay city employes this month.

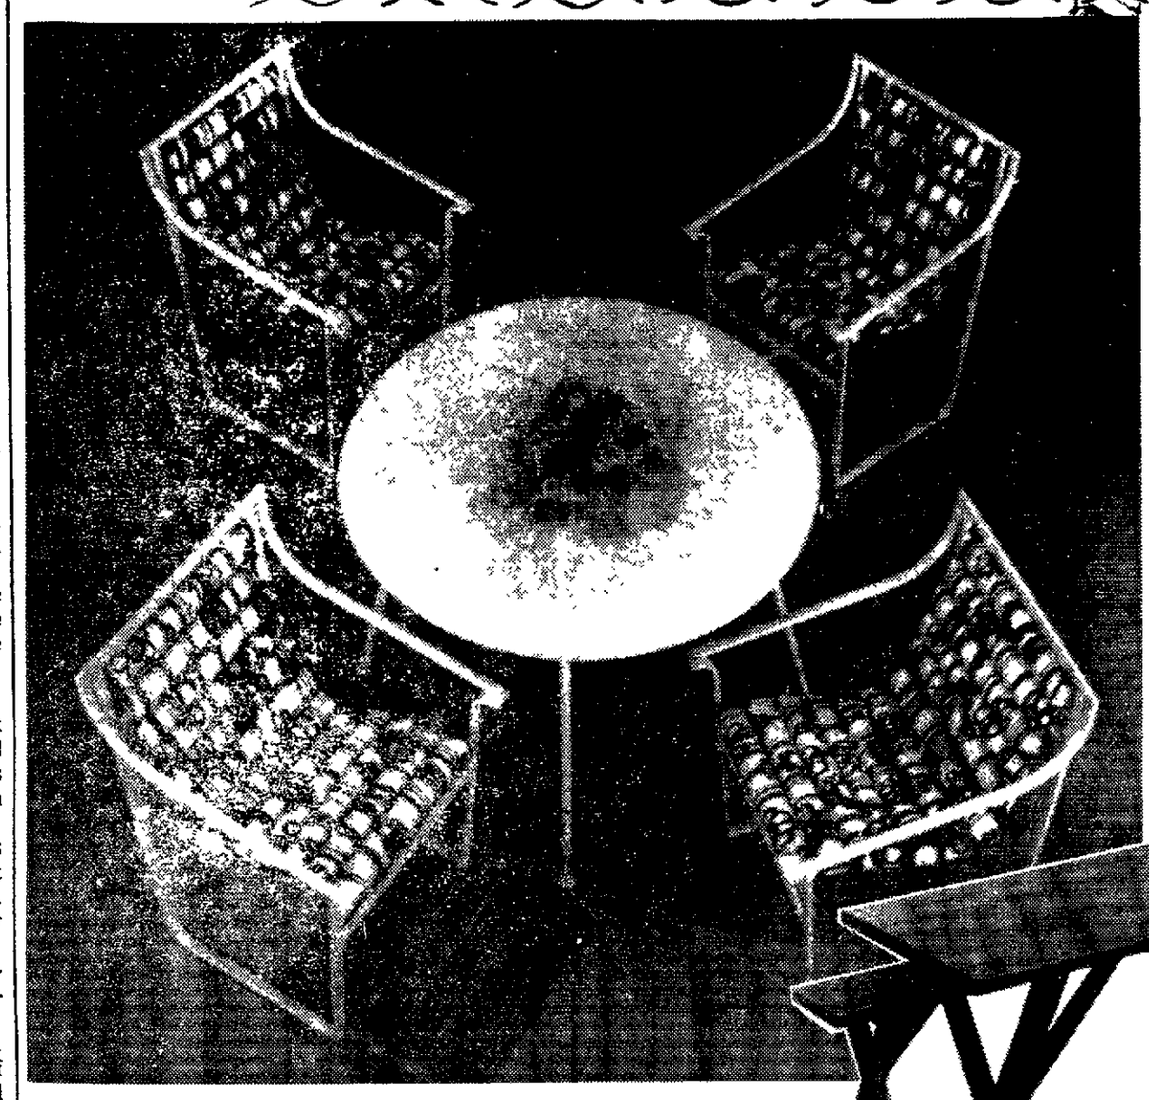

Many Wall Streeters were surprised last week when New York City announced the offering in the midst of its current cash crisis and few if any bids were expected for the issue.

City officials said they met with the major metropolitan banks to try to work out an underwriting for some short-term notes.

Gift Shops, Gourmet Stores Replace Bustling Farmers' Market

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A noon breeze off the river sifts through the quiet Farmers Market where Sam "Black" Crifasi broods behind his unsold apples, bananas and snap beans.

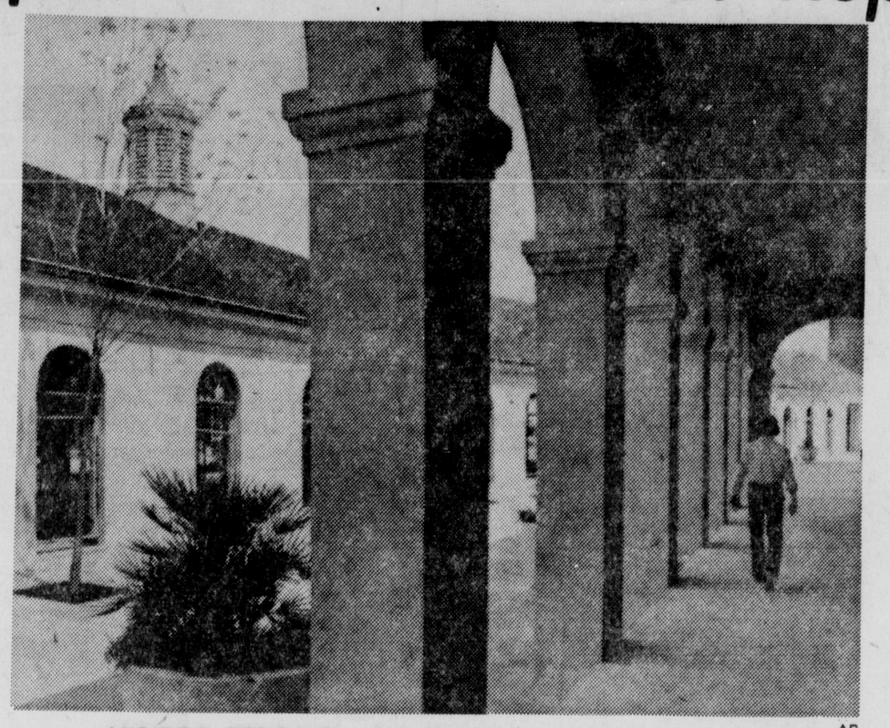

"Used to be people hollerin', goin' on so you couldn't hear yourself," he says, waving at the short walkway of open air vegetable stalls. "This ain't nothin' anymore."

When Black went to work at a wholesale house 40 years ago, the market bustled 24 hours a day with farmers jockeying truckloads of produce for the best stalls and fishermen hawking oysters, shrimps and crabs that sometimes plopped out of their wire baskets and strutted about shoppers' feet.

A few fruit and vegetable dealers linger on today at the end of the marketplace beside the Mississippi River, where the Spanish government erected the first market building in 1791. For decades, Indian squaws had gathered there to sell sassafras bark and French trappers had landed their canoes.

But the fishermen, butchers and farmers have left the other three long, narrow colonnades, now enclosed and freshly painted for gift and curio shops in a $3.2 million rennovation project that city officials figure will bring an extra 60 million tourist dollars a year.

To lure visitors, the three-block-long market area between the river and the French Quarter will offer trumpeter Al Hirt's cafe, a spruced-up Cafe du Monde coffee shop, a river view restaurant, a spread of candle and gourmet merchants.

VISITOR STROLLS . . . through renovated French Market AP

The railroad tracks built during the Civil War remain. But gone are the century-old Morning Call coffee stand, the wholesale seafood shed, the canvas awning, the dank fish odor.

Changing the old market pinched sensitive nerves of local residents, who call the result a "tourist trap" and insist that a "sterile shopping mall" cannot replace the quaint hubbub of a real farmers' market.

A similar cry rose in the '30s when the Works Progress Administration hired jobless architects to redesign the market. They altered buildings, added some, pulled others down.

"When they tore all of this down, a few of us said: 'Isn't it a shame.' But the city was all for it," Samuel Wilson Jr., a longtime city resident and restoration architect, said. "Most of it was done without any feeling for the buildings. But it was progress. You have to have progress."

Wilson is now chief architect of the nearly completed renovation and says it will restore the early appearance of the market. Carpenters have uncovered brick arches erected in 1813 after a devastating hurricane, and scraped through layers of paint to find and duplicate the original dull orange color.

"A lot of people have been concerned that the character of the place will be changed substantially, but I don't think this is true," Wilson said.

"They got it lookin' about the same," Black says. "Might have been a little more raggedy then."

Mayor Moon Landrieu denounced renovation critics for complaining that "you can't come down and buy a wild hog anymore; you can't come down and buy a wild goose."

He presided at the dedication in early April, with the construction barricades down, two shops open, a fountain spraying patterned water — four years after the late Clay Shaw took over the renovation.

For Shaw, it was a new life after his long and wearing, but successful, court battle against Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison's charge that he conspired to kill President Kennedy. Shaw died last year.

Food wholesalers are being relocated in another part of the city at a new food distribution center. But city officials say that, for now, they won't close the remaining vegetable stalls, where strands of garlics and onions dangle in the breeze and 50 cents buys a pint of juicy red strawberries big as eggs.

It is where hundreds of small grocers and housewives bought their daily needs in the wee hours years ago.

"This was nothing but a farmers' market then," Black says. "I remember a time when people couldn't back under the shed there. But ain't no farmers come here now. They go to the chain stores. Everything's direct now to the stores. All them coupons they givin' — if they wasn't givin' that away . . .

"All we got now is tourists, who buy a nickle's worth here, dime there . . . nickle and dime, nickle and dime."

Israel, Europe Closer

JERUSALEM (AP) — The signing of an agreement with the European Common Market is helping Israel overcome a notion that it is a diplomatically isolated nation surrounded by hostile Arabs.

The agreement for one thing means that Israel inevitably will firm up its political ties with Europe. Perhaps the trend already has begun, for three European foreign ministers have come to Israel for political talks in the past six weeks.

Next month Premier Yitzhak Rabin will meet President Ford for talks aimed — say the Americans — "at further strengthening the friendly ties," a change from the frosty atmosphere caused by the failure of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's peace effort March 22.

Meanwhile, the Soviets have made low-key overtures to Jerusalem, and Foreign Minister Yigal Allon, who has been touring European capitals, will visit Communist Romania this month.

"We have been trying to improve relations with Europe, and we seem to be doing fairly well," says a senior Israeli official.

Even some of the African states who severed ties with Israel are guardedly trying to rewin Jerusalem's friendship, Israeli sources say.

It is a striking contrast to the picture just a few months ago. First there was the shock of the Palestine Liberation Organization being accepted into the United Nations in November. Then Kissinger's effort failed and he blamed Israel.

"With America, it looks much better than it did last March," says the official

But for Israel, the deal with the Common Market is Jerusalem's biggest foreign policy achievement in years

The agreement, under which tariffs on trade between Israel and the market countries will gradually drop to zero by 1989, is the biggest economic venture Israel has ever entered — even larger than the multibillion-dollar deal it signed with West Germany in 1954 to compensate for Nazi extermination of Jews.

In 1974, Israel imported $1.967 billion in goods from Common Market countries — triple what it exported to them. By 1989, thanks to the agreement, the Israelis hope to wipe out the deficit.

The Common Market also is negotiating a similar deal with Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia, but the talks are being impeded by technological problems.

In Israel's case, France and West Germany stepped in to hasten agreement in a manner which Israelis took as a clear gesture of friendship.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast for Wednesday

Cancer who puzzles me: Art Linkletter. Cancer who delights: Merv Griffin. Cancer who charms: Della Reese. Gemini who makes me change my mind: Chad Everett. Leo who makes me ask questions: Mae West. Capricorn who tantalizes: Charo. Capricorn who is profound: Henry Miller. Gemini who combines charm, talent, humor: Vincent Price. Leo who understands what it is all about: Buddy Rogers. Libra who does not know: Dr. Joyce Brothers. These are some of my astrological glances. What do you say?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Hang tough. Means, despite apparent emotional shocks, partnership or marriage can be retained. Know it and refuse to give up something of value. Element of timing favors you despite flack received from almost all directions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be ready for change of scenery. Your abilities gain more recognition than might be apparent on surface. Gemini, Virgo persons figure prominently. Specifically, you learn that "unlikely individual" has been defending you behind the scenes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone is careless with money — at your expense. Family situation is involved. Key is to be practical without alienating loved ones. This may not be easy, but it is necessary. Taurus, Libra are likely to be in picture. You person is rebellious and is crying out for understanding.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): See people as they are, not only as you feel they should be. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently. You are given opportunity for advancement — with it you have added responsibility. You will be dealing with envious people. Protect yourself!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can gain if willing to invest in own beliefs, talents. Refuse to fall into trap which would find you at cross-purposes with yourself. Cancer, Capricorn individuals are in your personal picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Let go of losing proposition — in personal and professional areas. Friend may have "heavy hand." Money lurks. Means you are being leaned upon. Get appraisal. Evaluate. Be co-operative without becoming a "patsy."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your ability to make comeback is highlighted as you turn what appeared to be a loss — into profit. Be independent, original, creatively selfish. Means you must look out for your own interests. Self-esteem is essential.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Hunch pays off — you share knowledge and gain by doing so. Aquarian figures prominently. Specifically, you are permitted access to special files, information and are part of a clandestine conference.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Friends with "strange" ideas share them. Be amused, but refuse to become inextricably involved in any scheme. Leave details for another time. Perceive project, situation in its entirety. You learn a secret.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent is on power drive, goal-orientation. Basics dominate. Key is to demand the real as opposed to schemes, promises and flamboyance. One who controls money may attempt to "slide" past regulations. Refuse to be caught in middle of any winking at the law.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Change is necessary, but caution should not be tossed aside. Inquiries are to be made, answers obtained. Messages may go astray. Double-check. Applies especially where directions, reservations are concerned. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius persons may be in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get price on special items, luxuries, vacation plans. Confer with family member. Strive for harmony combined with pleasure. Taurus, Libra could be in picture. Emphasis is on the effect your decisions have on those who are closely allied. Yes, money is very much involved.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have bright sense of humor, a weight problem; you are restless, fond of travel and you now are having more of a social life than has been true in recent past. You break hearts. You can be cruel without meaning to be — Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. May is one of your most significant months this year. In July, you are in new surroundings, a new project — different people.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

ACTION LINE UPDATE: Due to the continuing inquiries about unfilled orders with Record Club of America, we are passing the following information on to our readers. The club filed bankruptcy petitions in February. Any member who has a claim is an unsecured creditor and should file a proof of claim form with the bankruptcy judge. The proper forms can be obtained by writing to the judge. The address is Thomas C. Gibbons, Bankruptcy Judge, P. O. Box 908, Harrisburg, Pa. 17108.

I have had my curiosity aroused by recent articles about the late Nebraska Poet Laureate John Neihardt. His middle name is listed as Gneisenau and I was wondering where he got such a strange name?
L. D., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Carl Jones, curator of the Neihardt Museum at Bancroft passes along the following information. The poet's original middle name was Greenleaf after the famous poet John Greenleaf Whittier. This name was given to him by his father. However, when Neihardt became a poet he felt it presumptious to have such a famous middle name. He then assumed the middle name of Gneisenau after an ancestor. Jones believes this can be traced back to Graf von Gneisenau a famous Prussian general in the Napoleonic wars and credited with being one of the founder's of the German General Staff.

Is there any place in or around Lincoln where a person can learn the sport of hang gliding?
M.R., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The persons to contact for information about hang gliding are Tim Johnson, 477-2173, or Stan Harroun, 477-9581.

Recently I stopped at a crosswalk for a pedestrian and a car passed me on the left. This car nearly hit the person walking across the street. Is there any way I could have been liable if an accident had occurred since I was blocking the view of the other car?
B. H., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Inspector Dean Leitner says that you wouldn't be liable He says there is a specific ordinance which forbids a car to pass another vehicle stopped at a pedestrian crosswalk and the other driver would have been at fault.

I need an unscratched copy of the out-of-print MGM record called Gateway to the West by Robert Farnon & Orchestra. Can ACTION LINE try to run this down for me?
Lou Ell, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: After contacting several Lincoln radio stations and a large Omaha station we've been unable to locate a copy. We also contacted Lieberman's Enterprises in Omaha, the fourth largest record wholesaler in the world, to no avail. Mike Johansen of Lieberman's suggests the only way you'll probably be able to find it is if someone reading the column has a copy. So if any of our reader's have a copy of the record that Mr. Ell can tape or purchase would they please contact him.

I ordered some personalized post cards from Westberg's in Colorado Springs last January. They still haven't arrived. Would ACTION LINE either get a refund for me or have the post cards sent?
Mrs S. S., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The firm's customer relations department says they've been having some problems with their supplier. However, a spokesman, says your order will be checked and if the cards aren't already on the way you'll be receiving a refund very soon.

Youth Beaten On Eve Of Court Appearance

A 17-year-old youth was beaten Monday night in an apparent attempt to frighten him into not testifying in court.

Daniel W Rhoades, 17, of 3087 Vine, and Gary Strauss, 22, 843 N 29th, said they were attacked by about six youths in the Kerr-McGee Station at 1060 N. 27th.

Rhoades told police one of the youths walked up to him outside the station and said, "I hear you're going to trial tomorrow."

When Rhoades answered that he had been subpoened and would be in court, he said, the youth and about four others begin hitting him.

Gary Strauss, inside the station, said youths threw a bottle of pop and two cans of oil at him. The bottle and one oil can hit him, dousing him with liquid and bruising his head.

Rhoades was slated to testify in Municial Court in connection with an assault at the station in January. He appeared in court, but the trial was postponed.

Police said one youth has been arrested in connection with the Monday incident. He pleaded innocent to a charge of assault Monday in Municipal Court.

Western Fire Bans Removed

Chadron (UPI) — The U.S. Agriculture Department's Forest Service said Tuesday it was lifting a fire ban on portions of the McKelvie National Forest and the Belsey division of the Nebraska National Forest.

Merle Prince, forest supervisor, said the ban on building fires or camping except in developed recreation areas was imposed because of dry grass conditions in the Nebraska Sandhills.

Now that the range has greened up, Prince said, the hazardous fire conditions no longer exist.

However, he emphasized, "Everyone should be careful with fires. Sparks falling in the residual dry grass, leaves and needles can start fires."

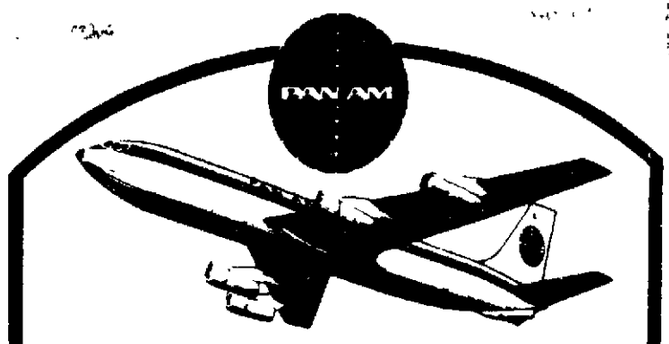

Ban On Cars Foreseen

Atlanta (UPI) — Federal Highway Administrator Norbert T. Tiemann predicted that in the future American cities will have to prohibit private automobiles from congested downtown areas.

Dispute Mars Hearing; Racing Dates Decided

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Omaha — In past years, the poor quality of the Lincoln race track dominated discussions at the date-setting meeting of the Nebraska State Racing Commission.

At Tuesday's special date-setting Commission meeting at Ak-Sar-Ben nothing really changed — there still were complaints about the Lincoln races. But this time, however, the complaints were over who would be able to race at the new Lincoln facility.

While the arguments were sounded, the Commission basically approved the same racing schedule as it did for this year. The only exception was that Lincoln will hold 15 days of its meet at Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha (July 20-Aug. 7) and 10 to Columbus (Aug. 10-21).

That was necessitated, since the construction of Lincoln's new grandstand will not permit racing at the State Fairgrounds next year. Racing will return to the State Fairgrounds in 1977.

State Fairgrounds general manager Henry Brandt analyzed the situation the best, perhaps, when he said:

"We wanted to help all the people that helped us through the years," he said. "I'm dumbfounded. I just can't understand it. The people whom we've helped the most are now giving us the most trouble."

Red Lee, veteran Nebraska horseman who serves as vice president of the local division of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association was the main spokesman for the horsemen.

"The little man has been waiting for 20 years for the Lincoln meet to start since he can't get into Ak-Sar-Ben (which has stricter horse screening rules than the other Nebraska tracks)," Lee said. "Now when the new plant is being done, the little man won't be able to get into Ak-Sar-Ben and he won't be able to get into Lincoln.

Commission chairman Harry Farnham countered that it would be a financial disaster in 1976 to run two entirely different meets at Ak-Sar-Ben, with differing purse schedules, horse eligibility requirements and other details. Lee said "it's a financial disaster for people who've raced in Nebraska for years not to get to run their horses."

All of which seemed to agitate Ak-Sar-Ben executive director and general manager Dick Becker. He noted "We'll be glad to withdraw our offer to help Lincoln and then everyone will be happy. Here we're trying to help and everyone seems to be mad at us."

Becker explained that Ak-Sar-Ben was taking 15 of Lincoln's dates as a goodwill gesture and not because the Omaha track really wanted 15 additional days.

"As long as I'm running Ak-Sar-Ben, we're going to try to improve the caliber of racing here. We can't gear our screening rules on what Columbus and Atokad (traditionally which have the lowest purses in the state) do," he said.

"We've got close to 900 of our 1,200 horses that are either owned by Nebraskans or trained by them or are Nebraska-breds. We're not shutting out the people of this state," Becker said. "But some of them can't qualify under our screening rules."

Becker said he was somewhat worried that the last two weeks of the regular Ak-Sar-Ben meeting next year will suffer as many patrons will not flock to the track since there will be three more weeks of racing left.

"We're going to gear the Lincoln program to the handle," Becker said. "It's a hard thing to guess, but I'd say if we average $1,100,000 a day, then I'd guess the Lincoln Derby would be a $75,000 race."

The Commission also heard from Mrs. Faye Gomez, 2131 S. 61st, who voiced concern about the additional 15 days of racing at Ak-Sar-Ben. She said neighborhood residents were concerned for the safety of their children with the additional traffic.

A 10-day quarter horse meet was approved for this summer at Broken Bow. No discussion was held on 1976 dates for quarter horse racing.

The meet, sponsored by the Nebraska Quarter Horse Association, is set to run Aug. 21-22-23, 28-29-30 and Sept. 1, 4, 5 and 6. The group has asked for night dates.

1976 Race Dates

Fonner Park (Grand Island) — Racing Feb. 26, 27 and 28, March 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13 and March 16 through April 24. No racing Sunday or Monday except April 19. 40 days.

Ak-Sar-Ben (Omaha) — April 27 through July 17. No racing Sunday or Monday except May 31 and July 5. Option to race on June 1 and July 6. If election held on May 11, track will be dark then and race on May 10. 60 or 62 days.

Nebraska State Fairgrounds (no racing in Lincoln) — In Omaha from July 20 through Aug. 7 and in Columbus from Aug. 10 through Aug. 21. 25 days.

Columbus — Aug. 24 through Sept. 25. 25 days.

Atokad (South Sioux City) — Sept. 28 through Nov. 6. 31 days.

Totals: 181 or 183 days.

Warriors Rally Again For Victory

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Remarkable Rick Barry admitted he was tired at the end, but he wasn't too tired to sink two free throws with 23 seconds remaining, giving the Golden State Warriors a scintillating 92-91 victory over the Washington Bullets Tuesday night and a 2-0 lead in their National Basketball Association championship series.

"I didnt' seem to have much energy after the game," confessed Barry, the game's high scorer with 36 points. "I'm just glad it didn't go overtime."

Before Barry's winning foul shots, he felt he would have been the goat if the Bullets had won.

He admitted committing a foolish foul against Mike Riordan with 1:01 left, enabling the Bullets' forward to complete a three-point play that pushed Washington in front 91-90.

"If I didn't foul him, the worst we would have been was tied," reflected Barry, the Warriors' captain. "After the foul, I said, 'Oh no, not again!' "

He was referring to the Western Conference final series when he was the goat in a game against Chicago, firing an unnecessary shot in the closing seconds, and the Bulls then getting the ball and scoring a field goal just before the final buzzer to win the game.

Despite the Warriors' commanding lead in the series now, Barry still was wary. "It's far from over," he said.

Nevertheless, the Warriors' pulse-pounding triumph, coupled with their 101-95 victory in the opening game at Landover, Md. last Sunday, put them in a solid and unexpected position.

Game 3 in the nationally televised series will be in front of the Warriors' home fans Friday night, and a victory then would put them ahead 3-0 going back to the Bullets' court for Game 4 Sunday.

After Barry's closing free throws, the Bullets had a chance to win, but missed a couple of shots and the Warriors' George Johnson grabbed the rebound at the buzzer and raced off the court with the ball.

"I was never so happy to see George Johnson grab a rebound in my life," said Barry.

Barry poured in 23 points in the first half but the Warriors trailed 52-46 after being behind 46-33 at one time.

They didn't begin their comeback until early in the third quarter, when they trailed 63-52. Then they outscored the befuddled Bullets 17-5 and finally went ahead for the first time in the game 69-68 with 1:47 to go in the third quarter.

At that point, Charlie Johnson capped a six-point spree. After a free throw by Washington's Wes Unseld, baskets by Keith Wilkes and Bill Bridges hiked the Warriors' lead to 73-69.

Golden State built its advantage to 88-80 late in the fourth period, but the Bullets battled back and finally took the lead 91-90 on a three-point play by Mike Riordan with 1:01 to go.

After both teams missed field goal attempts, Barry took a long pass from George Johnson and was ahead of the field when he was pushed hard from behind by Riordan. He then hit the two winning free throws.

Washington then worked the ball around, but three shots in the final seconds all failed and the happy Warriors raced off the court.

Phil Chenier paced the Bullets with 30 points, Riordan finished with 21 and Elvin Hayes scored 15.

Keith Wilkes chipped in with 14 points for the Warriors, 12 of them in the second half, and Charlie Johnson scored 13.

After the Warriors had forged into their 73-69 lead late in the third period, field goals by Riordan and Chenier pulled the Bullets even at the end of the quarter. Washington then went ahead 78-73 at the outset of the final period on a three-point play by Chenier and a jump shot by Kevin Porter.

Then it was the Warriors' turn to spurt again. They reeled off nine consecutive points, six by Wilkes and three by Barry, and were on top 82-78. Riordan broke the string with a field goal, but the Warriors ran off six consecutive points on baskets by Wilkes, Barry and Phil Smith and it was 88-80.

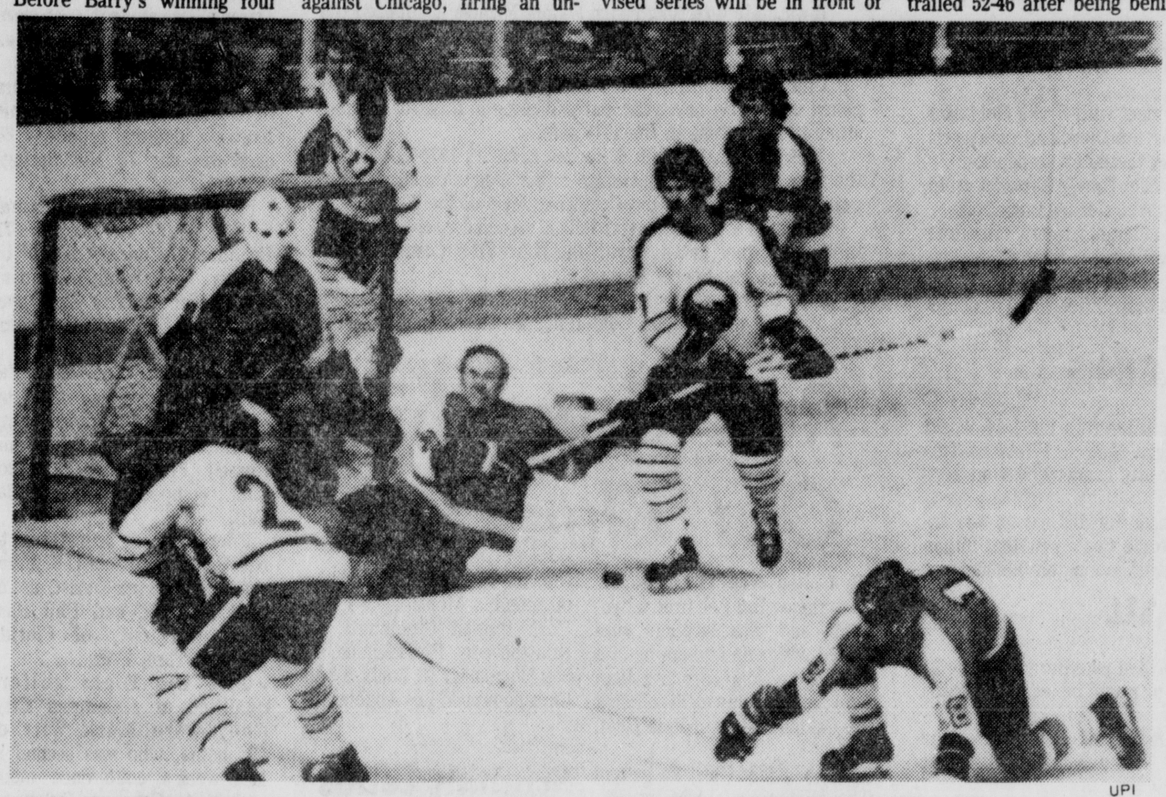

Baskets by Wes Unseld and Chenier closed the gap to 88-84, and after a basket by Charlie Johnson, Unseld sank two free throws and Chenier connected on a jumper, making it 90-88 before Riordan's three-point play.

Four Philadelphia Flyers converge on the puck to keep the Buffalo Sabres from scoring with a two-man advantage during a 1:20 span in the first period.

Sabres Win In Overtime

BUFFALO (AP) — Rene Robert scored at 18:29 of the overtime, giving the Buffalo Sabres a 5-4 triumph over the Philadelphia Flyers in Game 3 of the National Hockey League's championship series.

The victory cut the Flyers' lead to 2-1 in the best-of-seven series for the Stanley Cup with Game 4 to be played here Thursday night.

Robert, taking a lead pass from Gil Perreault, fired from the right face-off circle to beat Bernie Parent and give Buffalo its first victory in the best-of-seven finals after Philadelphia won the first two games at home.

The game was played under extremely humid conditions, with temperatures reaching about 90 degrees and five times in the third period and seven in the overtime the play had to be stopped so the fog could be cleared.

The victory was the first for Buffalo over Philadelphia in more than two years, a stretch of 11 games, and marked the first time the Sabres had ever beaten Parent. The fourth game will be played here Thursday night.

Veteran goalie Roger Crozier, coming into the game in the second period after starter Gerry Desjardins had allowed Philadelphia three goals on only six shots, limited Philadelphia to just one goal in 56 minutes and 29 seconds.

The Sabres, virtually fighting for survival, three times fought from behind, once from a 2-0 deficit. Rookie defenseman Bill Hajt created the final deadlock at 9:56 of the third period with his first career playoff goal.

For the first period and a half, Buffalo, skating with the heated fury of youth despite the wilting temperatures, unleashed its attack that had been missing for the first two games.

Gary Dornhoffer opened the scoring with the game only 49 seconds old as he drove home a rebound and two and a half minutes later, Don Saleski caught goalie Gerry Desjardins looking on a 70-foot shot.

The Sabres, after failing to capitalize on a two-man advantage that lasted 1:20, electrified the crowd of 15,863 by scoring twice in a span of 17 seconds, setting a club playoff record.

Rookie Danny Gare got the first goal at 11:46 when Philadelphia goaltender Bernie Parent was screened and Richard Martin got the equalizer on a weak shot.

Rick MacLeish, converting a pass from Bill Barber, then gave the Flyers a 3-2 lead with less than six minutes remaining in the opening period and Desjardins was lifted at the end of the session for balding veteran Roger Crozier.

Don Luce gave Buffalo another tie with only 29 seconds gone in the second period before Reg Leach beat Crozier at 14:30 for a 4-3 Philadelphia lead. Crozier had stopped three consecutive shots before Leach lifted his own rebound over the sprawled goalie.

East Nips Lincoln High, 4-2

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

Lincoln High's baseball domination over Lincoln East was finally snapped, and the Spartans couldn't have chosen a more opportune time as Rudy Stoehr's squad eliminated the Links, 4-2, in District A-1 play at Sherman Field Tuesday afternoon.

The victory sends East into Wednesday's 4:30 p.m. district finals against Southeast, winner over Omaha Westside, 3-2, in an earlier Tuesday game.

The Links had held a three-game win skein over East entering the semifinal game in the Lincoln district, despite the Spartans owning a share of the city crown with Northeast.

But Stoehr noted that each of the other three games could have gone either way with the right circumstances, and was quick to point out Tuesday's encounter was no exception.

The Spartans never trailed, but after holding a 2-1 edge, Link right fielder Ralph Kuwamoto lined his second single, scoring Jim Glenn for Kuwamoto's second RBI in the bottom of the fourth inning.

In the top of the fifth, after knocking Lincoln High's starting pitcher Chuck Metzger out of the game, Pat Scott scored on Brian Hensel's single with two out.

East tallied again in the sixth when winning pitcher John Bishop singled and later scored on Wade Casini's single.

Leading 4-2 in the bottom of the seventh and last inning, Bishop got himself in trouble after an error put Gary Hart on first, and Bishop walked leadoff hitter Al Fen after reacing a full count.

With men on first and second, Greg Heckman hit a line shot to the center fielder Greg Smith to give Bishop a little breathing room, but a lone strike and four straight balls sent Kent Worster to first, advanced Fen to second and Hart to third with only one out.

Stoehr went with senior Mike Breeden on the mound relieving Bishop.

Breeden let Brad Ewerth get ahead of him at three balls and a strike, but Ewerth took the next pitch for a strike and went down swinging on the following toss.

With two out and the bases still loaded, the Links still had a chance with second baseman Jim Glenn at the plate.

With the count at two and one, Glenn tagged a Breeden fastball to the left field fence but it drifted foul.

After another foul, Glenn caught the final pitch and sent it high to left field in a tricky wind. East leftfielder Ed Mulligan appeared to misjudge it a bit and then took off for the foul line make the game-ending catch.

"Those are the kind of circumstances I'm talking about," Stoehr said after the game. "That ball (from Glenn) could have been fair. We've had some things happen in those other three games just like that."

Stoehr credited his pitching staff for good, steady work.

"Bishop pitched a real good ball game and Breeden came in and did a fine job under pressure," Stoehr said. "They're a tough ball club, but os is Southeast. We're expecting a real scrap from Southeast in the finals.

East holds a 2-0 advantage over Southeast this season.

Royals Sweep Doubleheader

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Behind twin five-hitters, the Omaha Royals swept an American Association double-header from the eastern division-leading Evansville Tripletts Tuesday night.

In the first game, George Throop benefited from a four-run outburst in the fourth inning and shut-out the Tripletts, 4-0.

Frank Ortenzio led off the fourth with a 420-foot home run to center field against losing pitcher Fred Holdsworth. It was his fourth of the year.

Omaha pushed across three more on a walk, a triple by Ruppert Jones, a double by Steve Staggs and a second triple by U. L. Washington.

Gary Martz singled home the winning run in the second contest in the seventh inning.

Omaha pitcher Mark Littell was in frequent trouble in the second game and spotted the Tripletts a 2-0 lead in the second inning.

LSE Upsets Westside In Wild Finale, 3-2

Lincoln Southeast's Mark Harrison bunted with bases loaded, scoring Bruce Baker to give the Knights a 3-2 win over Omaha Westside in the Class A-1 district semifinal at Sherman Field Tuesday.

Harrison, the LSE starting pitcher who went the distance for the win, bunted tc the Westside pitcher Bob Newton who threw the ball wide allowing Baker to score the winning run.

The Warriors, who defeated Lincoln Northeast 10-0 last Friday in the tournament, jumped to a 1-0 lead in the first inning and added another run in the sixth to tie the Knights on a run-scoring triple by Marle Mancuso.

Mancuso, who collected three doubles and a two run single against LNE Friday, also doubled Tuesday.

With the score tied 2-2 in the bottom of the seventh LSE's Greg Smith doubled with one out but advanced no further as the tight Warrior infield closed the door, sending the game into extra innings.

Westside, now 11-5, struck Harrison for two hits in the top of the eighth, but a spectacular catch by rightfielder Stan Haas who then pegged the ball to catcher Smith to catch the runner at the plate to end the inning.

Then in the bottom of the ninth Baker reached first on an error followed by Rex Keetle.

Keetle slammed the ball deep to the left field fence apparently scoring Baker. But the hit was ruled a ground rule double.

The next batter, Smith, drew an intentional walk filling the bases and bringing up Harrison, who bunted.

"Our guys get up for the tournaments," said LSE coach Charly Gordon, "I guess we're just a tourney team," he said of the Knights, now 69.

"Harrison pitched a fine game and mixed his pitches well," Gordon said of the righthander who holds a 0.50 earned run average.

"This team reminds me a lot of our 1964 team which won the state tournament that year. We didn't have a good record then either but we played well in the tourney's and that's when it counts," said Gordon.

Lincoln Southeast, which has dropped two games to Lincoln East in regular season play this year will face off at 4:30 p.m. at Sherman Field Wednesday for the district final.

Pius X Qualifies For State

Wahoo — Lincoln Pius X qualified for next week's Nebraska State Class B Baseball Tournament at the NU diamond here Tuesday afternoon in the Class B-1 district by blanking Logan-View, 15-0, on a no-hitter and then Centennial, 4-0.

The Thunderbolts' Mitch Ohnoutka and Bob Navratil combined for the no-hitter as their teammates scored all 15 runs in the second inning.

Pius X, now 8-7, sent 20 batters to the plate in that second inning and used 10 hits, including triples by Tom Doggett, Pat Fuller and Kent Krause.

In the Centennial game Jerry Kobza blanked Centennial on two hits, while his teammates scored three runs in the first inning.

The 'Bolts scored two runs on a suicide bunt in that inning with the bases loaded and one out.

Pius X finished second in last year's tournament to Omaha Gross, which is again favored this year.

East's Relay Team Hopes To Fill Medal Gap

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

The cupboards are bare and the athletes are hungry.

Lincoln East never has won a gold medal in boys track and the Spartans' unbeaten, state-leading mile relay team is primed to change that this weekend.

Missing track's top individual honor for seven consecutive springs gives East's mile relay crew extra inspiration in the Boys State High School Track and Field Championships Friday and Saturday at Omaha Burke.

According to East head coach Bob Eyth, members of the Spartan mile relay are seeing gold signs these days.

"They've been seeing them all season," he says. "They've been talking gold since last March and competed all season with that goal in the back of their minds."

Senior Greg Wood is the Spartans' leadoff man. Senior sprint standout Doug Caulkins, who also qualified for this weekend's state meet in the 100 and 220, runs the second leg.

A pair of juniors carry the windup hopes. Jim Horner, who also qualified in the 880, runs third. Gale Hamann, who also qualified in the 220, is the Spartans' anchorman.

The quartet achieved a 3:24.0 clocking in district qualifying competition last weekend to overtake Omaha Westside (3:24.6) for the state mile relay lead.

Eyth is hopeful that Wood will cut his time considerably. He ran a :52.0 split at district. Caulkins followed with a :50.5. Horner contributed :50.8 and Hamann sizzled the anchor in :49.8.

"It'll be a real feather in their cap if they all click at the same time this weekend," says Eyth. "The mile relay has to be conditioning. But a lot is mental, too. They know what's at stake. They're anxious to meet the challenge."

Northeast — Trans-Nebraska and Eastern I-80 Conference champion and district titlist — leads Lincoln state meet qualifiers with 14.

First-year Rocket coach Clayton Luther hopes his team is involved in a projected balanced battle for second place in the Class A race.

"Realistically," concedes Luther, "Omaha Westside should walk away with the team championship. Of course, spirit-wise, you always like to think and compete with the idea you have an outside chance to win it."

Luther sees Northeast in battle with five other contenders for runnerup honors — North Platte, Grand Island, Omaha Benson, Creighton Prep and Bellevue.

Capital City athletes pose solid threats for possible gold medals in a number of other events.

They include East's Caulkins (100), Lincoln High's Mike Washington (shot put) and John Beaver (discus), Northeast's Scott Resz (mile), Southeast's Perry Krogmeier (220), Rich Brandfas and Scott Tallman (both high hurdles), the Knights' 880 relay team and Pius X's Larry Gross (220) and the Thunderbolts' 880 relay team.

Gift Shops, Gourmet Stores Replace Bustling Farmers' Market

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A noon breeze off the river sifts through the quiet Farmers Market where Sam "Black" Crifasi broods behind his unsold apples, bananas and snap beans.

"Used to be people hollerin', goin' on so you couldn't hear yourself," he says, waving at the short walkway of open air vegetable stalls. "This ain't nothin' anymore."

When Black went to work at a wholesale house 40 years ago, the market bustled 24 hours a day with farmers jockeying truckloads of produce for the best stalls and fishermen hawking oysters, shrimps and crabs that sometimes plopped out of their wire baskets and strutted about shoppers' feet.

A few fruit and vegetable dealers linger on today at the end of the marketplace beside the Mississippi River, where the Spanish government erected the first market building in 1791. For decades, Indian squaws had gathered there to sell sassafras bark and French trappers had landed their canoes.

But the fishermen, butchers and farmers have left the other three long, narrow colonnades, now enclosed and freshly painted for gift and curio shops in a $3 2 million rennovation project that city officials figure will bring an extra 60 million tourist dollars a year.

VISITOR STROLLS . . . through renovated French Market AP

To lure visitors, the three-block-long market area between the river and the French Quarter will offer trumpeter Al Hirt's cafe, a spruced-up Cafe du Monde coffee shop, a river view restaurant, a spread of candle and gourmet merchants.

The railroad tracks built during the Civil War remain. But gone are the century-old Morning Call coffee stand, the wholesale seafood shed, the canvas awning, the dank fish odor.

Changing the old market pinched sensitive nerves of local residents, who call the result a "tourist trap" and insist that a "sterile shopping mall" cannot replace the quaint hubbub of a real farmers' market.

A similar cry rose in the '30s when the Works Progress Administration hired jobless architects to redesign the market. They altered buildings, added some, pulled others down.

"When they tore all of this down, a few of us said: 'Isn't it a shame.' But the city was all for it," Samuel Wilson Jr., a longtime city resident and restoration architect, said. "Most of it was done without any feeling for the buildings. But it was progress. You have to have progress."

Wilson is now chief architect of the nearly completed renovation and says it will restore the early appearance of the market. Carpenters have uncovered brick arches erected in 1813 after a devastating hurricane, and scraped through layers of paint to find and duplicate the original dull orange color.

"A lot of people have been concerned that the character of the place will be changed substantially, but I don't think this is true," Wilson said.

"They got it lookin' about the same," Black says. "Might have been a little more raggedy then."

Mayor Moon Landrieu denounced renovation critics for complaining that "you can't come down and buy a wild hog anymore; you can't come down and buy a wild goose."

He presided at the dedication in early April, with the construction barricades down, two shops open, a fountain spraying patterned water — four years after the late Clay Shaw took over the renovation.

For Shaw, it was a new life after his long and wearing, but successful, court battle against Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison's charge that he conspired to kill President Kennedy. Shaw died last year.

Food wholesalers are being relocated in another part of the city at a new food distribution center. But city officials say that, for now, they won't close the remaining vegetable stalls, where strands of garlics and onions dangle in the breeze and 50 cents buys a pint of juicy red strawberries big as eggs.

It is where hundreds of small grocers and housewives bought their daily needs in the wee hours years ago.

"This was nothing but a farmers' market then," Black says. "I remember a time when people couldn't back under the shed there. But ain't no farmers come here now. They go to the chain stores. Everything's direct now to the stores. All them coupons they givin' — if they wasn't givin' that away . . .

"All we got now is tourists, who buy a nickle's worth here, dime there . . . nickle and dime, nickle and dime."

Indians Trade J. Perry, Bosman

BASEBALL

Veteran righthanded pitchers Jim Perry and Dick Bosman were traded by the Cleveland Indians to the Oakland A's for relief pitcher John "Blue Moon" Odom and an undisclosed amount of cash. The Indians also called up rookie righthander Eric Raich from their AAA farm club in Oklahoma City.

Steve Busby, standout right-hander of the Kansas City Royals' pitching staff, brushed aside suggestions that he planned to quit.

Florida State remained No. 1 in the latest college poll with Oklahoma fourth.

San Diego Padres' reserve outfielder Gene Locklear, who has a .441 batting average, says he's tired of not playing all the time and wants to be traded.

AL president Lee McPhail will meet with Frank Robinson and umpire Jerry Neudecker to hear the Cleveland manager's side of the incident which led to his three-day suspension.

The Cincinnati Reds recalled pitcher Rawly Eastwick from their Indianapolis farm team in the American Association.

Pitcher John D'Acquisto will undergo surgery sometime this week for removal of bone chips from his right elbow, the San Francisco Giants announced.

The Milwaukee Brewers said all their officers and directors have been re-elected.

AUTO RACING

Race driver Douglas L. Fortin, injured in the 1974 World Cup rally, field suit against American Motors, Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. and an Orange County concern over an accident.

Dick Simon picked up a sponsor for his car in the Indianapolis 500 when auto dealer Bruce Cogle saw that Simon had no sponsor, while watching qualifications on television.

FOOTBALL

Joe Namath said he has not decided whether to sign for $1 million or $4 million, but indicated he might be leaning towards the richer WFL contract.

Defensive tackle Mike Hartenstine of Penn State, the Chicago Bears second choice in the NFL player draft this year, signed with the club.

The New York Jets announced they have joined with Hofstra in dedicating their new million-dollar training facility on the Long Island campus to Weeb Ewbank, former head coach and vice president of the Jets.

Despite reports to the contrary, the football program at Georgetown, Ky., College is alive and well after being listed by the NCAA as one of the schools that had dropped the sport.

Ken LaRue, business manager of the Oakland Raiders, will leave to become assistant general manager of the new NFL Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The Portland Thunder of the WFL has named Ray Braun as its first assistant coach.

The Kansas City Chiefs released its first official statement on the rape charge filed against running back Woody Green in Douglas County, Ore., expressing hope he will be exonerated.

BOXING

Former world light heavyweight champion Bob Foster, a Albuquerque, N.M., deputy sheriff, was one of 31 recruits in the New Mexico Law Enforcement Academy's latest class.

Heaveyweight champion Muhammad Ali and former champ Jimmy Ellis will square off in an exhibition match May 31 at Louisville's Convention Center.

Erbito Salavarria of the Philippines, who won the World Boxing Association (WBA) flyweight title from Japan's Susumu Hanagata with a controversial 15-round split decision April 1, will meet Hanagata in a rematch title bout in Yokohama July 1.

TENNIS

The World Team Tennis East-West Championship, first in a series of all-star matches, will be held July 22 in the Los Angeles Sports Arena.

South Africa wants to confront Chile in the American Zone final of the Davis Cup July 12-13.

Temperamental Illie Nastase of Romania, who missed the opening of the 69th Geroan International Championships, arrived and promptly ousted his American opponent, Fred McNair, 6-2, 6-2.

Morning Briefing

A Sports Roundup

GOLF

Arnold Palmer was named captain of the Ryder Cup team by the PGA.

Gary Player will be defending his championship in the Danny Thomas Classic, but readily acknowledges it isn't foremost in his mind.

OTHER SPORTS

The Spirits of St. Louis announced that Bob MacKinnon resigned as coach of the ABA team for "personal reasons."

Iowa State wrestling coach Harold Nichols announced the signing of six more high school athletes to national letters of intent.

China's readmission to the Olympic movement may be postponed until early next year, but will come in time for Chinese athletes to compete in the 1976 games.

Jack Evans, the Central Hockey League's 1974-75 coach of the year and a highly successful minor league coach, was appointed head coach of the California Seals of the NHL.

Brazilian soccer superstar Pele is reportedly set to sign a $7 million contract package with the New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League.

The University of Portland accepted an invitation to join the West Coach Athletic Conference at the beginning of the 1976-77 academic year.

Red Sox Shut Out Blue, A's

By United Press International

Southpaw Bill Lee fired a two-hitter and was strongly supported with solo homers by Jim Rice, Tony Conigliaro and Juan Beniquez Tuesday night to blank the Oakland A's and Vida Blue, 7-0.

Lee had faced just 25 batters through the first eight innings, yielding only a double in the fifth to Sal Bando. In the ninth, he gave up a leadoff single to Angel Mangual and walked Bill North but registered his only strikeout of the game against Matt Alexander to end the game. Lee needed only 78 pitches.

In other American League games, New York shut out Kansas City 6-0, Milwaukee nipped Texas 7-6 in 10 innings, Detroit defeated Minnesota 5-3 and Baltimore at Chicago was rained out.

Pat Dobson tossed a six-hitter and Roy White went 4-for-4 to lead the Yankees over Kansas City. It was Dobson's first victory since April 26. He struck out only one but walked just two and did not allow a runner to reach third in posting his third triumph against five losses.

George Scott drove home four runs and scored the decisive tally on pinch hitter Mike Hegan's grounder to second baseman Toby Harrah to give the Brewers a victory over Texas.

A two-run triple by Dan Meyer and a two-run run double by Bill Freehan keyed a five-run sixth inning giving Detroit a win over Minnesota. Southpaw Mickey Lolich went the distance for Detroit to earn his fourth win.

In the National League Atlanta defeated Montreal, 9-4, New York topped Cincinnati, 6-2, Houston edge Philadelphia, 4-2, San Diego beat St. Louis, 5-2 and Chicago nipped Los Angeles, 2-1.

Schmidt Leads Val's To Win

Al Schmidt hit two home runs, including a grand slam an a double for eight RBI Tuesday night at Ballard Field to lead Valentino's to a 9-1 win over Walker Tire in men's AAA fast-pitch softball.

In the first game Pat MeHuron hit a two-out single to score Ron Melichar with the winning run as Dick Flynn Buick edged Dean Brothers, 5-4.

White's Round Still Top

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Jim White's eight-under par score Monday in U.S. Open qualifying was matched, but not topped, by only two golfers elsewhere in the nation during local qualifying for the 75th Open to be played June 19-22 at the Medinah Country Club near Chicago.

A pair of amateurs, Stan Lee of Heber Springs, Ark., and Dave Nevatt of Merced, Calif., an Arizona State student, each were the same number of strokes as White better than par.

Lee is one of the top amateurs in Arkansas and he achieved his score on identical rounds of 68 over the par 72 Hot Springs Country Club.

Nevatt fired rounds of 69 and 65 for a 134 at the par 71 Pinehurst Country Club in Denver. Fred Wampler, pro at the Denver Country Club, was seven under in the same competition.

Other low scores across the country included five under by tour pro Tom Nieporte, shooting at East Norwich, N.Y., and Russell Fraser of Camarillo, Calif., competing at Temecula, Calif.

Four-under-par scores went to Rex Baxter, a former U.S. junior champion and pro tourist, also at East Norwish, and Phil Hancock, University of Florida golfer at Tampa, Fla.

Two Big Eight golfers qualified at Oklahoma City. They were Mark Witt of Oklahoma, who was second in last week's conference meet, and Kirk Goss of Oklahoma State, who was fifth. They had scores of 147 and 148, respectively, at the Oklahoma City Golf and Country Club Course.

The top scores at the Indian Hills Golf Course in Kansas City, where the June 2 sectional qualifying for this area will be played, the top scores were 139s by pros Charles Lewis and Stan Thirsk, both of Prairie Village, Kan. Par there is 70.

One of the qualifiers was a name famous in baseball, not golf. He is Ralph Terry, former New York Yankee pitcher, who posted a pair of 73s at East Norwich, N.Y. Long-time tour favorite Doug Sanders got in with a three-over 147 at Houston, Tex.

Weather was ideal at most spots, but the field at Boise, Idaho, had to play in snow flurries and the field of 116 at Victorville, Calif., battled 60-mile-an-hour desert winds.

Lessor Set At Hastings

Hastings (AP) — Dr. Lynn Farrell, Hastings College athletic director and basketball coach, said Tuesday Denis Lessor of Auburn has decided to enroll at Hastings next fall.

Lessor, a 6-3 guard-forward and one of southeast Nebraska's top prep cagers last season.

Obermeier Set At Cozad Meet

Cozad (AP) — Sandra Obermeier, one of Nebraska's premiere performers in last week's state high school girls track and field finals, will be among the top contenders at the Midstates Federation Championships in Cozad Monday.

Obermeier was a triple winner in Class B at North Platte and gained two gold medals in the all-class comparisons.

Her 5-4 high jump and 19-2½ long jump established new state records.

She also won the 100 and sparked her Aurora team into the runnerup position behind Omaha Cathedral, 39-38.

Olympics' Site Doubtful As Group Meets

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — The International Olympic Committee opened its 76th session Tuesday with doubts growing over Montreal's ability to stage next year's Summer Games and Mexico City offering to take them over.

Roger Rousseau, Commissioner General of the Montreal Games, was expected here later and is due to report to the IOC Wednesday on the troubled situation in the Canadian city.

Strikes have held up work on the Olympic stadium and athletes' village for two weeks. The strikers went back to work Tuesday at the main east-end Olympic construction site, but top IOC officials were deeply worried.

Montreal was due to open the Games July 17 next year, and time is running short. The stadium and village are less than half finished.

An IOC source said Mexico City had made its offer privately to Lord Killanin, President of the IOC, as well as announcing it publicly.

But no decision is likely to be made here this week. The Canadians are insisting that all will be well in Montreal. The IOC is under contract to the Canadian city and cannot make any move until Montreal officially withdraws.

"We are in the hands of Montreal," Killanin said. "We can do nothing until we hear from the Canadian delegation, which has not yet arrived."

Mexico City, with all its installations intact from the 1968 Olympics except the athletes' village, has taken over this year's Pan American Games at short notice and is building a village for 3,000 athletes.

Mexican sources say that if they are given the word in time, Mexican officials could continue building and expand the village to Olympic dimensions in time for next year.

Meanwhile the IOC temporarily forgot its worries over Montreal and paid tribute to two of the great men in Olympic history.

In the morning, members went to the grave of Baron Pierre De Coubertin, founder of the modern Olympics, and watched Killanin lay a wreath.

De Coubertin is buried a few hundred yards from the Chateau De Vidy, headquarters of the Olympic movement.

At the formal opening of the session members stood in silence in memory of Avery Brundage, president from 1952 to 1972, who died two weeks ago.

The session opened amid speculation among members as to how Brundage would have dealt with the worsening situation in Montreal. Most of them say he would have taken a stronger and less patient line than Killanin, who is treating the affair quietly and diplomatically but is having intensive talks with aides behind the scenes.

At the opening of the session, Killanin paid eloquent tribute to Brundage.

"He never wavered from his deep conviction that the Olympic movement could be the greatest social force in the world," Killanin said. "He continually endeavored to keep sports above political intrigues.

"He was the greatest disciple in a materialistic world for the promotion of amateur sport, free from personal financial gain or commercial benefit.

"These principles must continue, but it is natural that some of the methods of implementation may change, in an evolving world.

"Perhaps by his idealism he may have appeared at times aloof, and out of touch. But I can assure you that beneath the tough veneer was a human man who both in his athletic prowess and intellectual attainments, especially in regard to art, was a great example to all."

Dispute Mars Hearing; Racing Dates Decided

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Omaha — In past years, the poor quality of the Lincoln race track dominated discussions at the date-setting meeting of the Nebraska State Racing Commission.

At Tuesday's special date-setting Commission meeting at Ak-Sar-Ben nothing really changed — there still were complaints about the Lincoln races. But this time, however, the complaints were over who would be able to race at the new Lincoln facility.

While the arguments were sounded, the Commission basically approved the same racing schedule as it did for this year. The only exception was that Lincoln will hold 15 days of its meet at Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha (July 20-Aug. 7) and 10 to Columbus (Aug. 10-21).

That was necessitated, since the construction of Lincoln's new grandstand will not permit racing at the State Fairgrounds next year. Racing will return to the State Fairgrounds in 1977.

State Fairgrounds general manager Henry Brandt analyzed the situation the best, perhaps, when he said:

"We wanted to help all the people that helped us through the years," he said. "I'm dumbfounded. I just can't understand it. The people whom we've helped the most are now giving us the most trouble."

Red Lee, veteran Nebraska horseman who serves as vice president of the local division of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association was the main spokesman for the horsemen.

"The little man has been waiting for 20 years for the Lincoln meet to start since he can't get into Ak-Sar-Ben (which has stricter horse screening rules than the other Nebraska tracks)," Lee said. "Now when the new plant is being done, the little man won't be able to get into Ak-Sar-Ben and he won't be able to get into Lincoln.

Commission chairman Harry Farnham countered that it would be a financial disaster in 1976 to run two entirely different meets at Ak-Sar-Ben, with differing purse schedules, horse eligibility requirements and other details. Lee said "it's a financial disaster for people who've raced in Nebraska for years not to get to run their horses."

All of which seemed to agitate Ak-Sar-Ben executive director and general manager Dick Becker. He noted "We'll be glad to withdraw our offer to help Lincoln and then everyone will be happy. Here we're trying to help and everyone seems to be mad at us."

Becker explained that Ak-Sar-Ben was taking 15 of Lincoln's dates as a goodwill gesture and not because the Omaha track really wanted 15 additional days.

"As long as I'm running Ak-Sar-Ben, we're going to try to improve the caliber of racing here. We can't gear our screening rules on what Columbus and Atokad (traditionally which have the lowest purses in the state) do," he said.

"We've got close to 900 of our 1,200 horses that are either owned by Nebraskans or trained by them or are Nebraska-breds. We're not shutting out the people of this state," Becker said. "But some of them can't qualify under our screening rules."

Becker said he was somewhat worried that the last two weeks of the regular Ak-Sar-Ben meeting next year will suffer as many patrons will not flock to the track since there will be three more weeks of racing left.

"We're going to gear the Lincoln program to the handle," Becker said. "It's a hard thing to guess, but I'd say if we average $1,100,000 a day, then I'd guess the Lincoln Derby would be a $75,000 race."

The Commission also heard from Mrs. Faye Gomez, 2131 S. 61st, who voiced concern about the additional 15 days of racing at Ak-Sar-Ben. She said neighborhood residents were concerned for the safety of their children with the additional traffic.

A 10-day quarter horse meet was approved for this summer at Broken Bow. No discussion was held on 1976 dates for quarter horse racing.

The meet, sponsored by the Nebraska Quarter Horse Association, is set to run Aug. 21-22-23, 28-29-30 and Sept. 1, 4, 5 and 6. The group has asked for night dates.

Warriors Rally Again For Victory

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Remarkable Rick Barry admitted he was tired at the end, but he wasn't too tired to sink two free throws with 23 seconds remaining, giving the Golden State Warriors a scintillating 92-91 victory over the Washington Bullets Tuesday night and a 2-0 lead in their National Basketball Association championship series.

"I didnt' seem to have much energy after the game," confessed Barry, the game's high scorer with 36 points. "I'm just glad it didn't go overtime."

Before Barry's winning foul shots, he felt he would have been the goat if the Bullets had won.

He admitted committing a foolish foul against Mike Riordan with 1:01 left, enabling the Bullets' forward to complete a three-point play that pushed Washington in front 91-90.

"If I didn't foul him, the worst we would have been was tied," reflected Barry, the Warriors' captain. "After the foul, I said, 'Oh no, not again!' "

He was referring to the Western Conference final series when he was the goat in a game against Chicago, firing an unnecessary shot in the closing seconds, and the Bulls then getting the ball and scoring a field goal just before the final buzzer to win the game.

Despite the Warriors' commanding lead in the series now, Barry still was wary. "It's far from over," he said.

Nevertheless, the Warriors' pulse-pounding triumph, coupled with their 101-95 victory in the opening game at Landover, Md. last Sunday, put them in a solid and unexpected position.

Game 3 in the nationally televised series will be in front of the Warriors' home fans Friday night, and a victory then would put them ahead 3-0 going back to the Bullets' court for Game 4 Sunday.

After Barry's closing free throws, the Bullets had a chance to win, but missed a couple of shots and the Warriors' George Johnson grabbed the rebound at the buzzer and raced off the court with the ball.

"I was never so happy to see George Johnson grab a rebound in my life," said Barry.

Barry poured in 23 points in the first half but the Warriors trailed 52-46 after being behind 46-33 at one time.

They didn't begin their comeback until early in the third quarter, when they trailed 63-52. Then they outscored the befuddled Bullets 17-5 and finally went ahead for the first time in the game 69-68 with 1:47 to go in the third quarter.

At that point, Charlie Johnson capped a six-point spree. After a free throw by Washington's Wes Unseld, baskets by Keith Wilkes and Bill Bridges hiked the Warriors' lead to 73-69.

Golden State built its advantage to 88-80 late in the fourth period, but the Bullets battled back and finally took the lead 91-90 on a three-point play by Mike Riordan with 1:01 to go.

After both teams missed field goal attempts, Barry took a long pass from George Johnson and was ahead of the field when he was pushed hard from behind by Riordan. He then hit the two winning free throws.

Washington then worked the ball around, but three shots in the final seconds all failed and the happy Warriors raced off the court.

Phil Chenier paced the Bullets with 30 points, Riordan finished with 21 and Elvin Hayes scored 15.

Keith Wilkes chipped in with 14 points for the Warriors, 12 of them in the second half, and Charlie Johnson scored 13.

After the Warriors had forged into their 73-69 lead late in the third period, field goals by Riordan and Chenier pulled the Bullets even at the end of the quarter. Washington then went ahead 78-73 at the outset of the final period on a three-point play by Chenier and a jump shot by Kevin Porter.

Then it was the Warriors' turn to spurt again. They reeled off nine consecutive points, six by Wilkes and three by Barry, and were on top 82-78. Riordan broke the string with a field goal, but the Warriors ran off six consecutive points on baskets by Wilkes, Barry and Phil Smith and it was 88-80.

Baskets by Wes Unseld and Chenier closed the gap to 88-84, and after a basket by Charlie Johnson, Unseld sank two free throws and Chenier connected on a jumper, making it 90-88 before Riordan's three-point play.

Sabres Win In Overtime

BUFFALO (AP) — Rene Robert scored at 18:29 of the overtime, giving the Buffalo Sabres a 5-4 triumph over the Philadelphia Flyers in Game 3 of the National Hockey League's championship series.

The victory cut the Flyers' lead to 2-1 in the best-of-seven series for the Stanley Cup with Game 4 to be played here Thursday night.

Robert, taking a lead pass from Gil Perreault, fired from the right face-off circle to beat Bernie Parent and give Buffalo its first victory in the best-of-seven finals after Philadelphia won the first two games at home.

The game was played under extremely humid conditions, with temperatures reaching about 90 degrees and five times in the third period and seven in the overtime the play had to be stopped so the fog could be cleared.

The victory was the first for Buffalo over Philadelphia in more than two years, a stretch of 11 games, and marked the first time the Sabres had ever beaten Parent. The fourth game will be played here Thursday night.

Veteran goalie Roger Crozier, coming into the game in the second period after starter Gerry Desjardins had allowed Philadelphia three goals on only six shots, limited Philadelphia to just one goal in 56 minutes and 29 seconds.

The Sabres, virtually fighting for survival, three times fought from behind, once from a 2-0 deficit. Rookie defenseman Bill Hajt created the final deadlock at 9:56 of the third period with his first career playoff goal.

For the first period and a half, Buffalo, skating with the heated fury of youth despite the wilting temperatures, unleashed its attack that had been missing for the first two games.

Gary Dornhoffer opened the scoring with the game only 49 seconds old as he drove home a rebound and two and a half minutes later, Don Saleski caught goalie Gerry Desjardins looking on a 70-foot shot.

The Sabres, after failing to capitalize on a two-man advantage that lasted 1:20, electrified the crowd of 15,863 by scoring twice in a span of 17 seconds, setting a club playoff record.

Rookie Danny Gare got the first goal at 11:46 when Philadelphia goaltender Bernie Parent was screened and Richard Martin got the equalizer on a weak shot.

Rick MacLeish, converting a pass from Bill Barber, then gave the Flyers a 3-2 lead with less than six minutes remaining in the opening period and Desjardins was lifted at the end of the session for balding veteran Roger Crozier.

Don Luce gave Buffalo another tie with only 29 seconds gone in the second period before Reg Leach beat Crozier at 14:30 for a 4-3 Philadelphia lead. Crozier had stopped three consecutive shots before Leach lifted his own rebound over the sprawled goalie.

East Nips Lincoln High, 4-2

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

Lincoln High's baseball domination over Lincoln East was finally snapped, and the Spartans couldn't have chosen a more opportune time as Rudy Stoehr's squad eliminated the Links, 4-2, in District A-1 play at Sherman Field Tuesday afternoon.

The victory sends East into Wednesday's 4:30 p.m. district finals against Southeast, winner over Omaha Westside, 3-2, in an earlier Tuesday game.

The Links had held a three-game win skein over East entering the semifinal game in the Lincoln district, despite the Spartans owning a share of the city crown with Northeast.

But Stoehr noted that each of the other three games could have gone either way with the right circumstances, and was quick to point out Tuesday's encounter was no exception.

The Spartans never trailed, but after holding a 2-1 edge, Link right fielder Ralph Kuwamoto lined his second single, scoring Jim Glenn for Kuwamoto's second RBI in the bottom of the fourth inning.

In the top of the fifth, after knocking Lincoln High's starting pitcher Chuck Metzger out of the game, Pat Scott scored on Brian Hensel's single with two out.

East tallied again in the sixth when winning pitcher John Bishop singled and later scored on Wade Casini's single.

Leading 4-2 in the bottom of the seventh and last inning, Bishop got himself in trouble after an error put Gary Hart on first, and Bishop walked leadoff hitter Al Fen after reacing a full count.

With men on first and second, Greg Heckman hit a line shot to the center fielder Greg Smith to give Bishop a little breathing room, but a lone strike and four straight balls sent Kent Worster to first, advanced Fen to second and Hart to third with only one out.

Stoehr went with senior Mike Breeden on the mound relieving Bishop.

Breeden let Brad Ewerth get ahead of him at three balls and a strike, but Ewerth took the next pitch for a strike and went down swinging on the following toss.

With two out and the bases still loaded, the Links still had a chance with second baseman Jim Glenn at the plate.

With the count at two and one, Glenn tagged a Breeden fastball to the left field fence but it drifted foul.

After another foul, Glenn caught the final pitch and sent it high to left field in a tricky wind. East leftfielder Ed Mulligan appeared to misjudge it a bit and then took off for the foul line make the game-ending catch.

"Those are the kind of circumstances I'm talking about," Stoehr said after the game. "That ball (from Glenn) could have been fair. We've had some things happen in those other three games just like that."

Stoehr credited his pitching staff for good, steady work.

"Bishop pitched a real good ball game and Breeden came in and did a fine job under pressure," Stoehr said. "They're a tough ball club, but os is Southeast. We're expecting a real scrap from Southeast in the finals.

East holds a 2-0 advantage over Southeast this season.

Royals Sweep Doubleheader

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Behind twin five-hitters, the Omaha Royals swept an American Association double-header from the eastern division-leading Evansville Tripletts Tuesday night.

In the first game, George Throop benefited from a four-run outburst in the fourth inning and shut-out the Tripletts, 4-0.

Frank Ortenzio led off the fourth with a 420 foot home run to center field against losing pitcher Fred Holdsworth. It was his fourth of the year.

Omaha pushed across three more on a walk, a triple by Ruppert Jones, a double by Steve Staggs and a second triple by U. L. Washington.

Gary Martz singled home the winning run in the second contest in the seventh inning.

Omaha pitcher Mark Littell was in frequent trouble in the second game and spotted the Tripletts a 2-0 lead in the second inning.

LSE Upsets Westside In Wild Finale, 3-2

Lincoln Southeast's Mark Harrison bunted with bases loaded, scoring Bruce Baker to give the Knights a 3-2 win over Omaha Westside in the Class A-1 district semifinal at Sherman Field Tuesday.

Harrison, the LSE starting pitcher who went the distance for the win, bunted to the Westside pitcher Bob Newton who threw the ball wide allowing Baker to score the winning run.

The Warriors, who defeated Lincoln Northeast 10-0 last Friday in the tournament, jumped to a 1-0 lead in the first inning and added another run in the sixth to tie the Knights on a run-scoring triple by Marle Mancuso.

Mancuso, who collected three doubles and a two run single against LNE Friday, also doubled Tuesday.

With the score tied 2-2 in the bottom of the seventh LSE's Greg Smith doubled with one out but advanced no further as the tight Warrior infield closed the door, sending the game into extra innings.

Westside, now 11-5, struck Harrison for two hits in the top of the eighth, but a spectacular catch by rightfielder Stan Haas who then pegged the ball to catcher Smith to catch the runner at the plate to end the inning.

Then in the bottom of the ninth Baker reached first on an error followed by Rex Keetle.

Keetle slammed the ball deep to the left field fence apparently scoring Baker. But the hit was ruled a ground rule double.

The next batter, Smith, drew an intentional walk filling the bases and bringing up Harrison, who bunted.

"Our guys get up for the tournaments," said LSE coach Charly Gordon, "I guess we're just a tourney team," he said of the Knights, now 69.

"Harrison pitched a fine game and mixed his pitches well," Gordon said of the righthander who holds a 0.50 earned run average.

"This team reminds me a lot of our 1964 team which won the state tournament that year. We didn't have a good record then either but we played well in the tourney's and that's when it counts," said Gordon.

Lincoln Southeast, which has dropped two games to Lincoln East in regular season play this year will face off at 4:30 p.m. at Sherman Field Wednesday for the district final.

Pius X Qualifies For State

Wahoo — Lincoln Pius X qualified for next week's Nebraska State Class B Baseball Tournament at the NU diamond here Tuesday afternoon in the Class B-1 district by blanking Logan-View, 15-0, on a no-hitter and then Centennial, 4-0

The Thunderbolts' Mitch Ohnoutka and Bob Navratil combined for the no-hitter as their teammates scored all 15 runs in the second inning.

Pius X, now 8-7, sent 20 batters to the plate in that second inning and used 10 hits, including triples by Tom Doggett, Pat Fuller and Kent Krause.

In the Centennial game Jerry Kobza blanked Centennial on two hits, while his teammates scored three runs in the first inning.

The 'Bolts scored two runs on a suicide bunt in that inning with the bases loaded and one out.

Pius X finished second in last year's tournament to Omaha Gross, which is again favored this year.

East's Relay Team Hopes To Fill Medal Gap

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

The cupboards are bare and the athletes are hungry.

Lincoln East never has won a gold medal in boys track and the Spartans' unbeaten, state-leading mile relay team is primed to change that this weekend.

Missing track's top individual honor for seven consecutive springs gives East's mile relay crew extra inspiration in the Boys State High School Track and Field Championships Friday and Saturday at Omaha Burke.

According to East head coach Bob Eyth, members of the Spartan mile relay are seeing gold signs these days.

"They've been seeing them all season," he says. "They've been talking gold since last March and competed all season with that goal in the back of their minds."

Senior Greg Wood is the Spartans' leadoff man. Senior sprint standout Doug Caulkins, who also qualified for this weekend's state meet in the 100 and 220, runs the second leg.

A pair of juniors carry the windup hopes. Jim Horner, who also qualified in the 880, runs third. Gale Hamann, who also qualified in the 220, is the Spartans' anchorman.

The quartet achieved a 3:24.0 clocking in district qualifying competition last weekend to overtake Omaha Westside (3:24.6) for the state mile relay lead.

Eyth is hopeful that Wood will cut his time considerably. He ran a :52.0 split at district. Caulkins followed with a :50.5. Horner contributed :50.8 and Hamann sizzled the anchor in :49.8.

"It'll be a real feather in their cap if they all click at the same time this weekend," says Eyth. "The mile relay has to be conditioning. But a lot is mental, too. They know what's at stake. They're anxious to meet the challenge."

Northeast — Trans-Nebraska and Eastern I-80 Conference champion and district titlist — leads Lincoln state meet qualifiers with 14.

First-year Rocket coach Clayton Luther hopes his team is involved in a projected balanced battle for second place in the Class A race.

"Realistically," concedes Luther, "Omaha Westside should walk away with the team championship. Of course, spirit-wise, you always like to think and compete with the idea you have an outside chance to win it."

Luther sees Northeast in battle with five other contenders for runnerup honors — North Platte, Grand Island, Omaha Benson, Creighton Prep and Bellevue.

Capital City athletes pose solid threats for possible gold medals in a number of other events.

They include East's Caulkins (100), Lincoln High's Mike Washington (shot put) and John Beaver (discus), Northeast's Scott Resz (mile), Southeast's Perry Krogmeier (220), Rich Brandfas and Scott Tallman (both high hurdles), the Knights' 880 relay team and Pius X's Larry Gross (220) and the Thunderbolts' 880 relay team.

New Mile Techniques

Marty Liquori, who placed second to Filbert Bayi last Saturday in the fastest 1-2 finish in the history of the mile run, thinks Bayi has changed the way the mile will be run in the future.

Liquori, who hasn't beaten Bayi in three tries, ran a career best 3:52.2 for the best second place finish of all time; yet finished 1.2 seconds behind the Tanzanian in a race last Saturday in Kingston, Jamaica. Bayi's time was one-tenth of a second faster than Jim Ryun's previous world record.

Liquori says he altered his training program several weeks ago in getting ready for Bayi. He explained he replaced the traditional speed work with a concentration on oxygen debt, form and running with shoret recoveries, to simulate Bayi's fast paces.

"It used to be that when you finished a mile with a big kick, you'd throw up and were exhausted," Liquori told New York Times writer Neil Amdur. He was referring to the familiar mile pattern of paced 60-second quartermiles and the final spurt.

"Now, you gear yourself to run a whole race," Liquori said. "It seems easier because Bayi is out there running, but you don't know if it's affecting Bayi."

Bayi led from start to finish and responded to what will be remembered as the most competitive mile ever. When Ryun set records of 3:51.3 and 3:51.1, his closets threats were at least 35 yards behind.

Villanova runner Eamonn Coghlan once closed to within five yards of Bayi with 280 yards left, but Bayi seemed to be gliding as he picked up the pace though not sprinting or hicking hard.

Bayi has tried some paces that he couldn't hold, such as a 52.8 quarter and 1:51.7 half. Now he seems to have found a "comfort zone" and may be ready to zero in on a 3:45 mile.

UCLA Hits Jackpot—Again

More collegiate signings: Oklahom's second basketballer signed is Cary Carrabine, a 6-4½ forward-guard from Merrillville, Ind. He had a 19.7 scoring average on a 49 per cent field goal mark. He also averaged nine rebounds and five assists. He's an excellent student with a 3.8 grade-point average out of a possible 4.0.

Oklahoma State has inked Red Nuckolls of Wichita, Kan., who is one of the state's premier golfers. He had offers from Wake Forest and Louisiana State.

Colorado has signed two Ohio state champion wrestlers — Chuck Davis, 118, who had a 63-10 record the last two years; and Gary Milkovich, 177, with a 52-2-2 mark in his junior and senior seasons during which he won two Ohio titles.

Rob Hayner, all-stater from Omaha Burke, a 6-1½ guard, will attend South Dakota State. He averaged 19 points in leading Burke to the Class A semifinals.

Here are signees of Gene Bartow at UCLA: David Greenwood, Roy Hamilton and Brad Holland, all from the Los Angeles area, and Chris Lippert, city player-of-the-year from Cleveland, O. Greenwood is 6-10 and led his hig school, Verbum Dei, to a 58-3 record the last two years, including 39 victories in a row. Holland, 6-2, aveaged 34.5 points a game and is a 3.8 scholar.

That's just what the rest of the college basketball world didn't need to know. Maybe the dynasty isn't ended.

Catching Up On Sports

Brian Banks, Nebraska cage recruit from Hammond, has been picked to play in an all-star game in Gary, Ind., June 14. Val Martin, another recruit from South Bend, Ind., is a member of the Indiana All-Star team which will tour Russia this summer.

Creighton, Rutgers and Auburn will play in the Louisville Holiday Classic in 1977 with Denny Crum's Cardinals as the host team.

Streakers: Some schools just keep on winning in conference events, like Kansas, nine in a row in Big eight track ... Southern California has won its sixth straight Pacific-8 baseball crown ... Tennessee has won 12 consecutive Southeastern Conference track titles and Michigan now has taken eight Big Ten tennis championships ... One streak was halted last weekend when Missouri ended Oklahoma's nine-year domination of Big Eight tennis.

Broken Heel Leaves Driver Questionable

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Time will heal Steve Krisiloff's injury, but the young driver from Parsippany, N.J. wondered Tuesday if his broken left heel would mend sufficiently to handle a 1,000 horsepower Eagle-Offy in Sunday's 59th running of the Indianapolis 500 Mile Auto Clasic.

Krisiloff was hurt during the first weekend of qualifying, when Leader Card's No. 1 car rammed the retaining wall coming off the No. 4 turn.

"When I hit, I knew it was going to be a bad one," said the 28-year-old driver who deserted a hospital bed last weekend to qualify for his fifth Indy run in a back-up car.

Winning an argument with his doctors, however, doesn't automatically qualify the curly-haired wheelman for a shot at the $250,000 first place purse.

The final decision will be made Thursday, after carburetion shakedowns. Krisiloff has a new cast designed to help him handle the clutch with his injured foot. He used a hand clutch to qualify at 182.408 miles per hour that put him in the next-to-last row at position No. 29 in a field of 33.

Krisiloff's chief mechanic says his big concern is that a driver's infirmity could result in bad footwork that might kill the engine during a critical pit stop.

A "designated driver" has been selected if the crew feels, and Krisiloff agrees, that the injury is too painful to handle one of the fast Monsters of the Speedway on race day. Bill Simpson is familiar with the car and is geared to take over. If he does, Simpson will start from last place on the grid.

How does Krisiloff's act of courage strike veteran drivers such as former Indy champion Bobby Unser?

"That's just what it is. Courage," replied 1974's runner-up to champion Johnny Rutherford. "But that's just what the sport of auto racing is all about. A man trains for a certain event, gears all his faculties toward winning Indianapolis and then gets injured in the process. It takes guts for Krisiloff to overcome the painful memory of that injury and actually go out and qualify for the race—and make it."

Tuesday was an off-beat session for the drivers. Some played golf. Others wandered into Gasoline Alley to watch their crews strip the $100,000 machines down to the bare essentials and then lovingly put each part together until a gleaming race car once again sat on the garage floor.

Unser took a trial spin around the 2.5 mile speedway as a passenger in a pace car that will be driven Sunday by actor James Garner, who is no novice to auto racing and a man who performed some of his own driving chores in motion picture auto epics.

Would Garner like to get into the real thing here?

"Not on your life," says the handsome king of the movie roads. "When you're doing a picture, you race considerably under your ability and the speed potential of a car. I love cars, but this race is slightly out of my element."

Who's going to win the big race next Sunday?

Glancing covertly at his passenger, Bobby Unser, Garner grins: "Who do you think?

"Actually, they're all good drivers out there and we have enough outstanding ones to make it a close race. Nobody really has the race wrapped up—not A.J. Foyt, not Bobby Unser, not Johnny Rutherford. Look what happened to Foyt last year. He was the pole sitter, yet A.J. dropped out with mechanical problems. Rutherford starts from 'way back in the pack and wins"

At least Garner will be able to lead the field for the pace lap.

Red Sox Shut Out Blue, A's

By United Press International

Southpaw Bill Lee fired a two-hitter and was strongly supported with solo homers by Jim Rice, Tony Conigliaro and Juan Beniquez Tuesday night to blank the Oakland A's and Vida Blue, 7-0.

Lee had faced just 25 batters through the first eight innings, yielding only a double in the fifth to Sal Bando. In the ninth, he gave up a leadoff single to Angel Mangual and walked Bill North but registered his only strikeout of the game against Matt Alexander to end the game. Lee needed only 78 pitches.

In other American League games, New York shut out Kansas City 6-0, Milwaukee nipped Texas 7-6 in 10 innings, Detroit defeated Minnesota 5-3 and Baltimore at Chicago was rained out.

Pat Dobson tossed a six-hitter and Roy White went 4-for-4 to lead the Yankees over Kansas City. It was Dobson's first victory since April 26. He struck out only one but walked just two and did not allow a runner to reach third in posting his third triumph against five losses.

George Scott drove home four runs and scored the decisive tally on pinch hitter Mike Hegan's grounder to second baseman Toby Harrah to give the Brewers a victory over Texas.

A two-run triple by Dan Meyer and a two-run run double by Bill Freehan keyed a five-run sixth inning giving Detroit a win over Minnesota. Southpaw Mickey Lolich went the distance for Detroit to earn his fourth win.

In the National League Atlanta defeated Montreal, 9-4, New York topped Cincinnati, 6-2, Houston edge Philadelphia, 4-2, San Diego beat St. Louis, 5-2 and Chicago nipped Los Angeles, 2-1.

White's Round Still Top

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Jim White's eight-under par score Monday in U.S. Open qualifying was matched, but not topped, by only two golfers elsewhere in the nation during local qualifying for the 75th Open to be played June 19-22 at the Medinah Country Club near Chicago.

A pair of amateurs, Stan Lee of Heber Springs, Ark., and Dave Nevatt of Merced, Calif., an Arizona State student, each were the same number of strokes as White better than par.

Lee is one of the top amateurs in Arkansas and he achieved his score on identical rounds of 68 over the par 72 Hot Springs Country Club.

Nevatt fired rounds of 69 and 65 for a 134 at the par 71 Pinehurst Country Club in Denver. Fred Wampler, pro at the Denver Country Club, was seven under in the same competition.

Other low scores across the country included five under by tour pro Tom Nieporte, shooting at East Norwich, N.Y., and Russell Fraser of Camarillo, Calif., competing at Temecula, Calif.

Four-under-par scores went to Rex Baxter, a former U.S. junior champion and pro tourist, also at East Norwish, and Phil Hancock, University of Florida golfer at Tampa, Fla.

Two Big Eight golfers qualified at Oklahoma City. They were Mark Witt of Oklahoma, who was second in last week's conference meet, and Kirk Goss of Oklahoma State, who was fifth. They had scores of 147 and 148, respectively, at the Oklahoma City Golf and Country Club Course.

The top scores at the Indian Hills Golf Course in Kansas City, where the June 2 sectional qualifying for this area will be played, the top scores were 139s by pros Charles Lewis and Stan Thirsk, both of Prairie Village, Kan. Par there is 70.

One of the qualifiers was a name famous in baseball, not golf. He is Ralph Terry, former New York Yankee pitcher, who posted a pair of 73s at East Norwich, N.Y. Long-time tour favorite Doug Sanders got in with a three-over 147 at Houston, Tex.

Weather was ideal at most spots, but the field at Boise, Idaho, had to play in snow flurries and the field of 116 at Victorville, Calif., battled 60-mile-an-hour desert winds.

Lessor Set At Hastings

Hastings (AP) — Dr. Lynn Farrell, Hastings College athletic director and basketball coach, said Tuesday Denis Lessor of Auburn has decided to enroll at Hastings next fall.

Lessor, a 6-3 guard-forward and one of southeast Nebraska's top prep cagers last season.

Obermeier Set At Cozad Meet

Cozad (AP) — Sandra Obermeier, one of Nebraska's premiere performers in last week's state high school girls track and field finals, will be among the top contenders at the Midstates Federation Championships in Cozad Monday.

Obermeier was a triple winner in Class B at North Platte and gained two gold medals in the all-class comparisons.

Her 5-4 high jump and 19-2½ long jump established new state records.

She also won the 100 and sparked her Aurora team into the runnerup position behind Omaha Cathedral, 39-38.

Malcolm Voters Nix Debt Limit

Lincoln Star Special

Malcolm — In a special election here Tuesday, Malcolm residents turned down the adoption of an ordinance to limit the amount of bonded indebtedness to which Malcolm may be obligated. Unofficial results showed 52 voted yes, 60 no.

UNL Stipends Made Available

Scholarships in the art division are available to Nebraska high school students wishing to attend the University of Nebraska-Lincoln All-State fine arts program this summer.

Applicants are required to submit a portfolio by June 1.

Is It Winter Or Summer In Spring?

Although the calendar says the current season is spring, summertime temperatures reigned Tuesday in eastern Nebraska while winter-like weather returned to the west and north.

Norfolk's 92 degrees was the state's hottest reading of the day, compared to Chadron's high of 44. Coldest spot in the state Tuesday was 39 at Sidney. Temperatures throughout the west and north rose only into the 40s and low 50s Tuesday.

These unseasonably cold readings were the result of a late spring storm bringing snow to the northern and central Rockies.

Casper, Wyo., reported nine inches of snow Tuesday, with seven inches falling in a six-hour period. At midday, the Utah Highway Patrol reported heavy snow and strong winds in several southwestern Utah counties.

Two-foot deep snowdrifts temporarily closed Utah Highway 21 which connects Milford, Utah, with Ely, Nev.

Movement of the cold front eastwards touched off thunderstorms in the northeast Tuesday night and put portions of central and eastern Nebraska under a tornado watch.

Lincoln's temperatures Tuesday ranged from a low of 70 to a high of 85.

Another day of contrasts is due Wednesday in the state as highs will range from the upper 40s in the northwest to the mid 80s in the southeast.

For the holiday weekend, considerable cloudiness and cool with a chance for occasional showers is forecast for Friday and Saturday in Nebraska, becoming partly cloudy and a little warmer Sunday.

Liberation Radio: Western Styles Out Of Fashion

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Young men with long hair and bell-bottom trousers and young women in miniskirts — standard sights in Saigon under the old regime — are gradually disappearing from the South Vietnamese capital's streets, Liberation radio said Tuesday.

"They apparently realized their responsibility toward society and no longer follow Western fashion styles," the radio said.

Olympics' Site Doubtful As Group Meets

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — The International Olympic Committee opened its 76th session Tuesday with doubts growing over Montreal's ability to stage next year's Summer Games and Mexico City offering to take them over.

Roger Rousseau, Commissioner General of the Montreal Games, was expected here later and is due to report to the IOC Wednesday on the troubled situation in the Canadian city.

Strikes have held up work on the Olympic stadium and athletes' village for two weeks. The strikers went back to work Tuesday at the main east-end Olympic construction site, but top IOC officials were deeply worried.

Montreal was due to open the Games July 17 next year, and time is running short. The stadium and village are less than half finished.

An IOC source said Mexico City had made its offer privately to Lord Killanin, President of the IOC, as well as announcing it publicly.

But no decision is likely to be made here this week. The Canadians are insisting that all will be well in Montreal. The IOC is under contract to the Canadian city and cannot make any move until Montreal officially withdraws.

"We are in the hands of Montreal," Killanin said. "We can do nothing until we hear from the Canadian delegation, which has not yet arrived."

Mexico City, with all its installations intact from the 1968 Olympics except the athletes' village, has taken over this year's Pan American Games at short notice and is building a village for 3,000 athletes.

Mexican sources say that if they are given the word in time, Mexican officials could continue building and expand the village to Olympic dimensions in time for next year.

Meanwhile the IOC temporarily forgot its worries over Montreal and paid tribute to two of the great men in Olympic history.

In the morning, members went to the grave of Baron Pierre De Coubertin, founder of the modern Olympics, and watched Killanin lay a wreath. De Coubertin is buried a few hundred yards from the Chateau De Vidy, headquarters of the Olympic movement.

At the formal opening of the session members stood in silence in memory of Avery Brundage, president from 1952 to 1972, who died two weeks ago.

The session opened amid speculation among members as to how Brundage would have dealt with the worsening situation in Montreal. Most of them say he would have taken a stronger and less patient line than Killanin, who is treating the affair quietly and diplomatically but is having intensive talks with aides behind the scenes.

At the opening of the session, Killanin paid eloquent tribute to Brundage.

"He never wavered from his deep conviction that the Olympic movement could be the greatest social force in the world," Killanin said. "He continually endeavored to keep sports above political intrigues.

"He was the greatest disciple in a materialistic world for the promotion of amateur sport, free from personal financial gain or commercial benefit.

"These principles must continue, but it is natural that some of the methods of implementation may change, in an evolving world.

"Perhaps by his idealism he may have appeared at times aloof, and out of touch. But I can assure you that beneath the tough veneer was a human man who both in his athletic prowess and intellectual attainments, especially in regard to art, was a great example to all."

CU Gets Knapple

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — University of Colorado football Coach Bill Mallory said Tuesday that former Colorado high school star Jeff Knapple is withdrawing from UCLA to transfer to CU.

Knapple, who gained national honors at Boulder's Fairview Prep School in 1973, was recruited by more than 120 universities before enrolling at UCLA. He signed a Big Eight letter-of-intent with Nebraska.

But Mallory said Knapple contacted the Colorado staff during the spring and said he wanted to transfer to his home town.

Knapple will sit out the 1975 season but will have three years' eligibility remaining with the Buffaloes

New Mile Techniques

Marty Liquori, who placed second to Filbert Bayi last Saturday in the fastest 1-2 finish in the history of the mile run, thinks Bayi has changed the way the mile will be run in the future.

Liquori, who hasn't beaten Bayi in three tries, ran a career best 3:52.2 for the best second place finish of all time; yet finished 1.2 seconds behind the Tanzanian in a race last Saturday in Kingston, Jamaica. Bayi's time was one-tenth of a second faster than Jim Ryun's previous world record.

Liquori says he altered his training program several weeks ago in getting ready for Bayi. He explained he replaced the traditional speed work with a concentration on oxygen debt, form and running with shoret recoveries, to simulate Bayi's fast paces.

"It used to be that when you finished a mile with a big kick, you'd throw up and were exhausted," Liquori told New York Times writer Neil Amdur. He was referring to the familiar mile pattern of paced 60-second quartermiles and the final spurt.

"Now, you gear yourself to run a whole race," Liquori said. "It seems easier because Bayi is out there running, but you don't know if it's affecting Bayi."

Bayi led from start to finish and responded to what will be remembered as the most competitive mile ever. When Ryun set records of 3:51.3 and 3:51.1, his closets threats were at least 35 yards behind.

Villanova runner Eamonn Coghlan once closed to within five yards of Bayi with 280 yards left, but Bayi seemed to be gliding as he picked up the pace though not sprinting or hicking hard.

Bayi has tried some paces that he couldn't hold, such as a 52.8 quarter and 1:51.7 half. Now he seems to have found a "comfort zone" and may be ready to zero in on a 3:45 mile.

UCLA Hits Jackpot—Again

More collegiate signings: Oklahom's second basketballer signed is Cary Carrabine, a 6-4½ forward-guard from Merrillville, Ind. He had a 19.7 scoring average on a 49 per cent field goal mark. He also averaged nine rebounds and five assists. He's an excellent student with a 3.8 grade-point average out of a possible 4.0.

Oklahoma State has inked Red Nuckolls of Wichita, Kan., who is one of the state's premier golfers. He had offers from Wake Forest and Louisiana State.

Colorado has signed two Ohio state champion wrestlers — Chuck Davis, 118, who had a 63-10 record the last two years; and Gary Milkovich, 177, with a 52-2-2 mark in his junior and senior seasons during which he won two Ohio titles.

Rob Hayner, all-stater from Omaha Burke, a 6-1½ guard, will attend South Dakota State. He averaged 19 points in leading Burke to the Class A semifinals.

Here are signees of Gene Bartow at UCLA: David Greenwood, Roy Hamilton and Brad Holland, all from the Los Angeles area, and Chris Lippert, city player-of-the-year from Cleveland, O. Greenwood is 6-10 and led his hig school, Verbum Dei, to a 58-3 record the last two years, including 39 victories in a row. Holland, 6-2, aveaged 34.5 points a game and is a 3.8 scholar.

That's just what the rest of the college basketball world didn't need to know. Maybe the dynasty isn't ended.

Catching Up On Sports

Brian Banks, Nebraska cage recruit from Hammond, has been picked to play in an all-star game in Gary, Ind., June 14. Val Martin, another recruit from South Bend, Ind., is a member of the Indiana All-Star team which will tour Russia this summer.

Creighton, Rutgers and Auburn will play in the Louisville Holiday Classic in 1977 with Denny Crum's Cardinals as the host team.

Streakers: Some schools just keep on winning in conference events, like Kansas, nine in a row in Big eight track ... Southern California has won its sixth straight Pacific-8 baseball crown ... Tennessee has won 12 consecutive Southeastern Conference track titles and Michigan now has taken eight Big Ten tennis championships ... One streak was halted last weekend when Missouri ended Oklahoma's nine-year domination of Big Eight tennis.

Broken Heel Leaves Driver Questionable

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Time will heal Steve Krisiloff's injury, but the young driver from Parsippany, N.J. wondered Tuesday if his broken left heel would mend sufficiently to handle a 1,000 horsepower Eagle-Offy in Sunday's 59th running of the Indianapolis 500 Mile Auto Clasic.

Krisiloff was hurt during the first weekend of qualifying, when Leader Card's No. 1 car rammed the retaining wall coming off the No. 4 turn.

"When I hit, I knew it was going to be a bad one," said the 28-year-old driver who deserted a hospital bed last weekend to qualify for his fifth Indy run in a back-up car.

Winning an argument with his doctors, however, doesn't automatically qualify the curly-haired wheelman for a shot at the $250,000 first place purse.

The final decision will be made Thursday, after carburetion shakedowns. Krisiloff has a new cast designed to help him handle the clutch with his injured foot. He used a hand clutch to qualify at 182.408 miles per hour that put him in the next-to-last row at position No. 29 in a field of 33.

Krisiloff's chief mechanic says his big concern is that a driver's infirmity could result in bad footwork that might kill the engine during a critical pit stop.

A "designated driver" has been selected if the crew feels, and Krisiloff agrees, that the injury is too painful to handle one of the fast Monsters of the Speedway on race day. Bill Simpson is familiar with the car and is geared to take over. If he does, Simpson will start from last place on the grid.

How does Krisiloff's act of courage strike veteran drivers such as former Indy champion Bobby Unser?

"That's just what it is. Courage," replied 1974's runner-up to champion Johnny Rutherford. "But that's just what the sport of auto racing is all about. A man trains for a certain event, gears all his faculties toward winning Indianapolis and then gets injured in the process. It takes guts for Krisiloff to overcome the painful memory of that injury and actually go out and qualify for the race—and make it."

Tuesday was an off-beat session for the drivers. Some played golf. Others wandered into Gasoline Alley to watch their crews strip the $100,000 machines down to the bare essentials and then lovingly put each part together until a gleaming race car once again sat on the garage floor.

Unser took a trial spin around the 2.5 mile speedway as a passenger in a pace car that will be driven Sunday by actor James Garner, who is no novice to auto racing and a man who performed some of his own driving chores in motion picture auto epics.

Would Garner like to get into the real thing here?

"Not on your life," says the handsome king of the movie roads. "When you're doing a picture, you race considerably under your ability and the speed potential of a car. I love cars, but this race is slightly out of my element."

Who's going to win the big race next Sunday?

Glancing covertly at his passenger, Bobby Unser, Garner grins: "Who do you think?

"Actually, they're all good drivers out there and we have enough outstanding ones to make it a close race. Nobody really has the race wrapped up—not A.J. Foyt, not Bobby Unser, not Johnny Rutherford. Look what happened to Foyt last year. He was the pole sitter, yet A.J. dropped out with mechanical problems. Rutherford starts from 'way back in the pack and wins"

At least Garner will be able to lead the field for the pace lap.

Is It Winter Or Summer In Spring?

Although the calendar says the current season is spring, summertime temperatures reigned Tuesday in eastern Nebraska while winter-like weather returned to the west and north.

Norfolk's 92 degrees was the state's hottest reading of the day, compared to Chadron's high of 44. Coldest spot in the state Tuesday was 39 at Sidney. Temperatures throughout the west and north rose only into the 40s and low 50s Tuesday.

These unseasonably cold readings were the result of a late spring storm bringing snow to the northern and central Rockies.

Casper, Wyo., reported nine inches of snow Tuesday, with seven inches falling in a six-hour period. At midday, the Utah Highway Patrol reported heavy snow and strong winds in several southwestern Utah counties.

Two-foot deep snowdrifts temporarily closed Utah Highway 21 which connects Milford, Utah, with Ely, Nev.

Movement of the cold front eastwards touched off thunderstorms in the northeast Tuesday night and put portions of central and eastern Nebraska under a tornado watch.

Lincoln's temperatures Tuesday ranged from a low of 70 to a high of 85.

Another day of contrasts is due Wednesday in the state as highs will range from the upper 40s in the northwest to the mid 80s in the southeast.

For the holiday weekend, considerable cloudiness and cool with a chance for occasional showers is forecast for Friday and Saturday in Nebraska, becoming partly cloudy and a little warmer Sunday.

Dr. McGreer To Head Unit Of Boy Scouts

Dr. J. Thomas McGreer III was elected president of the Cornhusker Council Boy Scouts of America at the council's annual meeting Monday.

McGreer, a Lincoln General Hospital staff member will head scout troops in the 15 southeast Nebraska counties covered by the council.

Other officers elected include Ed Schwartzkopf, NU regent, as treasurer and the following division vice presidents: Robert Benton, Patricia Patitz, Allen Beermann, Ken Peterson, W. W. Swepston, Lowe Folsom and Paul Quinlan.

Malcolm Voters Nix Debt Limit

Lincoln Star Special

Malcolm — In a special election here Tuesday, Malcolm residents turned down the adoption of an ordinance to limit the amount of bonded indebtedness to which Malcolm may be obligated. Unofficial results showed 52 voted yes, 60 no.

UNL Stipends Made Available

Scholarships in the art division are available to Nebraska high school students wishing to attend the University of Nebraska-Lincoln All-State fine arts program this summer.

Applicants are required to submit a portfolio by June 1.

Liberation Radio: Western Styles Out Of Fashion

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Young men with long hair and bell-bottom trousers and young women in miniskirts — standard sights in Saigon under the old regime — are gradually disappearing from the South Vietnamese capital's streets, Liberation radio said Tuesday.

"They apparently realized their responsibility toward society and no longer follow Western fashion styles," the radio said.
